The Press Association of the University met in the old English room Monday afternoon to effect a reorganization. Officers were elected as follows: J. J. Skinner, President; C. P. Russell and W. P. Wood, Vice Presidents; and Ham Stewart, Secretary and Treasurer.

A new hat, a new tie, a new pair of shoes, a new suit—a freshman!

Rev. Daniel J. Curry has resigned as pastor of the Presbyterian church here. During his eight years work here he has probably visited more students than any other minister in the State. Mr. Curry leaves to accept a call in Virginia. Next Sunday morning he will preach his farewell sermon.

Students making periodical trips to Durham and Raleigh this fall and have been in the habit of getting their names in the paper, if they wish to keep this up, must see the local editor at once and give him a little iced encouragement or such trips will not hereafter be known to the student body at large.

The Y. M. C. A. is planning to hold a Missionary Rally in the Chapel Sunday night. The principal speaker will be Mr. E. G. Wilson, college secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for both North and South Carolina. Mr. Wilson has volunteered for work in the foreign field and will no doubt make a strong earnest talk.

Bible Study Rally.

The Young Men's Christian Association will hold a Bible Study Rally in the Chapel Sunday afternoon at 3:30. Prof. C. Alphonso Smith will make an address on the "Value of Bible Study." The association offers the following course for a fifteen minute study of the Bible each day. The Life of Christ, the Acts and Epistles, Old Testament Characters, and Personal Workers.

About a dozen students belong to a class and they meet each Sunday for a one hour's discussion. Students desiring to take one of these courses should be at the Rally Sunday afternoon and have their names enrolled. It is expected that over a hundred students will be enrolled in all of the courses, for nearly this number were enrolled last year.

Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

The Y. M. C. A. held an enthusiastic meeting for both new and old students Sunday afternoon in the Chapel. Most of the members of the faculty attended and the students nearly filled the chapel. The programme was as follows:

"Y. M. C. A. Work," by Dr. Venable.

"Foundation of Y. M. C. A.," by Dr. Thomas Hume.

"Purpose of Y. M. C. A.," by Dr. J. Wm. Jones.

"Practical not Theoretical," by Rev. N. M. Watson.

"Opportunities for Work," by Rev. W. H. Meade.

"Prominent Men in Christian Work in College in the Past," by Dr. Battle.

"The All Round Man," by Dr. Alexander.

After these short talks Mr. C. A. Bynum, the president of the Y. M. C. A. made a short stirring talk urging the men to join this the only Christian organization in the University. In short, he well said that the Y. M. C. A. is the only organized effort in the University to develop the most important phase of a student's life.

Fifty one new members were secured after this. Many of the are old students and during the next few weeks it is expected that the total number of new members will rise above the hundred mark.

The Seniors Meet.

Saturday the 20th inst. at 3:30 P. M. the Senior Class met in No. 18 Alumni Building, and fully discussed every phase of the vexed question of hazing. Several of the best men mentally and physically, declared their position in no uncertain terms and were applauded to the echo. It was the will of the class not to draw up any formidable set of resolutions to be binding on no one in particular, but simply and emphatically to express its approval of the method to be pursued, in dormitories, hotels and other places where it may be necessary, by a sufficient number of men who are thoroughly in earnest. Therefore it was unanimously: Resolved, That the Senior Class endorses the action of anyone who shall report any man, particularly in blacking or other forms of hazing.

The Societies.

The Philanthropic Society met at the regular hour on last Saturday in its Hall. Mr. Geo. D. Green of Wilson, executor of the will of the late Judge Bynum of Greensboro, presented to the Society a splendid, life size, oil painting of the father of the deceased.

The query for discussion was Resolved: "That a National Divorce Law should be Passed." The affirmative won, and Mr. Ward was reported best debator.

In the Dialectic Society the query discussed was Resolved: "That the Societies should take action against Hazing." The affirmative won. Mr. Vaughn made the best speech.

Fads About College.

The proof of the statement that college students take to fads with more readiness than their more sober brethren, is surely in evidence at this University.

There have been fads here before, but never have crazes, so various and so radical, taken such a hold on our students. We all remember the very prevalent skinned head of last year and the hockey cap that went along with it. Then as to matters of dress, were the Lemmert shoulders and the broad brimmed black hats, which while not objectionable, were still noticeable.

But this year we seem still more affected. The Panama hat, as everywhere, came, saw and conquered and for the stout pocket books, it is well. In direct contrast to this expensive head-gear is the no head-gear. This last has not yet gained a firm foot-hold, but the outlook for its more general acceptance in the Spring, seems more bright.

By far the commonest fad is the remark of your friend as he meets you on the campus, "Say have you heard about that 190 pound man from such and such a place, who is to be here next week. Built like a ton of brick and a peach of a guard." Fortunate indeed is that man who is not assailed daily with such greetings.

The ringing of the bell at night and the open order drill of the pistol firers are subjects with which the pen cannot deal. It has never taken a course in insanity and is therefore incompetent to judge of these marauders. Suffice it to say when these two get on the war path together, the college taps its forehead and is silent.

The marking of the buildings with chalk and paint has been much in evidence lately. Especially conspicuous is the Greek letter Omega with 13 above and 999 below it. The perpetrators of this deed are easily in the class of the bell ringers and pistol shooters.

It would be interesting to note the effect on a stranger who might come in on the evening train, if on his way from the depot, he should meet several men without hats, then a bunch of men with all-shadowing Panamas and when he alighted at the hotel, if he should run into an animated discussion of the 190 pound man. He eats his supper, takes a stroll through the old Campus, grows suspicious when he sees 13-999, and on his return suddenly finds himself in the line of fire of the open order pistol drill, is it at all unlikely that he would take to his heels to the tune of the old bell?

THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

THE DAVIE POPLAR.

On the Campus at the University of North Carolina.

A SHORT HISTORIC SKETCH.

Named for; William Richardson Davie, "The Father of the University"—Where Class Day Exercises Are Held—Slightly Damaged by the Storm of August 6th.

Mr. Editor:

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon of August 6th, 1902, Chapel Hill, N. C. was visited by a severe wind storm, coming from the North and reaching a velocity of 60 miles an hour. Large and small limbs were twisted and hurled to the ground, trees were uprooted and telephone and electric wires were injured so that the village would have been in darkness that night save for oil lamps.

When the storm had subsided and the report reached the citizens that two limbs of the "Davie Poplar" had been blown down, deep feelings of regret were expressed, as the tree meant so much to the University. This old poplar is situated in the center of the campus and is about 60 feet high and 5 feet in diameter. It is of the Tulip variety, and every year in the month of May it has beautiful blossoms of a pea green color tinted to a pink at the base of each petal. The tree is straight about 50 feet, then three immense limbs branch out; the two of which on the north side were blown off, exposing to view the center which had been burned out by lightning, when the University was closed during the Civil War. About that time, so some of the ante bellum inhabitants tell me, the tree looked as if it would die, but with the reopening of the University in 1875 it took on a new lease of life and has spread its protecting branches over the green sward for a quarter of a century longer.

When these limbs were blown off in August Dr. Kemp. P. Battle and others secured small branches to make souvenir canes. The President of the University now expects to have a piece of furniture made out of the fallen limbs, and placed in one of the buildings, where it will ever be cherished with fond recollections by the alumni of this institution.

It was under this tree that those venerable patriots who selected the site for the University, at their dinner, after which they drank from a fine spring, situated in a shady nook between four sycamore trees now at the rear of the Chapel Hill Hotel. Under the Davie Poplar, too, they decided that Chapel Hill should be the site of the University.

The tree was named for William

Richardson Davie, a graduate of Princeton, a dashing young cavalry officer of the Revolution, Commissary General under Green, a member of the Federal Constitutional Convention of 1787, Governor of the State, Brigadier General of the United States in the contemplated war with France, special minister to France to avert that war, an able lawyer and eloquent orator, "the father of the University." The county of Davie and the Poplar are his only monuments in North Carolina.

At Commencement time, on Class Day, the closing exercises are held under Davie Poplar. About 5 p. m. on that day the graduates in caps and gowns meet in Memorial Hall, form in line, doublefile, march by the music of a brass band, first to the well in front of the South building where each graduate takes a drink of crystal water, then on to the Davie Poplar. This line is headed by the Chief Marshall, who carries a gold-headed cane and wears a black suit. Over his right shoulder is his handsome regalia of blue and white satin fringed with gold. The march is continued around the tree until a large circle has been formed, then they sit in Turkish fashion on the ground. The Historian, who presents medals to the handsomest man, the ugliest man, etc. A brief history of the class is then read. The class poet is next introduced, who rises and reads his original poem. The class pipe with a long handle decorated with class colors is then given to the president who lights it and takes the first smoke, passing it around to each in the circle. "The Old North State" is then sung; the class yell is given for the University President, members of the Faculty and the Class President.

On this occasion there is indeed a solemnity that makes the new graduate forever cherish in memory this last scene around Davie Poplar.

Mrs. S. S. Sibley.

Chapel Hill, N. C.

Annianus Wit.

"1905" went down to the home of a member of the faculty on Sunday to give him a special invitation to come out to the Y. M. C. A. Rally that afternoon. As it was dinner time the Judge cordially invited our friend to dine. Of course a naughty-five "no-a-thank-youed." But this good old soul friend of the students would not thus be baffled. So he told our friend he could not accept his refusal. And with this he commenced carrying him toward the dining hall where there were some girls. Our friend's Annianus wit however did not forsake him and so as a last card he boldly played "he-had-just-had-dinner." As a matter of fact he hadn't eaten any breakfast. But the girl's smiles did not touch him so it was all right.

OUR FIRST GAME.

Contest with Guilford Was Very Easily Won.

CAROLINA, 16; GUILFORD, 0.

"We Have Met the Enemy and We Are Their's," Said Manager White—Varsity Does Herself Credit—Small Attendance—Absence of Rooting—Today's Game.

Carolina has played and won her initial football game of the season. While we were not sure that Varsity would defeat the Quakers, we had every reason to believe she would, considering the fact that Guilford had never, in all her football career, lowered the white and blue. Therefore, the victory came to us as no surprise and while the score is not as large as it should have been, when it is remembered that the contest was fought under the most unfavorable circumstances, the extreme hot weather rendering a telling effect upon the men, it is entirely satisfactory and indicates that more victories await us.

At 1:30 Capt. Foust and his warriors went hurriedly out to the athletic field where the Piedmont boys were leisurely awaiting their arrival. The two Captains agreed upon 15 minute halves and every man went running to his place. Capt. Foust chose to defend the east goal and Bully Jones planted his foot against the pig skin and the game was on.

Patterson, for Guilford, received the kick off but did not advance any as Mr. Farlow objected and emphasized his objection by a complete turning over of Patterson's "earthly tabernacle." After making two futile attempts to gain ground Patterson attempted to punt but Foust spoiled the idea. Carolina having the ball, Berkeley, by the beautiful interference of Foust, skirted left end for twenty yards and McNeill on the next pass gained ten. The ball was then on Guilford's 15 yard line. It was up to Newton for a touch down. He broke through Guilford's line of human defense and, out of breath, placed the leather under the goal. Jones kicked goal.

Time: 2 min. 4 sec. Carolina 6, Guilford 0.

Lindsey kicked the ball to Jones in deep left who threw to Graves who fumbled and a Guilford child sat squarely on the ball. It availed the Quakers nothing, however, as the Carolina wall was impregnable and Giles, a new man, figured greatly in making the line appear as a stone wall. He had a world of force in every rush and brought forth vociferous applause. Carolina being held on downs, Graves kicked to right but Guilford fumbled and Townsend claimed the honor. Newton was given the ball and by interference that was strong and fervid, made a beautiful run of 35 yards. Berkeley skirted left end for a touch down amid great applause. Graves failed to make place kick.

Time: 6 minutes. Score: Carolina 10, Guilford 0.

Guilford landed the skin over in Grave's territory but he found the Quakers watching him. Being unable to advance, Berkeley sent the ball 45 yards into Guilford's grounds. Here Guilford tries a trick that Noah worked. They made double passes and lost double ground. Patterson noticing his proximity to the goal punted 40 yds. Foust carried Berkeley around the left end for seventy yards and there Newton is given the ball and another touch down is credited.

Time: 5 min. Score: C. 16. G. 0.

With one minute remaining in which to make a touch down, Guilford sends the ball to Jones. Jacocks relieves Berkeley after the first rush. Jones punts 34 yards. Time up.

Ball on Guilford's 15 yard line.

At the close of the first half it was evident owing to the extreme warm weather, that the boys could not hold out for fifteen minutes in the second half, so the managers very agreeably fixed the limit to ten minutes.

After an intermission of twenty minutes the warriors, bloody, dirty and sweaty braced themselves and went forth to determine the struggle.

Mann and Parker respectively relieved Newton and Giles.

Guilford punted the ball "into" Farlow who advanced 10 yards. McNeil, Mann and Berkeley each in turn carried the ball within 20 yds. of the visitors goal. Mann then circled left end for a touch down, but on account of foul interference by one of our half backs, the ball was brought back to its former place. By consistent gains Carolina carried the ball within five yards of Guilford's goal and then lost on downs. Guilford then went into the game apparently with renewed vigor. Time after time they hit our line for good gains and it looked as if they would score. But Foust spoke to his men and they obeyed. Once more the "Tar Heels", proved as a stone wall and the Quakers hit it as paper dolls. The referee blew his whistle, the game was over, and Carolina, as usual, had won.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

In justice to our student body and to our Alma Mater, THE TAR HEEL wishes to correct the impression that has been made by an article in last week's "Hustler" concerning Carolina's position with reference to the S. I. A. A., and to explain in few words the attitude she assumes in expressing her desire to withdraw from that organization.

Evidently our Vanderbilt friend does not understand our position. And tho' it is not to be expected of him to see the situation from our point of view, yet he might be a little less severe in his criticism.

In expressing her desire to sever her connection with the S. I. A. A. Carolina is not prompted by any such motives as the Hustler assigns. She does not wish to "play whomsoever she can persuade or induce to play for her" nor does she wish to follow "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." The faculty rules by which she will be guided will be as stringent as those of the S. I. A. A., indeed they will be practically the same as those of that organization with one exception—the one year rule will not be enforced. Carolina has many athletic men who come here from other institutions, and to debar those from playing would simply be an injustice to them and to herself. In short the sentiment of the student body is against remaining in the S. I. A. A. and Carolina has enough of it.

Frequently THE TAR HEEL has to urge upon the students the necessity of going out on the athletic field and of "getting behind the team." Judging from appearances most of our men have taken this strictly in a literal sense. Now the THE TAR HEEL wishes to urge you not to get too close "behind the team." Give the men room to play. In short KEEP OFF THE SIDE LINES.

The foot ball season is now on and our first game has been played and won. The evidences of magnificent coaching as manifested in this game were indeed gratifying. The second greatest feature of the game was the almost total absence of cheering.

What's the matter?

THE TAR HEEL takes pleasure in announcing to the friends of the University that the Sophomores have practically given up their time established practice of hazing Freshmen. We venture assertion that this evil has been practised less this fall than any fall since the re-opening of this institution. The decline of this barbarous practice must be prophetic of good. Sophomore, lay it aside now and forever.

Bible Study Rally.

The Bible Study Rally of the of the Y. M. C. A. held Sunday afternoon in the Chapel was well attended. The address by Prof. C. Alphonso Smith on "The Advantages of Bible Study" was enjoyed.

His discussion was based on these three points:

(1). The influence the Bible has had upon the literature of the world. (2). The historical value of the Bible. (3). The influence of its diction upon our language.

This address, one of the simplest and strongest lectures delivered lately in the Chapel. It will probably be published this year, in the second issue of the University Magazine.

After this address short talks were made by Messrs. Barnhart, Judd, Harper and Bynum, explaining the respective courses which they will teach.

The teachers for the different courses are as following:

Life of Christ—Barnhart and Gordon.

Acts and Epistle—Judd and Stevens.

Old Testament Characters—McFadyen.

Personal Workers—Harper.

Study in Mission—J. K. Ross.

About sixty students were enrolled in the courses Sunday. More however will be enrolled as the session advances.

Atlantic Symphony Quartette.

The musical intertainment given by the Atlantic Symphony Quartette, Wednesday night, for the benefit of Athletics was of a high tone. Singers all, they sang with that spirit which is characteristic of those who sing for the love of song.

The Quartette (Messrs. Smith, Coley, Nowell and Church) captured the audience with their opening select-on "Until the Dawn" the tenor being especially pronounced. Their rendering of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" and "Kentucky Bade" made all say "I got Mine."

Miss Lauro Belle's Piano Solo "Faust", by Leybach, was received with keen appreciation. Her touch was perfect and showed that skill which long and careful training alone will bring.

Miss McMillian, formerly of Kentucky but now of Lumberton, N.C., is a charming little wonder. Like Miss Belle attractive in appearance and graceful in every act pleased all. Her "Just a Little Boy" and "Midnight Dialogue of Papa's Inquisitive Baby Boy" showed her to be a perfect performer of the mimic.

In the tenor Solo, "If you loved me," Mr. Coley was at his best:

My heart with joy divine does thrill—

If you loved me,

T'would give this life of mine it fill—

Of ecstasy,

Each golden moment spent with you,

On rainbow wings would flee.

The sky would be a ceaseless blue—

If you loved me.

What odds to me how dark the night—

If you loved me?

For in your eyes a beacon light of love,

I'd see.

My future now a dark abyss,

Forever changed would be—

If you loved me.

University Organizations.

While Alton Packard is amusing some gay audience and DeMotte charming some cultured body let us turn aside from matters foreign and look to things at home. Where have more puns been made and more jokes imposed and more sound reason administered than in the pictured halls of the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Societies? Yet there are some students, thanks they are but few, who go from the University, some that graduate, who never join either of these famous organizations.

The importance of being a member, and taking an active part in the work of the Society is a point deserving mention many times over.

Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors join now, you should have joined before! Freshmen and Professional students join now, you never will regret the step.

The initiating fee is within the reach of every student. It dwindled into insignificance when you search the past or examine the present or think of the future and see the good derived from Society influence. Look at the record of so many illustrious members. In the Society is where the student stands face to face with fellow student and looks him in the eye, in the Society is where Carolian's clever debaters are trained. Here laughter and mirth have their place, here law and order their meaning, and good judgment and good sense have their force.

The custom prevailing is for the student from the West to join the Di. and those from the East, the Phi. The appeal is not for the Di.; the appeal is not for the Phi. Their aim and purpose are the same. The appeal is in the interest of the student who is not a member of one or the other. It is not a case of beggary from scarcity of members but a whole-soul in those who ought to join and receive the benefits therefrom. In fact, over two-thirds of the new men are, or soon will be, active members. Why should you, one of the one-third, not join? No man should leave the University of North Carolina without registering his name on the Secretary's book of either the famous Di or famous Phi. Student you will never regret the move, it is a splendid privilege and will be a lasting honor.

In connection with the Society, for the information of this year's class, another important factor in college life is that found in the advantages offered in attendance upon the meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society. Monthly meetings are held throughout the college year for the discussion of scientific subjects and to keep the students in touch with the research work that is being carried on in our own laboratories. Students interested in scientific topics will gain much through regular attendance.

The North Carolina Historical Society is a similar organization to the Mitchell Society, differing only in the material handled. "The purpose of this Society is to collect, investigate and publish material illustrative of history of North Carolina. The educational aim of this is to create a love of historical study and to give training in scientific methods of historical investigations. To this end meetings are held monthly in the History lecture room. All members of the University are eligible to membership.

The Shakespeare Club is in direct harmony with above mentioned Societies. It offers opportunity for comparative studies in the dramatic literature of ancient and foreign languages. It attempts to excite interest in the art of literary composition. The Club has a small but valuable collection of reference books.

It is reported that Rankin and Brigman are going to join the German Club. The former's qualification in language of aforesaid organization, leaving aside other considerations which might be brought forward, is enough to give him a good send off. And as to the latter, well it goes without saying he is all right.

Mr. T. P. Endicott of Albany, N. Y. has entered college and will try for end on the Varsity.

Mr. Robert Lassiter has returned to the Hill to resume his studies.

Mr. Jack Donnelly has reentered college.

Now is the time for some one to re-mortalize the old oaken bucket that hung in the well for soon it will hang no more. And also those desire to sing a strain to the moss covered bucket should do so at once or here after hold their peace. At the urgent request of the State health authorities the faculty have decided to let sentiment bind them no longer, and the well must therefore be closed to give way to the new fangled idea, the pump. Six hundred boys cannot live in the same back yard and drink out of the same bucket: it is not good for their health—morally, intellectually and physically. And so the old oaken buckets must go.

Pickelsimer has gone home. Some said he was sick, others added home to this adjective.

The gymnasium was opened on Monday. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday the Freshman is given a cordial invitation to be present at 5 p.m. and on Tuesday and Thursday the bars will be thrown down for the Sophs., Juniors and even Medical Students. On these named days of each week the above named classes are expected to be present, and if the Sophs desire to commingle with the Fresh or vice versa why he may come every day in the week as there is plenty of room for all.

The post office will soon be moved to the new brick building not quite finished across the street opposite Klutz's store. A new drug store will be opened in the other store: the post-office in the east side and the drug store in the west side of the building. Even the foot ball fellow will be unable to give any strain to these walls in the evening center rush while he waits for the mail.

Elementary law is now counted in the regular academic course, but an extra fee of five dollars is required for it. About twenty five, mostly academic students, are taking this course.

It is a good thing that the A. & M. College is not here at Chapel Hill for many a would-be-farmer when he visited the country around here would be discouraged from following up his chosen vocation.

Dr. J. Wm. Jones, Chaplain General of Confederate Veterans, will deliver one of his "favorites" before the students Thursday night. Many remember his lecture on "R. E. Lee" in 1900 and recall, with great pleasure, his glowing details of war reminiscences. The Doctor is deeply in earnest and puts his whole being into his effort. The students may look forward to an interesting address.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith will appear on the platform October 23rd. He will open the series of Faculty Lectures and a rare treat is assured. The title of Dr. Smith's lecture will appear in the next issue.

The midweek devotional meeting of the Y. M. C. A. is held now every Thursday night instead of Tuesday night. This meeting is held in the Chapel. Prayer is held ten minutes Tuesday at 7:15 p.m. in the association room in the Old West.

An address on "Missions" was made in the Chapel Sunday evening by Mr. E. G. Wilson, college Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of North and South Carolina. Mr. Wilson gave a stirring appeal to College Students to give Missions a place in their life, thought and work.

The first of the Star Course entertainments will be given Nov. 13, by the Mozart Symphony Concert Co. and the next by Willoughby Reade, Dec. 12th.

The Lecture Committee made special arrangements whereby most of the Star Course series will be given in January and February, the "lull" or when their is least to interest the student outside of the curriculum.

A copy of THE TAR HEEL is sent this week to all the alumni whose addresses we have and who were on our subscription list last year. Most of these have been taking THE TAR HEEL for years, and this fact, we think is an indication that they want it this year. So we will continue their name on our list until otherwise advised.

Some Breezy Foot Ball Notes.

Capt. Foust, you played an excellent game Saturday against the Quakers. Your interference was simply magnificent. You have indeed measured up to the high expectations of the student body.

Well, say, didn't McNeill hit the Guilford anatomy hard.

And Berkeley, you seemed to be on the track team Saturday. You are due the Piedmont boys an apology. You forgot where you were, didn't you? The way you skirted Guilford ends was a measly shame. They didn't think you were so very Greene, did they?

Marriage of Miss Anne Wilmer Hume to Professor W. R. Vance.

As our matter for last week was in before Wednesday night, we did not have opportunity to record the marriage of Miss Anne Wilmer Hume, eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Hume of the University to Prof. W. R. Vance, Ph.D., of the Law Faculty of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.

The wedding occurred on Wednesday night, Sept. 24th, at the bride's home in Chapel Hill, and was solemnized by Rev. J. William cones, D.D., and attended by a numerous and brilliant company from Chapel Hill and abroad. It was followed by a reception and elaborate entertainment. After a bridal tour to Asheville, this interesting couple will go to their home in Lexington, Va. In behalf of the University THE TAR HEEL extends warmest congratulations.

Junior Class Election.

The Junior class held a meeting in the Chapel last week for the election of its officers and chose the following men: E. M. McIver, President; W. M. Swink, First Vice President; H. B. Frost, Second Vice President; L. B. Lockhart, Historian; T. K. Suttan, Secretary; H. W. Winstead, Treasurer; S. S. Robins, Class Representative.

Messrs. J.P. Ervin, and A. W. Latta were elected Captain and Manager respectively of the class foot ball team.

Farewell Sermon.

Rev. J. D. Curry preached his farewell sermon to a full church on last Sunday morning. He left Thursday for his new home in Virginia. As pastor of the Presbyterian Church here during eight years Mr. Currie has been in close touch with the students of the University, and his work in the new field will be watched with interest.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

In justice to our student body and to our Alma Mater, THE TAR HEEL wishes to correct the impression that has been made by an article in last week's "Hustler" concerning Carolina's position with reference to the S. I. A. A., and to explain in few words the attitude she assumes in expressing her desire to withdraw from that organization.

Evidently our Vanderbilt friend does not understand our position. And tho' it is not to be expected of him to see the situation from our point of view, yet he might be a little less severe in his criticism.

In expressing her desire to sever her connection with the S. I. A. A. Carolina is not prompted by any such motives as the Hustler assigns. She does not wish to "play whomever she can persuade or induce to play for her" nor does she wish to follow "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." The faculty rules by which she will be guided will be as stringent as those of the S. I. A. A., indeed they will be practically the same as those of that organization with one exception—the one year rule will not be enforced. Carolina has many athletic men who come here from other institutions, and to debar those from playing would simply be an injustice to them and to herself. In short the sentiment of the student body is against remaining in the S. I. A. A. and Carolina has enough of it.

Frequently THE TAR HEEL has to urge upon the students the necessity of going out on the athletic field and of "getting behind the team." Judging from appearances most of our men have taken this strictly in a literal sense. Now the THE TAR HEEL wishes to urge you not to get too close "behind the team." Give the men room to play. In short KEEP OFF THE SIDE LINES.

The foot ball season is now on and our first game has been played and won. The evidences of magnificent coaching as manifested in this game were indeed gratifying. The second greatest feature of the game was the almost total absence of cheering.

What's the matter?

THE TAR HEEL takes pleasure in announcing to the friends of the University that the Sophomores have practically given up their time established practice of hazing Freshmen. We venture assertion that this evil has been practised less this fall than any fall since the re-opening of this institution. The decline of this barbarous practice must be prophetic of good. Sophomore, lay it aside now and forever.

Bible Study Rally.

The Bible Study Rally of the Y. M. C. A. held Sunday afternoon in the Chapel was well attended. The address by Prof. C. Alphonso Smith on "The Advantages of Bible Study" was enjoyed.

His discussion was based on these three points:

(1). The influence the Bible has had upon the literature of the world. (2). The historical value of the Bible. (3). The influence of its diction upon our language.

This address, one of the simplest and strongest lectures delivered lately in the Chapel. It will probably be published this year in the second issue of the University Magazine.

After this address short talks were made by Messrs. Barnhart, Judd, Harper and Bynum explaining the respective courses which they will teach.

The teachers for the different courses are as following:

Life of Christ—Barnhart and Gordon.

Acts and Epistle—Judd and Stevens.

Old Testament Characters—McFadyen.

Personal Workers—Harper.

Study in Mission—J. K. Ross.

About sixty students were enrolled in the courses Sunday. More however will be enrolled as the session advances.

Atlantic Symphony Quartette.

The musical intertainment given by the Atlantic Symphony Quartette, Wednesday night, for the benefit of Athletics was of a high tone. Singers all, they sang with that spirit which is characteristic of those who sing for the love of song.

The Quartette (Messrs. Smith, Coley, Nowell and Church) captured the audience with their opening select-on "Until the Dawn" the tenor being especially pronounced. Their rendering of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" and "Kentucky Bade" made all say "I got Mine."

Miss Lauro Belle's Piano Solo "Faust", by Leybach, was received with keen appreciation. Her touch was perfect and showed that skill which long and careful training alone will bring.

Miss McMillian, formerly of Kentucky but now of Lumberton, N. C., is a charming little wonder. Like Miss Belle attractive in appearance and graceful in every act pleased all. Her "Just a Little Boy" and "Midnight Dialogue of Papa's Inquisitive Baby Boy" showed her to be a perfect performer of the Boys the foot ball team, whether it wins or loses every game played this season, deserves your support and it is your duty, if you are financially able, to give it your hearty support. It is your team; it represents the physical and mental manhood of our University. Stand by it, therefore, through thick and thin and let its victories and defeats be your victories and defeats.

A large crowd should attend the game this afternoon. Oak Ridge has been practicing daily for about one month and they expect to give Carolina a warm reception. Varsity too will be in excellent condition to battle with the visitors and the game will be close and exciting.

Changes in Football Rules.

We condense the following from The Lafayette:

While there have been some changes in the football rules for this season, with a few exceptions, none are radical. The following are the most important.

1. Both sides change goals after a try at goal from a touchdown or after a successful field-kicked goal.

2. If in snapping back the ball the player so doing be off-side twice in the same down, the opponents receive five yards.

3. No coaching by substitutes or others not participating in the game is allowed, only in case of accident to a player and then only the official representative previously designated—shall anyone except the twenty-two players come upon the field of play.

Five men are allowed to walk up and down on either side of the field, the rest, including substitutes, water carriers, and all admitted within the enclosure must be seated throughout the game. The breaking of any part of this is a foul, and punishable by loss of five yards to side whose man infringes. Downs and the point to be gained remain unchanged.

4. In case of a foul during a run the umpire's whistle may terminate such run—and the offending side loses 25 yards.

OAK RIDGE BEATEN.

CAROLINA, 35; OAK RIDGE, 0.

Carolina Wins her Second Game of the Season in a Walk—Beautiful Interference and All Round Team Work of Carolina dazed the Oak Ridge Boys

Over three hundred students, filled with enthusiasm and college spirit, saw Carolina in a snappy, gingery game, administer a severe and crushing defeat to the Oak Ridge team last Saturday afternoon by the overwhelming score of 35 to 0. Of course we expected to defeat the visitors; it was but natural for us to form such a belief. We are a University with an enrollment of over 500 boys and have therefore a larger number from which to choose than a preparatory school. But we cannot refrain from expressing the opinion that the score was really larger than was anticipated by the most sanguine, and the magnitude of the defeat indicates one of two things: either Oak Ridge has an inferior team as compared with that of last year or Carolina has decidedly a stronger one.

This game has been productive of much good in that it has forcibly demonstrated the telling effect of Carolina's efficient coaching received during the week prior to the game. One feature of the game was strikingly noticeable. Every blow against the enemy was well planned and admirably executed. The interference was of a high order and simply bewildered the visitors. Continue your good work, Mr. Olcott, and you may rest assured that if Varsity continues to make such marked improvement the annihilation of the Virginia football team will be a dead certainty.

The Oak Ridge team was the first to reach the scene of the struggle and upon its arrival was greeted with loud applause. But when Capt. Foust and his men made their appearance the students went wild with enthusiasm and the applause that followed was loud and inspiring.

Two men ran to the center of the field, a bright coin was tossed in the air, heads fell and Capt. Foust came away with a silly smile, while the Oak Ridge boys went merrily away to defend the east goal. The whistle was blown and there was a dead stillness in the air. Graves bunted the leather slowly to Oak Ridge and the struggle began.

Ross attempted to scoop up the pig skin but Captain Foust unceremoniously made his appearance and claimed the earth and the contents thereof. Carolina having the ball, Berkeley skirted left end for 12 yards and on the next pass "Farmer Newton" with amazing rapidity, which caused the visitors to stare, circled left end for a touch down amidst rounds of applause. Jones kicked goal.

Time 35 seconds. Score Carolina 6; Oak Ridge 0.

Glenn, for Oak Ridge, drove the ball far into Carolina's territory and Forest advanced 15 yards. Then there was a stillness, then a rush and Berkeley passed by left end for 35 yards. By consistent gains Carolina rapidly approached the Oak Ridge goal. "Now for a touch down," said Graves. Oak Ridge believed what he said. The signal was given, the visitor's ends came together and stared at our proceedings. So there was a pair of stairs and Berkeley walked over for a touch down. Jones placed the leather between the posts.

Time 2 minutes 25 seconds. Carolina 12; Oak Ridge 0.

Glenn punted the ball forty yards and Ingle advanced 15. Newton was given the leather and ran twenty-five yards. In order to give Varsity some relief, Graves kicked the ball far into the visitors territory. This was the first time Oak Ridge gained possession of the ball. They ran against our line but it proved impregnable. Being unable to advance Glenn stepped back for a kick but made a fluke. Varsity took the ball and by hard line plunging and cleverly skirting of the ends, Newton was pushed over for another touch down.

Time 4 minutes, 8 seconds. Jones failed to kick goal. Score, Carolina 17; Oak Ridge 0.

Glenn punted 40 yards and Ingle returned the ball 35. On a fumble Carolina obtained the ball and Newton made a sensational run of 45 yards. Berkeley by strong interference, skirted left end for 15 yards. Newton then crossed the line for another touch down.

Time 3 minutes. Score: Carolina 23; Oak Ridge 0.

Ingle, after receiving the kick off, sent the ball back 40 yards. Here Oak Ridge for the first time made a few gains but was finally held on downs, and Greene thought, after making two miserable efforts to plunge into the vitals of our men, he could make a drop kick for the goal but his plans were frustrated. The ball being in Carolina's possession, Berkeley made the run of his life, cleverly dodging the Oak Ridge bones, and scored another touch down amid thundering applause. Jones kicked goal.

Time 4 minutes. Score: Carolina 29; Oak Ridge 0.

SECOND HALF.

At the beginning of the second half the following men were substituted: Allen, Harris, Endicott, Jacocks, McNeil, and Carr.

Oak Ridge being unable to make the required distance drove the ball to Carr who made a sensational run of about 45 yards, making a touch down. It did not count, however, as "Billy" ran out side of the line in making the attempt. Jacocks was given the ball and rushed over for a touch down. Jones kicked goal.

Carolina had started steadily up the geld for another touch down when time was called.

Final score: Carolina, 35; Oak Ridge 0.

FOOTBALL OUTLOOK

In the Colleges and Universities of the South.

SEVERAL HEAVY TEAMS.

Present Season Will See the Most Splendid Array of Football Material, Coached by the Most Talented Experts, that the Southern Grid-iron Has Known.

The most reliable information that is to be had indicates that the present season will see the most splendid array of football material, coached by the most talented football experts, that the southern grid-iron has ever known. Every southern college where the great college game is allowed has its eleven hard at work on the field every afternoon, and the time is fast drawing near when the long-haired man with the football togs will be the hero of the athletic field.

VANDERBILT DANGEROUS.

There is much of the old material returned at Vanderbilt and the university has been particularly fortunate in getting some of the best new material that has ever entered there.

Several of the preparatory schools which are feeders for Vanderbilt have sent up their most experienced football players, and Coach Watkins banks considerably on this material. The team undoubtedly looks dangerous at this distance and unless an unequal chunk of tough luck in the shape of accident happens to the Commodores their chances for regaining the South's championship are very bright.

NASHVILLE LOOKS BRIGHT.

The University of Nashville eleven is another that threatens to give its opponents trouble before the season has passed. Some half a dozen of last year's eleven have returned, besides several good substitutes and promising new material. Coach Snow, from the University of Michigan, is in charge of the team. He played on Michigan's wonderful eleven last year that scored over five hundred points to their opponents' nothing. Thus far the reports from Monteagle, Tenn., where the team has been practicing, indicate that the men lack speed and that it will take lots of hard work to get them into championship form. Nashville lost a golden opportunity last year to win the championship, and she lost it largely by the failure of her team to grind out the plays with sufficient speed and regularity. Nashville and Vanderbilt will not get a chance at each other's throats this year, and the relative merits of the two teams will have to be figured out

To-day's game with Furman is the last game the Varsity will play on our gridiron this season. Let's all see it.

Just at this time there seems to be much speculation among those interested in Southern athletics as to what sort of a foot ball team Carolina has this season. It is not our purpose to allay nor to arouse curiosity; nor is it our policy to make wild predictions. However, we feel safe in venturing this statement: If our team continues to improve for the next two weeks as rapidly as it has improved for the past two, the Varsity will answer for itself in a way that will be thoroughly convincing—in a way that will leave no room for doubt or speculation.

As nothing has yet been said in these columns about the several class teams, we deem it prudent to say a few words of encouragement to them and to give a reason for their championship. So far the work of most of these teams has been good, especially that of the Sophomores. And it is to be hoped that the daily practice will continue. Few of us realize the importance of the class teams. They are indeed the feeders of the Varsity, and so are just as important as the scrub team. Strong class teams this year mean a strong Varsity next year. Therefore let us give these teams due recognition and urge upon them the importance of regular systematic practice.

THE TAR HEEL wishes to call the attention of its readers to the article on "Why Young Men Should Study Shakespeare," by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, which has just been published in pamphlet form by the University Society of New York. The article was prepared by Dr. Smith for an encyclopedia, but was published by this Society, and has been published in pamphlet form together with an article on "How to Study Shakespeare," by Hamilton Wright Mabie.

The names of these two scholars and authors are sufficient to commend this pamphlet to all lovers of literature. We would say to all: read these two articles; they will do you good.

DOGGERL,

Or a Tale New in the Telling.

A ring of boys about a dog,
With laughter most uproar'ous,
Attracted the attention of
A minister decorous.

Then he with sanctimonious mien
In their direction steering,
Inquired the reason of their mirth,
Some mischief he was fearing.

The boys at once their laughter stopped;
The youngest made reply,
"We're going to give this dog to him
Who tells the biggest lie."

The minister with horror spoke,
His scorn gleamed in his eye,
"You wicked little boys," said he,
"I never told a lie!"

Then silence fell upon the group,
Fell like a heavy fog,
Till with one voice the chorus rose,
"Say, let's give him the dog!"

"OH! WOBB," '04.

The Heritage and Duty of Sons and Daughters of Confederate Veterans.

"Tis my custom to speak often of matters concerning the Confederacy—I intend to keep on speaking of the Confederacy—and I offer apologies to no mortal man," so began Dr. J. Wm. Jones in the opening words of the first of the scheduled series. The doctor continued in part:

"I have decided to speak to you tonight on 'The Heritage and Duty of Sons and Daughters of Confederate Veterans'. I have been led to this by the observation that our young people know so little about that epoch of history embracing the Confederacy and the principles for which the men who composed the Confederacy fought. Some time ago a teacher asked her pupils to name some of the great Southern generals. There was some hesitancy and one of the scholars replied: 'I remember one—Sir Albert Sidney!' * * *

What is your heritage young men? a heritage of traitors that sought to overthrow the best form of government ever created? a heritage that sought to perpetuate the crime of slavery? No! a thousand times No! You have a heritage of purest patriotism; a heritage that neither you nor posterity has any right ever to be ashamed of; a heritage of men, who Lee said always fought for Constitutional rights.

Secession was an inalienable right of the States. England long ago recognized this in her Colonial negotiations. John Q. Adams said there was the same right to dissolve the Union that there was to form it, that the States had better part in than to be held together in restraint * * * New England was the nest of secession and the Hartford Convention is the nest egg. * * * Horace Greeley, during Lincoln's administration advocated secession. * * * The Northern Historians will tell you that secession originated with John Calhoun but Mr. Davis is right when he says, 'The only difference between Massachusetts and South Carolina is that Massachusetts threatened and South Carolina acted' * * * The refusal of the Federal Government to try President Davis for treason seems to me to settle the question. Jefferson Davis was not guilty of treason. * * *

Slavery was not the real cause of the war—a mere occasion. John Brown's raid and its approbation in the North, the election of Lincoln by sectional vote were two of the many causes that led up to the conflict.

Young men, your fathers were men of patriotism, not governed by sensation and jealousy. They were forced to resist the encroachments upon constitutional rights. The North fired the first shot at Harper's Ferry and the refusal to evacuate Fort Sumter * * *

Young men, I say you have a heritage, a heritage of glory. The North had a population of twenty million; the South only nine million, of whom four million were slaves. The North enlisted 2,850,132 soldiers; the South only 600,000. I was surprised to see the other day, that some writer says he can prove that the South had one and a half million soldiers. He is wrong, if your fathers had had a million and a half men they would have driven the Yankees into the Arctic Ocean. * * *

Your duty, young men, is to study the history of that great struggle; get at the facts. If any man says Lee was a rebel look him in the eye and say, "Washington was a rebel because he fought against constitutional government; Lee was not a rebel, for he fought for constitutional rights; if there were any other rebels they lived north of the Potomac." See to it that you know this history, and that you hand it down as it ought to be. Study the deeds of those heroic men, the men who wore the gray, the men who took off their gray coats and went back to work in the fields; the men who have made this fair Southland blossom and bloom as a rose. The day is not far distant when the South shall take the first rank in the industrial world, and her sons shall take their proper place."

There will be an important meeting this afternoon promptly at 2:30 of all the auburn-haired students in the University to organize "The Ancient and Only Amalgamated Order of Red Heads." The motto of this new organization will probably be, "Let Your Light Shine." Every student from a sandy to a clay head, from a Freshman to a Senior, is asked to be present.

An anonymous Fall poet has sent us the result of his creation for publication. "Godbey, the Ladiesman," is the subject. The would-be poem was promptly thrown in the waste basket, as it cannot be printed without the author's sign.

The rain last Sunday morning was a happy cause to the majority of students for their absence at church Sunday evening.

Complaint is being made by the students of the red bandanna colored brother's drinking at the well on the campus. Of course no objection is made to the college employees, for Bill McDade and Henry Jones are just as much a part of the University as the Davie Poplar or Old East building. The objection is against the colored brother from Chapel Hill who has special business on the campus, and against the country Hamson who occasionally draws in a little inspiration. It is hoped the Faculty will put a stop to this.

The large number of fellows boarding at Commons now is an indication of the fare that is now being given. Over one hundred and twenty can be seen each evening promptly on time at the door waiting to be let in by Parson Adams. The board so far this fall has, perhaps, been the best ever given there for $8.00 per month.

The expression classes under Mr. McKie this year are larger than those of last year. The first year's course is intended for those who have never had experience in speaking. The second year's course is occupied mostly by extemporaneous speaking. Alden's Art of Debate is the text book used. These classes meet only once a week on some afternoon. Though the student has to take the course two years to count him one year, yet, even if the course did not count anything for graduation, we know any student in the University would be amply repaid by taking the course. It is a pity that these courses do not count for more hours and thus allow the instructor to meet his classes at least twice a week.

Mr. Chas. Ross, '04, has returned to resume his studies at the University. Several weeks ago near Ashboro he received serious injuries on the face, his nose having been broken. His speech is a little hoarse now, but it will probably be all right in a few weeks.

More medical students seem to be joining the literary societies this year than for several years. This is a good move, for there is no reason why this class of students should not take an interest in such an organization, as well as the regular academic student.

Chapel Hill's natural advantages may not amount to so very much but there is one thing she can be especially proud of, and that is, of her Sunday School teachers: she has three of the best in the state. There is hardly a town of five thousand in the state that has three such teachers as Dr. Hume at the Baptist, Dr. Venable at the Presbyterian, and ex-Congressman Stroud at the Methodist Church. The Sunday schools commence at 9:30 a. m. To every student a most cordial invitation is given.

The two literary societies have appointed committees to arrange at once the debates for the coming year. The opinion of the college seems to be that there will be three debates this year: with Johns Hopkins, Georgia, and either Vanderbilt or Virginia. The last named college has been written to but nothing definite has been heard. The matter will probably be reported to the societies tonight.

Mr. Michael Schenck, ex-'97, arrived last week from Cuba, and has entered the Law School.

Judge McNeill, of Wilmington, was on the Hill for a few days visiting his son. Judge McNeill graduated with the last class that went out from here before the University was closed in the Civil War.

The Fresh, Soph and Junior, or more properly, the Junior, Soph and Fresh football teams, have been doing good practice on the old Athletic field this week. "The Freshman team presents the strongest appearance," some disinterested student was heard to say, but a wise Soph standing nearby added that it took brains as well as brawn to play football.

"What's the matter with the Senior football team?" someone asks in an unsigned article sent to THE TAR HEEL. Well, we are unable to inform the gentleman. He partially answers—at least he attempts to answer—his own question in the last part of his article by reckoning that many members of naughty-three are busily working for that team which does not play but is played to, and without any opposition—provided they are prepared—walk up and down the campus in the sunny days in June.

A secret has leaked out of the Di Society. One of their debaters Saturday night made a flourishing speech, and after it was over and the audience could recover the sharp come and go of their breath, the chairman of the committee to decide the debate—Mr. Patton was not on this committee—arose and asked on which side the 'squire spoke.

from comparative scores, a very untrustworthy method.

TENNESSEE'S TEAM.

Vanderbilt and Nashville naturally present themselves first on account of their weight. It is by no means certain, however, that either of these elevens will romp away with the championship, and it is certain that neither of them will do so without having to make some terrific fights. The University of Tennessee will be in the heavy weight class this year, and will give any team in the South against which it is pitted a worthy struggle, if indications do not fail. The reports from Knoxville are exceedingly encouraging and indicate that the eleven will have better weight than last year, and will be faster.

TEXAS WILL BE HEAVY.

Another team whose weight puts it immediately to the front in the study of the situation is the eleven which will come from the Lone Star State. The latest reports from Dallas give the weight of the Texas line at two hundred pounds to the man. Before any games have been played and the team has been finally selected, several pounds will, no doubt, have been shaved off, but the line will remain, without doubt, as heavy as any in the South. Texas had a good team last year, and has a first-rate bunch of material from the last year's team as a nucleus for the eleven this year. What the eleven will have in the speed line remains to be seen. Hart, of the Yale team, is giving the team pointers, and is perfectly capable of putting forth a formidable eleven. Texas already has games with Sewanee, Tulane, Nashville, the University of Louisiana and the University of Alabama.

GEORGIA'S OUTLOOK GOOD.

So much for the teams with superior weight. A glance at the lighter teams brings Georgia and Sewanee up first with the most encouraging indications. "Light" at Georgia this year means from ten to fifteen pounds heavier than last year. That is, the eleven will weigh close to 165 pounds, or nearly as heavy as Vanderbilt was last year. Coach Reynolds places his team, among the lighter ones, and does not expect to win out against the teams with more bulk. The probability is, however, that Coach Reynolds expects greater things of his team than he is letting be known, and when Georgia trots on the field this year she will have the confidence of the student body behind her.

SEWANEE WILL BE STRONG.

Sewanee, too, is blessed with abundant material and not a bad supply of good timber. Back of this fine material is the wonderful Sewanee spirit, which is hardly equalled at any college in the South. The Sewanee boys stand by the purple in victory and defeat and fight until every shadow of a possibility of victory has departed. This spirit has done more than any other one thing to make the flutter of the royal purple cause a sinking at the heart of opposing teams, and has sent the Sewanee students back to the mountain with the "Sewanee, Ree, Sewanee, Rai," commemorating a victory.

Boynton, of Cornell, is coaching Sewanee this year, and he should be of great service to the team. Last year Sewanee undertook the system of graduate coaching, but she has gone back to the old system and it will probably help her team. The one game of the year which Sewanee concentrates all efforts on to win is the Thanksgiving contest with Vanderbilt. With a line weighing, according to the reports from the mountain, 173 pounds to the man, Sewanee should give Vanderbilt a splendid struggle and doubtless will.

AUBURN'S LIGHT TEAM.

In Georgia, interest in the Auburn eleven is second only to that in the Georgia team. The great Thanksgiving day game is the game of the season here and as Auburn always takes care of one end of the game it is natural that there should be unusual interest in what kind of team will come up from the Alabama college. Gloomy is the word which the Auburn correspondents are using to express the situation there. Very little material from last year and all of it very light is the way the Auburn men describe the situation. The team will, it seems certain, be light, but not so light that it will not make the struggle on Thanksgiving day very interesting.

Speed is the motto at Auburn and lightning plays will be what the eleven will depend largely upon in the season just beginning.

THE TECH'S PROSPECT.

The prospects of the Tech have not been so bright in the history of the school and the students are expecting the team to make a good showing in the games scheduled. Coach Andree is confident and is certainly full of energy and enthusiasm. He has already started vigorous practice and the strictest training. So far no scrimmage work has been done but two teams will probably face each other tomorrow. Coach Andree says it is impossible to give any idea as to how the team will play, as he does not know himself. Many of the new men, who are expected to make the team, have not been able to come on the field on account of examinations.

CLEMSON'S PROSPECTS.

The prospects at Clemson are not flattering. Only one old man has returned, and the team will be composed of light material. Coach Heisman has as many candidates on the field, however, as he can well take care of, and all who know him feel confident that he will turn out a team that Clemson will not be ashamed of.

The following is a partial list of coaches who, according to an exchange, will have charge of Southern teams this fall: Scott, of Yale, North Carolina; Watkins, of Princeton, Vanderbilt; Fisher, of Princeton, Tennessee; Snow, of Michigan, Nashville; Reynolds, of Princeton, Georgia; Audres, of Gallaudet, Georgia Technical; Heisman, of Pennsylvania, Clemson; Dabney, of Virginia, Tulane. Johnny de Saullies, Yale's quarterback last year, will coach the University of Virginia eleven this fall according to the Nashville News.

Another Interesting and Instructive Lecture.

UNIVERSITY DAY EXERCISES

The Story of the Early Days of the University, and Its Opening on January 15, 1795—Privations and Hardships of the Students—Literary Societies.

The custom has long been in vogue to celebrate the 12th of October as "University Day." This year the exercises were held on Monday, and the day will be especially remembered for Dr. Battle's address.

Gerrard Hall was filled from rostrum to gallery with anxious, eager students, when the University orchestra, under the able leadership of Mr. Woollen, touched the scene into silence with a lively selection.

After the invocation by Dr. Jones the delicate strings of the violin again set the balmy autumn air into harmonious vibrations and prepared the audience for Dr. Venable's happy words of introduction: "One hundred and thirteen years ago the University was founded.

"Its history tells of more than a century of loving hope, patient endeavor and brave achievement. The present students of the University have fallen heirs to a great heritage—one that should make them cherish and love their grand old mother.

"It is their privilege this morning to learn something of this University's history from one who bravely bore his part of the struggle for her upbuilding and to whom much of her present success is due—Dr. Kemp Plumme Battle."

As Dr. Battle rose a burst of applause and a round of enthusiasm brought forth a series of his expansive smiles, and he said in substance: The clause in the constitution commanding the General Assembly to provide one or more universities was probably inserted on the instance of the Scotch-Irish of Mecklenburg, who gave their delegates to the Congress at Halifax positive instructions to provide a State college. The charter was granted in 1789, Davie, "Father of the University," being the leading advocate * * The trustees were enabled to begin the upbuilding of the "Old East" on October 12, 1793, by the loan of $10,000 by the State and subscriptions from the friends of education. The largest donors being Wm. Cain, great-grandfather of our own Major, and Walter Stever, of whom 'tis said, he changed his name from Walter Hogg to Walter Stever, because his sweetheart told him she could not make a "Hogg" of herself for any man.

The first "Presiding Professor" was Rev. David Kerr. He was succeeded by an excellent young man, Chas. W. Harris, first Professor of Mathematics. Upon the advice of Harris, Joseph Caldwell, a Princeton tutor, was chosen as his successor.

The opening of the doors on January 15, 1795, was a dismal affair. Governor Spaight and many prominent men with him were on hand but not one student. It was not until February that Hinton James came. Before the session ended there were over a hundred students.

Dr. Battle gave glimpses of his researches into the inner life of the University: when feather beds rented for $24 per year, six students to a bed and bed-bugs in tolerable.

The program of studies drawn up by Davie was then commented upon and instances given of the time when Society life ran high. The "Debating Society" was organized in 1795 with James Mebane President. It was divided July, '95, the new division being called "Concord" which was changed a year after to the Philanthropic and the other division was called the Dialectic. Among some of the queries debated were: "Is female modesty natural or affected?"—the Committee's decision was "very affected;" "Should a man marry for beauty or gold"—it will suffice to say the Committee was composed entirely of gold-bugs.

On account of lack of space only a snatch of Dr. Battle's lecture could be used by THE TAR HEEL. It will be of pleasure to many to know that our post-bellum "Father of the University" is at work on "The History of the University" which will be published at no distant date.

Reception at Dr. Venable's.

A pleasant reception was given to the faculty and to a few students at the home of Dr. Venable Monday evening. From the hours of 8 to 11, one student present reports that he seemed to be transferred to another world, unconscious of time and trouble, conscious only of the happy present. And so with all, the evening was happily spent, even though the spending was recklessly rapid.

The few hours quickly disappeared in absorbing games plus the courses served and if time still lingered the woman music-touch softly shoved time along.

Many of the faculty were out and from among the student body the following were present: Lewis I. F., Dunn, 04, Turner, 03 Smith 04 and Gordon '03 and Coach Olcott. The following young ladies were present: Miss Mary Hume, Miss Marian Hume, of Portsmouth, who is visiting Miss Hume; Miss Margaret Alexander; Misses Mary Thompson, of Raleigh, and Anne Taylor, of Pittsboro, who are visiting Miss Louise Venable; Misses Lucy and Penelope Cobb and Francis MacRae.

FURMAN DEFEATED

In a Hard-Fought Game Last Saturday.

CAROLINA, 10; FURMAN, 0.

The Game Was a Furious Struggle from Start to Finish—Carolina Met an Aggregation of Gridiron Warriors Worthy of Her Steel—Large Crowd Present.

Relying upon the assumption that we have for many years, indeed from the very inception of the field game, been represented by teams which have proved superior to any of the Southern universities and colleges, it was natural for us to class Furman as an easy proposition and unworthy of due consideration. But when we were apprised of the fact that the South Carolinians had held the strong A. & M. team, which has repeatedly and boastfully said that it will defeat us in November, to a tie game, neither side scoring, and that Davidson, our strongest State opponent has succumbed to their terrific blows and severe line plunging, we became uneasy and apprehensive and accordingly prepared ourselves to have a battle royal with the Palmetto boys.

And indeed it was a hard and furious struggle. Carolina for the first time this season had run against an aggregation of gridiron warriors worthy of her steel and it was evident after the first rush that if the white and blue were to wave triumphantly in the breeze victory could only be had by hard, fast, terrible foot ball. Varsity played this sort of a game with the exception of the second half, and when the great mass of dirty, sweaty humanity had cleared the field the "Tar Heels," as on two former occasions had subdued the enemy, taking unto themselves 10 more points and sustaining all previous records by not permitting the enemy to score.

While the score is not satisfactory in the least, it is in all probability to our advantage that we did not roll up a tremendous one. Had our boys not fumbled the ball at the most critical stages of the game we would have defeated the visitors easily by a score of 20 to 0. Of course the wet condition of the grounds rendered spectacular runs and star plays impossible and prevented the best exhibition of team work, but to many students Carolina, under these circumstances played a very disappointing game and did not measure up to her usual high standard. If we are to defeat Virginia this year we must be aroused to a consciousness of our true position.

A large number of spectators had gathered, despite the unfavorable weather, to witness the gridiron struggle and support their respective teams.

At 2.50 Graves, with a good wind behind him, sent the pig skin far into the territory of the South Carolinians and Sublett advanced the ball 15 yards. After bucking Carolina's line and finding it impregnable Holland stepped back and punted the ball to Graves who by good hard work advanced 20 yards. Newton was given the leather and made five yards through the visitors' line and on the next pass circled left end for 7. A sharp signal was heard, then a hard clash and Ingle was pushed over the line for a touch down.

Time 4 minutes, 35 seconds. Jones failed to kick goal. Score Carolina 5—Furman 0.

Sublett, after running a distance of something over a mile, finally planted his foot against the ball. The kick was fearful and the ball went out of bounds. Carolina brought the ball out 25 yards and Berkeley continued the "agony."

For a few moments the visitors made the required distance but fumbled and Berkeley secured the ball. By beautiful interference Greene skirted left end for 30 yards but on the next pass Carolina fumbled the ball. Furman was unable to advance the leather and Sublett sent the pig skin to Graves who advanced 15 yards. Carolina being held on downs Berkeley kicked 35 yards and Townsend downed Mr. Scaife in his tracks. Furman was off side, and the ball was given to Carolina. Berkeley skirted right end for 20 yards and Newton, following, went 15. Ingle then bucked the line for seven yards. Carolina was then on Furman's 5 yard line. Newton plunged through the line of the visitors and scored the second touch down.

Time 11 minutes.

Score Carolina 10—Furman 0.

THE SECOND HALF.

Holland drove the ball to Fisher who cleverly dogged the enemy and went 20 yards before he was downed. Jacocks and Berkeley made magnificent runs, the latter going 20 yards. McRae was substituted in the place of Berkeley. Jacocks and McRae each in turn made 10 yard runs but on the next three passes Carolina gained no ground and the ball went over. Furman found Carolina's line still stiff and Holland kicked to Graves who ran 20 yards. Jacocks and McRae went 8 and 10 yards respectively. On the next pass Foust gained four yards and for the first time in his life we believe, he was knocked out, but after a few minutes walk he went back in the game with his usual grit and determination. Carolina was unable to carry the ball forward. Here Furman took a brace and things began to look gloomy. Sublett carried the ball around right end for 15 yards and Holland circled left for 10. On account of an improper formation the

The October number of the Magazine is just out, and on the whole is a very creditable issue. With this appearance several striking changes have been made which, we think, will add many points to the merits of the new volume. First, it has been made larger and comes out with uncut edges; and, for the light-brown dress with the coat of arms of North Carolina there has been substituted a gray cover with our Library front in black. Another change is the Literary department has been subdivided into the department of History, Letters, Political Science, Fiction, Science, General Interest, Poetry and Books.

The editors are enthusiastic in this work and are determined to make the Magazine of 1902-'03 a success. And with the intellectual support of the student-body there is no reason why every issue should not be good. The aim of the Magazine is to publish so much of the student thought as shall be worthy of preservation, and to this end the two Literary Societies have assumed the cost and responsibility of its publication. Students, let your contributions be as free and as numerous as your wonted criticisms and their efforts shall not be vain.

One of the most delightful features of the exercises Monday was the music furnished by the University Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Woollen. It was indeed a delightful surprise to us all to know that our orchestra has so wonderfully improved. To Mr. Woollen and the other members we can say truly, in the words of President Venable: "We are proud of you."

In the game with Furman last Saturday the Varsity's line work in breaking up Furman's plays was especially good, and had there been equally as good defensive with the ends and backs, the score would have been easily 20 to 0.

Varsity, strengthen yourself in this respect before it is too late.

From the Greensboro Patriot we learn that Mr. Leonard Charles Van Noppen, '95, was a few days ago married at Jamestown, N. Y., to Miss Adah Becker, an accomplished young woman who is prominent in social and literary circles in the Empire State. Since leaving the University Mr. Van Noppen has achieved fame as a poet, author and lecturer. Why not have him to lecture to the students of the University? To invite him to come would be only to extend to him a courtesy that is justly due him from his Alma Mater.

Owing to the fact that University Day (October 12th) fell this year on Sunday, holiday was given Monday and the usual exercises were held in the Chapel. The speaker of the day was Dr. K. P. Battle who delivered a most interesting and instructive address on the "Early History of the University."

In this issue is an article headed, "On to Richmond" advocating the inauguration of a movement which we heartily endorse. Let the President of the Athletic Association call a meeting and start this at once and there is no doubt but that three or four hundred U. N. C. students will witness the Richmond game in November.

Manager Dunn wishes to inform those who have subscribed to the foot ball fund that it is time to "pay up." He assures them that their promptness to heed this notice will be appreciated.

"On to Richmond."

The suggestion has been made several times in the past to run an excursion to the Virginia game and no excursion has ever been run. And the reason why this has fallen flat is probably twofold: in the first place though a large number of students were in favor of running the excursion no one took the lead, no one made any systematic effort to see could such an excursion be run. In the second place there was not enough faith in Carolina.

Even this early in the season, however, we believe firmly that this second reason is crushed out of existence. And even this early in the season we do not hesitate in saying that we do not believe this faith is going to be ill put.

And so the only thing for us to do now is to get some one to take the lead and on November 27th, four hundred white and blue pennants will triumphantly wave on the side lines of the Richmond field.

Suggestion is therefore made that the president of the athletic association call an early meeting of the student body—with in two weeks possibly—and have a committee of students, who have an eye for business, appointed. An excursion could start from Durham and go direct to Richmond early Thursday morning and return that evening. To be conservative about the number, four hundred tickets could be sold. A special train of course would take the students from Chapel Hill to Durham while special rates could be given from Raleigh, Greensboro and other points near the starting point, Durham.

If four hundred tickets were sold the round trip ticket from Chapel Hill to Richmond would be about $1.25. Now we do not expect everybody in the University to take this trip but if two hundred and fifty students were to go, the one hundred and fifty tickets bought by those in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro and other points near. Let our cry be, therefore, not from the unprepared Yankee standpoint, but from the point of view of the strong white and blue, "On to Richmond."

Two Sad Deaths.

It is with deep sorrow that we chronicle the death of little Robert, son of Rev. and Mrs. N. M. Watson, which occurred Friday night, October 10. To the grief-stricken parents in their hour of sorrow we extend our heart-felt sympathy.

On Wednesday, October 15, the angel of death again visited Chapel Hill and claimed as his victim Miss Mary Lassiter. Miss Lassiter was a sister to the wife of Mr. C. E. Conwell, of the Medical class '03. To the relatives and friends we offer the sympathy of us all.

A training table for the foot ball men has been started up at Commons. Some students who always look at questions from the physical point of view say they had rather win a chair at this table than win a sweater. However leaving this aside the fare is excellent and will surely help our men to get in good training for the hard games before us this season. The following are now at the table: Foust, Stewart, Berkeley, Jones, G., Engle, Cox, Townsend, Albright, Fisher, Farlow, Newton, Jacocks and Coach Olcott.

The two literary societies have decided to send a challenge to Georgia for one debate next spring, the place not being named in the challenge. The place is purposely left out so that if so desired by the two Universities the debate may be held possibly in South Carolina or Tennessee.

Committees have been appointed from the two Societies to look into the advisability of publishing this year's Yackety Yack. The sentiment seems to be overwhelming in favor of it.

Our professional departments are very rapidly increasing. Every year men finish at Elon, Guilford, Trinity, Davidson and Wake Forest, and enter these schools, of their own accord. Why should not these amateurs be allowed to play on the Varsity when such is the case? Would anything else be just to them—just to ourselves?

Exchanges.

The usefulness and interest attached to this department are of course in direct proportion to the number and representative character of the Exchanges received. While many institutions to the south and west of us have sent their sheets—and they are not of an inferior kind—very few of those to the north have responded yet. THE LAFAYETTE, THE ATHENAËON (U. of W. Va.) and THE RING TUM PHI (Washington and Lee) are the only Exchanges that have been received from institutions north of us. This department is anxiously awaiting the arrival of their belated friends of former years.

Y. M. C. A.

The first meeting of the Bible classes, of the Young Men's Christian Association, was held Sunday in the Alumni Building. Nearly Sixty men were present. About seventy-five students so far have been enrolled in the class requiring daily systematic study of the great Book of books. Dr. Battle's lecture Sunday morning at nine o'clock is also well attended.

G. P. Stevens and H. R. McFadyen are preparing to organize two more Bible classes under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. They want about ten or twelve men in each class. Any student therefore who has not yet decided to take one of the Bible courses would do well to see either Stevens or McFadyen about the classes they will teach.

The Mission study class of the Y. M. C. A. will hold a weekly meeting each Sunday night at nine o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. room in Old West. The first meeting will be held tomorrow night. About a dozen students have joined this class.

"Gym" Notes.

Physical examinations will be made every Saturday afternoon during October. Make your appointments with the Physical Director before it is too late.

A special class in Indian Club swinging will commence on Tuesday, Oct. 21, after the regular class work. This class is open to all—it meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

A class in fencing will be organized to meet Saturday afternoon. All desirous of going in for this sport are asked to hand their names to Mr. von den Steinen. Each man entering this class will be expected to furnish his own equipment. For further information see the Physical Director. It is hoped that this class will start to work by November 1st.

ball was brought back to its former place. McNeill, Jones and Foust made splendid gains through the line. McRae then circled left end for 25 yards. A touch down looked certain. We were on Furman's 3 yard line, but on the next pass Jacocks fumbled and the ball belonged to Furman. Furman was unable to make any gain through our line and Holland kicked 10 yards. Jacocks went 5 yards and McRae 6. Foust carried the ball for 5 yards. Carolina was then on Furman's 5 yard line when time was called.

Great Demand for Our Chemists.

The Chemical Department of the University is maintaining a splendid reputation for competent and capable Chemists. In the interests of students who intend to specialize in Chemistry, and those at present at work in this branch, we may say that the demand for Chemists turned out by the University exceeds the supply.

Last session every man who completed the course in Chemistry took a responsible position. Two places were filled in Alabama (where seven University Chemists are employed); one place in Connecticut; one in Minnesota; one in Delaware; and three places in North Carolina. One position offered in Georgia, and two positions each in Alabama and North Carolina were turned down—all the available men having been placed beforehand. Since September 1st, this year, the following positions have been turned down: one offer from Pennsylvania, one from Delaware, one from Georgia and three offers from Alabama.

The Department does not recommend a student, special, graduate or postgraduate, until he is ready to do efficient work. As a result of this method not a single Chemist sent out has failed to give satisfaction. In fact, wherever a University man has been placed, there has followed, invariably, a request for another U. N. C. Chemist.

The work done by the Chemical Department is a criterion of that executed in the other Departments of the University.

Vol. 11,

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1902.

No. 5.

THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

WE WON EASILY

In the Game at Charlotte Last Saturday.

CAROLINA, 27; DAVIDSON, 0.

The Davidson Men Could Not Cope with Their Heavier Opponents—Berkeley Makes an 80-Yard Run—Graves Kicks Two Goals from the Field—The Line-up.

In its report of the Carolina-Davidson game, played in Charlotte last Saturday, the Charlotte Observer has the following to say:

In the game of foot ball between the University and Davidson, yesterday, the University won by a score of 27 to 0. The University made her first touch-down in six minutes and kicked a goal. Fourteen minutes later Graves, University's quarterback, kicked a goal, making the score 11 to 0. Before the first half was ended Graves distinguished himself by kicking a second goal from the field, making the score 16 to 0.

In the second half both the teams played only eight minutes, owing to the lateness of the hour; but in this brief space the University scored two touch downs, failing to kick goal on the first score. This gave the University a total of 27 points.

THE GAME.

Davidson kicked off and the University got the ball, and carried it down the field with a succession of heavy rushes until it was fumbled and secured by Davidson. Davidson advanced the ball for several downs, but fumbled, and Carolina again secured the pig skin. With plunging through the centre and sharp end rushes, aided by the fact that Davidson was penalized ten yards, the University resistlessly swept down the grid-iron and scored without difficulty. In the first part of the game Berkeley did good work, materially assisting his team by a 20-yard run.

Davidson kicked off, and Carolina secured the ball on the 33-yard line. They advanced the ball one or two downs. Davidson obtained the ball and made steady gains for six downs; but Carolina gained the leather on a fumble. Carolina, after rushing heavily, was compelled to kick. Carolina next attempted plunging tactics altogether, but not being able to make the distance after a dozen rushes the ball went over. After bucking at Carolina's centre half a dozen times Caldwell, Davidson's captain and right tackle, made a brilliant 25-yard run around Carolina's left end. Further line smashing by Davidson brought that team to the point where another kick necessary. Carolina returned the kick, and Davidson gained 15 yards by the exchange of full back amenities. For some time both sides handled the pigskin frequently, and suddenly the most spectacular play of the game was made, when Berkeley broke loose from his pursuers and carried the ball in Davidson's territory for the distance of 80 yards and within 18 yards of the goal line. Here Graves made a beautiful kick that sent the ball right between the posts.

Davidson kicked off, and the ball was kept in Davidson's ground until it was again near the latter's goal, when Graves' foot came into heady use again and he kicked another goal from the field.

There were no features in the second half of the game. The University maintained an easy superiority and scored without any effort.

Both teams played good, snappy ball, but the University men were much too heavy for their opponents, outweighing them, man to man, about 18 pounds.

For Davidson Caldwell did first rate playing, as did Johnson at centre and McLeon at full back. Graves and Berkeley were the stars for the University. Coach H. B. Olcott, expressed himself as decidedly pleased at the playing of all of his men.

The officials of the game were: Mr. L. M. Dodsworth, umpire; Dr. J. P. Munroe, referee; time-keeper, Dr. J. M. Douglass.

The attendance was about 500 and included warm friends of both teams, who kept things lively with incessant yelling. The Davidson boys returned home last night. The University boys stayed over night at the Central and will leave for Chapel Hill this morning.

Another View of Indian Summer.

There's a haze in the air—
In Indian Summer;
There's contentment everywhere,
In this pleasing season of the year;
How better to do away with care,
Than to give oneself to fancy,
At this season of the year,
Wheresoever she may lead you,
Whether here or whether there;
Put yourself in passive mood,
To nature lend an ear,
Let your soul dilate with drinking,
Sounds and sights far and near.

Faculty Rules Relative to Athletic, Musical Clubs, Debaters and Marshals.

1.—No student will be allowed to take part in athletic games, contests, etc., entailing absence from the University, whose parents or guardian object to such participation.

2.—A student who was in attendance upon the University during a previous term or session must pass satisfactory examinations upon at least six hours of work to be eligible as a representative upon an athletic team, musical club, or as debater or marshal.

3.—No student reported as deficient in a majority of his classes can participate in any athletic contest representing the University until the deficiency is made good.

4.—No team or club shall be allowed to be absent for more than five lecture days during the term.

5.—The manager of each athletic team, or musical club shall present the President and the Committee on Athletics of the Faculty, a schedule of all games before positive engagements are made.

6.—No student shall be eligible for an athletic team unless he has registered on or before October 12.

7.—No student who has received, or is receiving now, or has been promised directly or indirectly any money or compensation in lieu of money, for athletic services, shall be eligible as a player upon any athletic team representing the University, and each candidate for such team must sign a statement to the effect that he is not ineligible under this rule.

"U. N. C."

It is a peculiar coincidence that the ground plan of our campus seems to be laid out on the letters U. N. C.

At the top left hand tip of the "U" is the Carr building, opposite to this on the right hand tip is the University Library. Half way down the left branch of the "U" is the New East building, just across from this on the right branch is the Old East. At the bottom of the curve is the Alumni building.

At the top left hand tip of the "N" is the South building, and on the right hand tip is Gerrard Hall. Half way down the left hand side is the dear old college well, and at the lower tip of the same side is the historic Davie poplar. Midway down the right hand side is the Old West building, and below this at the end of the same side is the Chemical Laboratory.

At the one point of the "C" is Memorial Hall, at the other tip is the Mary Ann Smith building, and midway between these on the curve of the "C" is the New West.

If you lay out these points you will find that you have a pretty accurate plan of the campus of our beloved U. N. C.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

It is indeed gratifying to note the increased interest that is being taken in class team work, and to see so many men trying for positions on the several teams. These teams are practicing regularly every afternoon and are developing fast. This means more than one is likely to judge at a casual glance. If we mistake not, it means an abundance of fairly well developed material for the Varsity and scrub teams of next year.

Now, in view of the fact that so many of our best men get their preliminary training on the class teams, and that active interest in these teams means so much for the Varsity of the future, the TAR HEEL wishes to suggest that, in order to keep up this interest, arrangements be made and a committee of three be appointed to select an All Class team at the end of this season. Surely this would serve as an incentive to greater efforts on the part of the players, and we must think would be productive of much good.

In the game with Davidson last Saturday the Varsity did even better than we had anticipated. Having heard so much about the strength of Davidson's team, we were expecting a fierce struggle. When we consider the score was 27 to 0 in our favor, and that the teams played only eight minutes in the second half within which time we made two touch-downs, we must conclude one of two things: either our opponents are weaker or our Varsity is stronger than we had expected. Let us hope the latter is the correct conclusion.

Again it becomes our duty to enter protest against a custom which, to us, seems as thoughtless as it is wrong, and that is the barbarous practice of cutting and tearing the magazines and papers found upon our exchange table in the library. Whoever you are you should remember that the very article you clip may be equally as interesting to some one else, and that if it is worth saving, it is worth copying. Please take this into consideration, and try to be little less selfish and a little more thoughtful.

We very much regret the fact that we are unable to publish the lecture delivered Thursday evening in the chapel by Dr. H. F. Linscott on "Pure Scholarship: Its Place in Civilization."

We are glad to announce, however, that this lecture will soon appear in full in the Atlantic Quarterly. It is owing to this that we are unable to use it.

"Gymn" Notes.

Two hand-ball courts will be ready for service the end of the week. The courts are located back of the gymnasium. All that is needed is a tennis ball. The rules of the game are as follows:

1. The game must consist of twenty-one points—two, three or four persons may play.
- 2. The side serving, alone scores. Each good serve or each good ball in play unreturned by the side receiving, counts one point for the server. Failure to return a good ball in turn retires the server.
3. The ball must be served from behind the service line, must strike the service wall and land in the outer court.
4. If the ball, when served, strikes the server or his partner it retires the server. If it strikes an opponent before or after bouncing it becomes unplayable and counts a point.
5. A "fault" consists of a ball not served over the service line or a ball served over the back line. Two consecutive faults shall retire the server.
6. When a fault has been served the opponent has the liberty of returning it if he so desires.
7. In a four handed game the side first serving is allowed only one service at the commencement. The server's partner must stand outside the court until the ball is served.
8. After the server has been retired he shall be given sufficient time to get into position before play is resumed.
9. All ball must be returned on the fly or on first bounce from the ground.
10. When the ball strikes the returner's partner it shall count against them.
11. The use of the foot is debarred and only one hand may be used in striking the ball. Violation of this rule shall count against the side so doing.
12. A "hinder" is (1) when a ball strikes an opponent and is prevented or retarded from service wall; or (2) when the proper return of the ball is prevented by the proximity of an opponent or spectator; or (3) when the ball strikes any apparatus within the court line and [when travelling towards the service wall] such apparatus is not higher than the service wall; or (4) when the ball strikes anything on the face of service wall which causes it to be deflected from its true course.
- The causing of hinder by any player, as in the first two sections of this rule, which appears to be intentional, shall count against such player.
13. A ball striking on the line is in the court.
14. A tennis or a regulation hand ball is used.

Fencing class will begin Saturday afternoon, November 15. All those desiring to take part should see the Physical Director as soon as possible. There are no extra fees. Each man must furnish his own foils and masks.

Col. Thomas Mason and Judge MacRae each addressed the Society for a few minutes.

The Di. Society debated the question, Resolved: "That the school taxes for public schools should be divided between the races in proportion to the amount each pays."

The negative won. Mr. Hendley made the best debate.

He had shown that he was mettle—
That his steel was tried and true.

With an air of mild composure

While he saw his comrades fall.

He was skilled in all the battles

Wherein firearms play no part,
Fought by votaries of Cupid—
Here he lost both head and heart.

Season tickets to the Star Course of lectures can be bought now from the faculty committee on lectures of which Dr. Baskerville is chairman. These tickets are sold at $2.50 now, or if bought just before each lecture or entertainment will amount to $3.25. The first of the star course comes November 13th.

The "On to Richmond" cry is being heard in earnest. Three-fourths of the students talk as if they are going, provided the train can be secured at a reasonable rate. As we have said before, however we do not expect all the students in the University to go—they ought to go—but we almost know that a large enough number combined with enthusiasts from Durham, Raleigh and other points nearby could be secured so as to get a reasonable rate for an excursion. The railroad officials have already been written to and we shall soon be able to give something definite about the financial part of the trip.

A glee club is being organized in the University and very few students seem to know anything about it. Various notices have been posted for a meeting of those interested in such an organization but the student body as a whole has not yet taken hold of the thing and given it strong support. Several of the best voices, however, are in it and have already commenced practicing. Galloway, Gudger, Woolen, Ehringhaus and several new men were present at the Chapel Monday night. Linebach, of Winston, has temporary charge of the club and is giving much of his time in trying to make it a success. Until further notice the men will meet twice a week in the Chapel on Monday and Friday nights at 9 o'clock.

Dr. Hume addressed the members of the Philanthropic society Saturday night on "Disraeli." After this Col. Thomas W. Mason, who was present, made a short talk. Colonel Mason and Dr. Hume were schoolmates at the University of Virginia, the former having finished here went there to study law.

Ten prizes of one dollar each are offered by the University for the ten best pictures of views of the University buildings and campus and also of Battle's Park. The pictures are to be 4 x 6 or larger.

The Tar Heel goes to press thoroughly disappointed. Two columns were reserved for Dr. Linscott's address on "Pure Scholarship," but the writer was ordered to be silent or his fate would be sacratio capitis. Reporters, however, yellow journal or college journal, are not bound by any request or requisition but in this particular case, silence is a prudent policy.

The Atlantic Quarterly it somehow happens, has a mortgage on this popular lecture and its wording will appear in the October number of that lucky publication.

"Then let us pray that Come it may
As come it will for
A' that,
And come it will, as come
It must."
This much we'll say and
Be "cusst."

The place of pure scholarship in civilization and its essentiality to progress were given in neat outlines. A full house enjoyed a full-some pleasure.

This address was delivered before the North Carolina Teachers Assembly last June and attracted no little attention.

Juniors Defeat Sophomores.

The Athletic Editor is greatly indebted to Mr. Perry, manager of the Sophomore foot ball team, for the following account of the Soph-Junior game played last Saturday.

The first class game of the season was played Saturday afternoon between the Juniors and the Sophomores. The teams were nearly evenly matched and it was only through the speed of the players that the Juniors succeeded in making one goal.

1st Half. Juniors kicked off to Sophomores. The game was played entirely in the Juniors' territory. The Sophomores were in four yards of the goal when the half ended. The only feature was Brutus' getting off side continually. He even surpassed Blackwell's records of last year.

2nd Half. The game at first was with the Sophomores but by a series of hard plays the Juniors advanced the ball some distance into the Sophomores' territory. Then Capt. Irwin made the play of the game. He skirted the left end of the Sophs and after a beautiful run of 45 yards crossed the goal line. He kicked fair to Gregory and McNider kicked goal. The rest of the half was spent fighting over the centre of the field. Whitley and Worth played good ball for the Sophomores. Frost, Russell and MacNider played good ball for the Juniors but Erwin was easily their "star."

Score: Juniors 6; Sophomores 0.

A BRILLIANT GAME.

Carolina Meets Her Old Foe at Roanoke.

CAROLINA, 0; V. P. I., 0.

Carolina Grit and Virginia Pluck Interest Two Thousand Spectators—A Hard and Furious Struggle—The Result Was No Surprise.

On last Saturday in Roanoke Va., before two thousand enthusiastic spectators, of whom four hundred were rooters from Blacksburg filling the air with college songs and short jerky yells, Carolina, for the second time within the past three years, played the sturdy gridiron warriors of Virginia Polytechnic Institute a tie game, neither side showing such marked superiority over the other, as would allow a touch down to be credited.

It was a hard and furious struggle, both teams fighting stubbornly and strenuously for every inch of contested ground. The Virginians, however, managed to keep the pig skin in Carolina's territory during the first half, seriously threatening her goal on several occasions, coming at one time within 15 yards of their opponents' goal, from which they attempted a drop kick but made a most egregious failure. Again, after V. P. I., by a rapid succession of heavy line plunges and end plays, had advanced the leather to the 25 yard line of the "Tar Heels," Mr. Councilman, not satisfied with his former effort, stepped back and made another futile attempt at a drop kick from the field. This proved to be V. P. I.'s last chance to score.

The result of the game, to those thoroughly conversant with the foot ball world, comes as no surprise. It was believed, indeed predicted, by those competent to judge, that Carolina would do exceedingly well if she should divide honors with her strong Virginia rival. The names of Councilman, who was All-Southern full back last year; Carpenter, All-Southern left half back, and Ware, a brilliant end, were repeatedly mentioned in confirmation of their belief.

The V. P. I. game demonstrated beyond a doubt our weakness in returning the ball after receiving a kick off. To use a strong expression, the Virginians simply had us "skinned" in this respect, and by their ability thus properly to advance the ball accounts to a great extent for the game's being fought in our territory. Strengthen yourself on this weak point, Varsity and we will give Virginia—a sound drubbing.

THE GAME.

At 3.30 Captains Foust and Carpenter walked briskly to the center of the field; a coin was tossed into the air; heads fell, and Carolina chose to defend the west goal.

Councilman, for V. P. I., began the struggle by placing the ball over Carolina's goal. Carolina brought the ball out on the 25 yard line and Graves punted 45 yards. V. P. I. returned the leather 15. The Virginians hit Donnelly and were repulsed, but on the next pass plowed center for 4 yards. Carpenter was then sent through right guard for 10 yards and over left tackle for 2. Byrd hit Farlow for only one yard but on the next pass gained 4 yards over our big Quaker friend. The Virginians then tested Townsend's end and immediately formed a good opinion of the clever little player. Being unable to make the required distance the ball was given to Carolina. Jacocks hit the line for no gain. Mann went through right tackle for 5 yards. Jones repeated the performance. Jacocks again smashed the line for no gain and Mann did likewise. Carolina found the Virginia line stubborn and determined and was thus forced to surrender the ball.

Councilman went through Farlow for 3 yards and on the next pass gained 5. Byrd went over Jones for 3 yards. Carpenter hit the line for five yards through right tackle and made 3 over right guard. Councilman jumped the line for two yards. V. P. I. was then on Carolina's 15 yard line. In the next rush a V. P. I. man was off side and this considerably assisted the boys, who were hearing the continuous report, in breathing freely. Being on Carolina's 25 yard line, Carpenter signalled for a drop kick but was unable to send the leather in the right direction.

Graves drove the ball 35 yards and V. P. I. returned 20. By a beautiful tackle by Jacocks, V. P. I. lost three yards but on the next rush gained 5 through Jones and Townsend. V. P. I. then went 3 yards over tackle, 2 on a delayed pass and 3 over Foust. Carpenter passed Fisher for 4 yards and bucked center for 4 more. On "guards back" the Virginians hit Farlow but were thrown back and the same spirit prevailed at Mr. Donnelly's quarters. V. P. I. was then on Carolina's 30 yard line and Councilman anxious to score, attempted another drop kick but made a miserable failure.

Mann tried to circle left end but was downed for a loss of 3 yards. Graves, on a double pass, gained 10 yards. Foust bucked the line for 1 yard and Mann failed to gain. V. P. I. struck Jones and Townsend for 5 yards, but failed to make the distance over Farlow and Fisher. Jones smashed the line for 5 yards and on the next play hit center for 8.

Time up. Ball on Carolina's 45 yard line. Score: Carolina 0; V. P. I. 0.

SECOND HALF.

Graves drove the pig skin 40 yards into V. P. I.'s territory, but by a magnificent run, aided by a strong interference, Carpenter returned the ball 30 yards. On "guards back" formation the Virginians gained 4 yards, but on the next two assaults they found Foust and Farlow a tower of strength and the ball was given to Carolina. Foust carried the leather 4 yards and Engle made it one yard better. In the attempt to make a double pass Graves was thrown for a loss of 10 yards. Carolina then kicked 20 yards and V. P. I. returned 12 yards. Carpenter made 5 yards between Jones and Townsend, next pass circled Townsend's end for 10 yards. Holt was then substituted in Townsend's place. V. P. I. made 3 yards over Jones and 4 over Farlow. For not properly passing the ball Carolina was given 10 yards. The ball was then on Carolina's 38 yard line in her possession. Graves punted 35 yards and Byrd returned 25. After making several gains the ball was given to Carolina for holding in the line. Graves then kicked 25 yards and Fisher downed the man in his tracks. Carpenter was given the ball and skirted Holt's end for 20 yards. It availed them nothing, however, as the ball was given to Carolina for holding.

Mann bucked the line for 3 yards and Jones went 5 and 5 again. Mann hit centre for 5 yards and Jacocks went through tackle for 3. Foust hit the line for 8 yards. V. P. I. was given the ball for holding in the line. Carpenter kicked 35 yards and Graves only returned only 2 yards being tripped by Jacocks. Jacocks circled left end for 10 yards but fumbled. Newton relieved Jacocks. Graves sent the ball 40 yards and Fisher tackles his man in his tracks. After making two unsuccessful attempts to destroy our line, Councilman kicked 35 yards and Graves advanced 10. Graves drove the ball 40 yards and it was returned 10.

V. P. I. kicked 35 yards. Time up. Ball on Carolina's 45 yard line. Score: Carolina 0; V. P. I. 0. Two twenty minute halves.

In the Phi. Society: Query Resolved, "That an amendment should be made to our Constitution to regulate the trust."

The affirmative won. Mr. R. W. Herring was the best debater.

Shakespeare Club.

The first meeting of the Shakespeare Club, for this term, was held Thursday night, Dr. Thos. Hume, the President, called the house to order and appointed Messrs. Harvey and Horner and Gwyn as a nominating committee. Dr. C. A. Smith was unanimously chosen as Vice President and Mr. H. R. McFadyen, '03, as Secretary of the Club. These officers were instructed to announce the names of students who will compose the Executive Committee.

The attraction of the evening was an address by the President. After defining the purpose and aim of the organization, he drew attention to his subject, "The Evolution of Shakespeare's Chronicle Plays."

This topic the Doctor, in that entertaining conversational way in which he weaves himself into his subject and comes in close touch with his audience, developed under heads. (1) From the old ballads like Robin Hood. (2) The Chronicles of Hallinshed and old crude chronicles which combined historical figures with the humors and weakness of common humanity (3) The work of Greene and Marlowe which presented situations and types that were improved and added to by the plastic genius of Shakespeare. Included in his stock-in-trade were also old types and figures handed down from Greek and Latin Comedy as in Falstaff re-combined and idealized. Apt illustrations illuminated the subject throughout.

An appreciative assembly followed closely Dr. Hume's remarks and much interest was manifested. Many of the students lingered to give the Secretary their names, and others will doubtless offer theirs to the Executive Committee. Under the able direction of Drs. Hume and Smith an excellent opportunity is offered for literary research and magazine work.

The Soph-Junior debate between the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Societies will be held about three weeks from now. If the debaters have time enough to get ready they want to have the debate on the Friday night before Thanksgiving. The subject this year is "Resolved, That Our National Government Should Own and Operate the Coal Mines."

Hudson, '05, and Hudson, '04, will represent the Di.; Daniels, '05, and Dameron, '04, the Phi.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We take pleasure in announcing that the next lecture of the Faculty series will be delivered next Thursday evening, November 6, by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith. Dr. Smith will speak on "Literature and Industrialism."

It will doubtless be of interest to the friends of Mr. C. M. Byrnes, '02, to know that he has recently been appointed Demonstrator in Histology in Johns Hopkins University. It will be remembered that Mr. Byrnes won the worth prize in Philosophy here last spring. He is now studying medicine in the Hopkins Medical School.

Owing to the fact that Columbian University would not guarantee us a reasonable amount, our game with them, which was to be played at Washinton, D. C. next Monday, has been cancelled. Manager Dunn has tried to get a game with Washinton and Lee and with Gallaudet but has not succeeded.

President Venable has been absent at the installation of Woodrow Wilson as President of Princeton University. The University of North Carolina inherited certain traditions and characteristics from Princeton and it is eminently fitting that our able President should fill the conspicuous place assigned him in the inauguration.

In the game with V. P. I. last Saturday Carolina's weak point was her inability to advance after a kick from V. P. I. Another fault lay in her failure to break up the interference of the enemy. Doubtless both faults were largely due to the crippled condition of our team. We trust no such weaknesses will be manifested in the game with V. M. I. this P. M.

So much has been said about "college spirit" that when the student sees an article thus headed, his first impulse is to throw the paper aside or turn to some other topic. And so it seems like a vain effort on the part of the editor of a college journal to attempt to write on such a hackneyed subject. But somebody must do so, for if there has ever been a time when college spirit was needed at U. N. C. that time is now.

To observe the situation at present one must conclude that the tendency is now towards individualism. It seem that many think college spirit is a sort of fanaticism to be nurtured only by a few enthusiast and by the men who represent the University in athletics and intellectual contests. It is useless to point out the folly of such an idea.

Then there are others who think college spirit is a vague sort of "tom-foolery" to be harped upon by the editor of the college journal, and that if there be such a spirit, it should be found in the columns of the college paper rather in the life of the student body. Foolish notion! It is true the college paper should reflect the true college spirit, but pray, how can it do so when there is practically none to reflect!

If we were allowed to express our view as to the meaning of college spirit we should say it is that unity of fraternal feeling inspired by the love for our Alma Mater which makes every student stand by her in all her undertakings, rejoicing with her representatives and sharing their praise and pleasure in victory, standing by them as firmly and sustaining them in defeat, thus inspiring them to greater effort in the future. Back University teams of all sorts by such feeling and victory is half-won ere the contest begins. Let us have such a spirit here once more, let the men who represent us know that we as a student body—as 'a unit—are behind them and that defeat or victory is not theirs but ours.

We had hoped to publish in this issue Coach Olcott's criticism of the individual players on our foot ball team. No doubt the students expected it, and we intended to give it, but Mr. Olcott, for some reasons best known to himself which are plausible, has refused to make such a criticism for publication.

The "Live Forever Plant" a Fake.

To the Editor of THE TAR HEEL,
Dear Sir:

It may interest those of your readers who paid 25 cents for the "Siempre Viva" or "Live Forever Plant" recently sold in our town, and who are now tenderly caring for "the world's greatest curiosity" in pleasant anticipation of the fragrant flowers promised, to know that this is not a flowering plant at all and will consequently never bear flowers. It is one of the fern allies—a species of Selaginella, probably Selaginella lepidophylla from Mexico and California. It will live a long time without water, but repeated dampening and drying will finally kill it. One species of Selaginella grows in the neighborhood of Chapel Hill but it is in the tropics that this genus is most luxuriant. The "Live Forever Plant" is a comparatively insignificant member of the group, and has no claim to being considered a curiosity beyond its power of resistance to drought and its rapid expansion when moistened.

Very truly yours,
W. C. Coker

An Appeal.

(With apologies to Robert Herrick.)

Ah Ven!
Say how or when Shall we, aflame,
Go to the final game,
Played at Richmond—
Save by excursion;
There where we all would be,
To loudly shout for U. N. C.?
And yet one word of thine
Can still the shouts, the Rooters hoarse confine.

Great Ven!
Ah think again;
Oh let us go
To see them slay the foe:
And as they play
On great Thanksgiving Day,
And as the cheers resound
Which hail our men the victors crowned,
With loud acclaim
O'er all the rest
Shall ring thy glorious name!
NEMO.

Horner vs. Sophomores.

Last Saturday afternoon the Sophomore class team defeated the Horner Military School by a score of 32 to 0. The Horner boys were considerably lighter and on that account were at a disadvantage, but they seemed to suffer most from a lack of practice. Considering everything, therefore, we think that they put up a good game.

1st Half. Horner kicked off to the Sophomores. It was plain from the start that the Sophomores had the best team. They scored four touch downs. Time 15 minutes.

2nd Half. At first the Horner team rallied and for a few minutes it seemed that the Sophomores' goal was in danger but the Horner boys soon wore out and before the half was over the Sophomores made two more touch downs.

Pierce, Thomas, and W. P. Emerson played good ball for the Horner team but Wilcox was the life of it. All the Sophomores played good steady ball but Haywood did the fancy playing. He made several pretty runs around the ends.

We think that the Horner boys with two weeks' steady practice will put up a good game if the Sophomores are able to meet them then.

"Rex" Perry.

According to an exchange, an Arkansas editor upon entering his "sanctum sanctorum" for the first time sends out the following statements:

"Our aim—Tell the truth though the heavens take a tumble.

Our paper—Of the people, for the people, to be paid for by the people.

Our religion—Othodox with a firm befeif in Hell for relinquent subscribers.

Our motto—Take all in sight and hustle for more.

Our policy—To aid our friends and brimstone our enemies. If thine enemy smite thee on the cheek, swipe him with haste and dexterity at the butt of his most convenient ear.

What we advocate—One country, one flag, one wife—at a time.

Our object—To live in pomp and splendor."

Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

The Mitchell Society met in the Chemical lecture room Tuesday evening, October 21st.

President Venable gave an interesting account of the Pittsburg meeting of the American Asssocation for the Advancement of Science, of the important work done by U. N. C. men at the meeting and of the honors and offices conferred upon them.

Professor Gore told of the work in physics and of the great advances made in electrical appliances on transportation in which our own country leads the world.

Dr. Wheeler told of chemistry and metallurgy at the meeting and gave an interesting account of visits to metallurgical works and to a pickling factory. The North Carolina men at the meeting were shown around by old University students, among them D. M. Swink, '01, who holds an important position with a big electrical company in Pittsburg.

Officers for the present year were elected as follows: Collier Cobb, President; W. C. Coker, Vice-President; F. P. Venable, Permanent Secretary; Chas. Baskerville, Recording Secretary.

Several new members of the society were elected.

Dr. Thomas Hume will lecture in Wilson November 14th before the Woman's Book Club of that place on "Hamlet."

In the Di. Society, they suspended exercises to attend Dr. Stagg's lecture.

Redfern, '06, has announced himself on the bulletin board as an independent candidate for president of the Freshman class. In the absence of having any remarks to say on the Freshman platform, he gave the Phillipine question "a down and out" in the chapel Friday night until some bad student in the gallery put a cool quietus on the proceedings with a bucket of water.

Bully Jones says the people of Roanoke have not much patriotic feeling for the Old North State. When our foot ball fellows tried to give "Yackety Yack" in a theatre there Saturday night, some one wanted them put out.

Robinson, '05, has been secured to lead one of the Bible classes which the Young Men's Christian Association offers. He will have half of the section which Barnhart now has in "The Life of Christ," as there were too many in this section for one leader. All of the classes are having good attendance and much interest is being shown.

Battle's Park is changing daily now. A walk through the same paths each afternoon seems to bring one to a scene he has never before looked upon. The leaves are just a little more drooping and thin and their color is rapidly deepening. Several fine views for kodak pictures are now presented from the paths all through the square mile of scenery.

The Rev. C. A. Jenkins, of Goldsboro, N. C., is the University preacher for this coming Sunday, November 2nd, and is Dr. Hume's guest. He will fill the pulpit of the Baptist church Sunday morning and will address the student body of the University at night. He has been a successful pastor in Northern cities and in this State and is a very interesting preacher.

Dr. Hume spent last Saturday and Sunday at Elon College, where he went to preach the monthly sermon to that institution. Saturday night he delivered his scholarly lecture "From Mystery Play to Shakespeare." Sunday morning he preached the regular monthly sermon. Sunday afternoon he lectured to the Young Men's Christian Association on "The Association as a Spiritual Power." Sunday night he spoke on "Literary Study of the Bible and its Relation to Devotional Study."

Mr. Warren Klutz, '99, the Ping Pongist, who has been carrying out some special work in Chemistry, left for his home in Salisbury. He goes in a few days to Birmingham, where a position has been offered him with the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company.

A telegraph wire has been run to the Chapel and during the remaining part of the season telegraphic reports of the important games our team plays from home will be received in the Chapel.

The query for the Johns Hopkins debate is to be sent off this week. Strong debaters from both societies are entering their names for the competitive contest which will decide what two men will represent Carolina. In a few weeks they will all be hard at work.

Gwyn, '03, who has been corresponding with the railroads about the proposed trip to Richmond on Thanksgiving Day to see the Carolina-Virginia game says that we cannot run an excursion. He is informed that there is some regulation against running an excursion after October 1st from one state to another. We do not mean to pose as knowing how to run the railroads better than the present officials but if such is the case, as is reported around the campus, that an excursion cannot be run from one state to another after October 1st, we think it imposes a great injustice upon us. We hope, however, this report is not true and that in some way three or four hundred Tar Heels may manage to see the great struggle on Thanksgiving Day.

Dr. J. Wm. Jones will preach his farewell sermon Sunday morning at the Baptist church. The students of the University are given a cordial invitation to be present.

The Washington Post in its report of the game between the Universities of Virginia and Kentucky last Saturday says at the first big rush there was a general scrimmage and no one seemed to know head from tails until Council was seen leisurely jogging along for the first touchdown Virginia made.

Dr. Stagg's Addresses.

Rev. J. W. Stagg, of Charlotte, came Friday to deliver three addresses here under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. The first was given Friday night to a good crowd. The second was given Saturday and the last Sunday night. One of the largest crowds was present at the Sunday night service that has been seen in the Chapel this fall. The words delivered by Dr. Stagg were plain and practical and thoroughly in touch with the needs of student life.

Rooting.

Beneath a campus oak a glinting light was shining,
As the strength of a western sun was fast declining.
I thoughtless thought it but a piece of rounded glass,
Till the college bell's ringing brought me near to pass.
A bare-headed-head in unprotected veritage
Shone with all the lustre of last hair-i-tage
The Judge longing lay low between the rugged roots—
What cared he for wigs or twigs—Caliguloots!

Harvard beginning with the class of 1005 will confer the degree of A. B. at the end of three years of successful study. Columbia is sincerely considering a similar change.

After canvassing the situation The Hustler concludes that the championship in Southern Inter-Collegiate Foot Ball rests with Virginia, North Carolina, and Louisiana State University and Vanderbilt. Our worthy contemporary says, "Virginia's players are composed of old men from other colleges but men new to each other. Their squad is exceptionally strong."

"North Carolina's team is comparatively weak and will have to show great improvement before it reaches the class of Virginia and Vanderbilt."

"Louisiana State plays Vanderbilt, and Virginia plays Carolina. Should these four be successful in all other games, a post-season game would then very probably be necessary to decide the Southern Championship."

We very readily account for The Hustler estimate of our team; a card was received a few days ago stating that only one copy of the Tar Heel had been received. For information we give Carolina's record—N. C. 16, Guilford 0; N. C. 35, Oak Ridge 0; N. C. 10, Furman 0; N. C. 27, Davidson 0; N. C. 0, V. P. I. O. So, our goal line has not yet been crossed. For the rest of the games scheduled the Varsity will answer. We join with The Hustler in saying, "Here's to the best team, and may the 'Bird of Victory' rest on her standard."

Hon. Philander Case Knox, Attorney General of the United States, was once a student of the University of West Virginia. He was expelled "ostensibly for going to the theatre."

AMERICAN SLAVERY

Dr. Jones Addresses the Historical Society

VERY INTERESTING LECTURE

The Origin, History and Effects of Slavery Discussed from the Standpoint of the South—Slavery Did Not Hinder Development of Literature.

Dr. J. William Jones, under the auspices of the Historical Society, delivered another of his "favorites" Tuesday evening: "American Slavery; its Origin, History and Effects."

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Kemp P. Battle, President of the Society, not as one of the old time aristocrat slave owners but as a whole-soul believer in the rights of Southern slave holders.

Dr. Jones expressed his appreciation for the large audience present, which had gathered to hear him in his last lecture before he takes up the new work at Richmond, and pitched in on his subject with that fervency of spirit in which he has been so long serving the "Old South."

"I do not propose to discuss the moral right of our fathers to hold slaves. They thought that as Abraham, the friend of God, Isaac, the devoted servant of the most High, and Moses, the law giver of Israel—they thought that as these great, good men held slaves, and since slavery existed during the time of Jesus of Nazareth, and he uttered no word against it, but on the contrary gave instruction for the management and regulation of slavery—they thought they had an indisputable right to own slaves! They saw no harm in receiving the slaves that came from Old and New England. They saw no harm in holding slaves in bondage and treating them kindly.

"Most writers make no allusion to the origin of slavery, save in a passing way; they slur it over, and cite as its beginning the purchase of twenty negroes by the Virginia Colony in 1616. This was the first establishment of slavery but it was a mere drop in the ocean. * * * With the exception of a few slaves brought over by the Dutch, there was never a negro landed on American soil but those negroes that came in the ships of Old and New England. The South never owned a slave ship. * * England for a long time was actively engaged in slave traffic but New England did not allow the Mother Country to monopolize the trade. * * Massachusetts was the first Colony to pass an act legalizing slave trade, and slavery actually existed in Massachusetts as early as 1923. * * The first slave ship that ever left the American shore was built at Marble Head, Mass. Many New England towns were advanced through the profits from slave trading. And so it was that New Englanders in later times, denounced as the "sum of all bitters" that which their fathers had so graciously indulged in. * * *

"The Virginia House, as early as 1772, sent a petition to George III, asking for the abolishment of slave traffic. South Carolina and Georgia passed similar acts. Thomas Jefferson, in the original draft of the Declaration of Independence, inserted a clause against the King of England, for forcing slavery upon the Colonies!"

Dr. Jones, hastily, traced the history of Slavery in the United States up to the Civil War, conditions existing and causes that lead to the war, illustrating his points with such incidents as the Dred Scott case, John Brown's raid, broadcast of anti-slavery literature and movements of the abolitionists.

"We hear a great deal about the South Carolina nullification; this was simply a suspension of law until the Supreme Court could decide. We hear little of the New England nullification; that was simply a suspension of the decision of the Supreme Court. * * * There is not the shade of the shadow of a ghost of a doubt that the border States would have abolished slavery had it not been for the encroachments of the abolitionists. * * *

"I may say, in passing, that the slaves were as a rule, happy and contented. When John Brown made his raid and captured the United States arsenal the slaves showed their loyalty by not flocking to his side. The affection and loyalty of the slaves, who stayed at home and protected the wives and daughters of the Confederate soldiers, is without a parallel in history. * * * The spirit of the South may be summed up in the words of Lee when he said, 'If I owned four million slaves, I would free them with one stroke of my pen to avoid war. * * *

"The effect of slavery upon the negroes may be illustrated by the words of an honest negro divine who said 'Slavery brought the negro up from savagery to a civilized and Christianized race. The real pioneers of negro enlightenment were the 'ole missus' and 'ole massa'. 600,000 negroes were church members in 1865.

"Writers of the North claim that slavery prevented the South from producing any great literary characters, but in refutation of this I will merely mention the names of Harrison, Dabney, Gildersleeve, Toy, Rice; there is a host of others. In the field of poetry the South produced such writers as Edgar Allen Poe, Ryan, Timrod, and Lanier; and authors like Page, Cooke, Key, Benton and Davis. In science she produced men like

ANOTHER VICTORY.

Carolina Defeats the Stalwart Warriors.

CAROLINA 17; V. M. I. 10.

Good Offensive Work on Both Sides—Carolina Loses in First Half but Rallies With Determination and Does Some Fine Work.

In Roanoke, Va., last Saturday afternoon before one thousand spectators about equally divided in sympathy, Carolina, in two twenty-five minute halves, defeated the stalwart warriors from Virginia Military Institute by a score of 17 to 10. As was predicted the Virginians played an excellent game, making things so interesting that at the end of the first half Carolina's prospect looked rather gloomy. On the second half, however, our team rallied and played with such determination as to bring our score up from 6 to 17 and at the same time preventing V. M. I. from scoring another point.

The offensive work of both teams was splendid, and of that we have no criticism to make. But the defensive work of both Carolina and V. M. I. was of a lower order than should have been expected. Perhaps this was in a measure caused by the up hill game for Carolina—something unusual for her which added much to her disadvantage. The game in detail was as follows:

THE GAME.

Capt. Foust won the toss and chose to defend the east goal. Jones, for V. M. I., planted his foot against the leather and it sailed 40 yards into Carolina's territory. Graves, by a beautiful run, returned the pig skin 15 yards. Jones smashed the Virginia line of human defense for three yards and Berkeley ran around right end for 4. Jacocks went 3 yards and Berkeley repeated the performance. V. M. I. was called off side and Carolina was given 10 yards. Foust plowed through right tackle for 6 yards but fumbled, and Virginia secured the ball. V. M. I. was caught holding in the line and Carolina received the ball. On a sensational run Berkeley skirted left end for 12 yards and Capt. Foust, on the next rush, planged through the Virginia line for 7 more. Berkeley and Jacocks, each in turn, steadily advanced the ball for several yards, never failing to make the required distance. Foust knocked down three vicious opponents and when the dirty mass of humanity had cleared the field the tar "heels" had gone 10 yards farther. Jacocks was given the ball and gained 3 yards but fumbled, and Virginia fell upon the ball. Jones, V. M. I.'s star full back, hit "Bully" Jones for 6 yards and gained 1 over Donnelly. Cloggett went through left end and tackle for 5 yards and over Donnelly and Foust for 7. The Virginians, on their next rush, found Albright true to his position, and as only two yards could be made on the two following plays, Carolina was given the ball. Berkeley circled left end for 8 yards and on the next pass rushed over left tackle for 3. Jacocks made a magnificent run of 15 yards amid rounds of applause. Capt. Foust, by wonderful line bucking advanced the pig skin 11 yards and Berkeley followed with 3. Foust then caused the cold chills to run over the V. M. I. rooters by placing the leather over the line for the first touch down. Jones kicked a beautiful goal.

Score: Carolina 6; V. M. I. 0.

V. M. I. drove the ball 30 yards to Graves who, by good head work, returned 20. Berkeley rushed through right tackle for 5 yards and Jacocks went 4 on a quick opening. Foust hammered the line for 10 yards and Jacocks made 3. On the next two rushes Carolina failed to make the required distance and the ball was given to V. M. I. Cloggett hit the line where Mr. Albright made his headquarters and gained 2 yards. Jones ran over Jones for 3 yards and Donnelly for 2. Not satisfied with these short gains, Jones circled Fisher's end for 35 yards, making the most spectacular run of the game. Cloggett was then pushed over the line for a touch down, but Jones failed to kick an easy goal.

Score Carolina 6; V. M. I. 5.

Donnelly continued the struggle by sending the ball 45 yards. Devoe returned the leather 10. V. M. I. went through the line 8 yards. Jones went over Donnelly and Foust for 8 yards and again for 6. Cloggett found an opening between Foust and Fisher and gained 8 yards. Paul circled Cox's end for 10 yards and on the next pass hit the line for 5. Jones stepped back for a drop kick but failed. The ball fell within 3 yards of the goal and a V. M. I. man secured it and ran over our line claiming a touch down. The officials gave the ball to V. M. I. on our 4 yard line and Jones fell over for another touch down. Cloggett failed to kick goal.

Score: Carolina 6; V. M. I. 10.

Graves kicked the ball 45 yards and V. M. I. returned 20. Paul circled left end for 15 yards and Jones smashed the line for 10. After coming within 20 yards of our goal by consistent gains, Jones attempted another drop kick and again he failed.

Time up. Ball on Carolina's 30 yard line.

SECOND HALF.

Donnelly kicked 40 yards and V. M. I. returned 20. Jones bucked the line for 4 yards Cloggett made Carolina plays the A. and M. team at Raleigh this afternoon. We are told that our A. and M. friends are betting strongly on winning the game. Varsity, "get yourself together" and hit their line a few times and let's see about it.

Inasmuch as Georgia has failed to reply to our communication challenging her for a debate this year, we take it for granted that she is not going to accept the challenge, and so we must look to other fields. The matter will doubtless come up in the Societies tonight. Many are in favor of challenging Columbian University, but it remains to be seen what action will be taken.

Resolved: "That the patriot should be independent of party authority in voting" is the query which Carolina has submitted to Johns Hopkins University for this year's debate with that institution. This query was submitted last Saturday and as yet Johns Hopkins has not made a choice of sides. Ten days are allowed, however, for this, and of course our friends will respond in due time.

In no game yet has Carolina manifested more magnificent offensive work than in the game with V. M. I. last Saturday afternoon. And it is equally true that in no game has she shown weaker defensive work. For the first time this season her goal-line has been crossed.

Varsity you must improve yourself in interference work. Our two hardest games are yet before us, Virginia and Georgetown both have strong heavy teams and against such teams good offensive work to prove effective must be supplemented by excellent defensive work. You can do this, and if you are to keep up the good record you have made so far, you must do it.

We are informed, though not authentically yet, that the round-trip ticket to Richmond on Thanksgiving will be two dollars, provided two hundred and fifty students will go from Chapel Hill. Let's look into this at once and take action to secure these rates before it is too late. Nobody seems to be interested at all in this matter or to care whether or not we go or stay. It looks very much like the student body of U. N. C. has lost its esprit de corps and fallen into that happy, passive state of "innocuous desuetude." Some one must take the initiative or nothing will be accomplished. Our appeal again is to the President of the Athletic Association to call a meeting to discuss this matter and to look into the advisability of appointing a committee to make all necessary investigations.

Death of Mr. George C. Worth.

On Wednesday night, George Cunningham Worth, of the Junior class, departed this life. He leaves a mother, Mrs. A. H. Worth, of Asheboro, and three brothers, the eldest a graduate of last year's class and the second now of the class of 1905. George entered college with the present Senior class but dropped out on account of bad health in the spring term of his second year. He was taken ill a few weeks after returning this fall and had been since confined to the Infirmary. For several weeks he hovered between life and death, and the end, when it came, was not unexpected to his family, who were with him and to the College Physician.

George Worth, as we knew him, was a Christian gentleman, and although the thread of his life was cut short on the threshold of early manhood, yet recognizing the superior wisdom of Providence in removing him from us, we cannot begrudge to him the realization of a better life in a better world.

Communication.

Mr. Editor:—

Allow me to make one or two suggestions in regard to our foot ball team. In the first place why not have a few trick plays rolled up our sleeves? The writer well knows that a team that relies altogether on tricks is never a winner but to "mix them up," to use a base ball phrase, is a good thing. Now we don't pose as a coach nor do we attempt to criticize our present one, for we all know his merit and ability but why couldn't such a team as we have practice a few trick plays.

We all know how effectively Clemson used them against us last year. There seems to be an impression in college that it is beneath the dignity of a Varsity team to use trick plays. This is a mistake. We saw only last week of an instance where Harvard gained 40 yards on a trick play, also Carlisle Indians have used them for good gains, also Princeton and other teams. It is true that some time a team loses but that it is the lack of practice more than anything else. Let's try it.

Another thing, only about three weeks now until our Thanksgiving game. Why can't some Alumni players come and give assistance to the team? Virginians do it, and have not our Alumni as much love for their alma mater as Virginians? We have a strong team and let's all work together for victory over Virginia.

It is reported that the round trip to Richmond will cost only $2.00 provided as many as 250 go. It is an assured fact at least that number will go, so in the meantime why not have special time to get together and learn some songs and practice our yells. Why not the Chief-cheerer start this?

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas our Heavenly Father has taken from us our former classmate George Cunningham Worth therefore be it resolved by the class of 1903.

1st. That we deeply feel his loss and humbly regret that God has deemed it best to cut down in the prime of his young manhood.

2nd. That we sincerely sympathize with the family whose hopes for him have been thus untimely blighted.

3rd. That these resolutions be sent to his sorrowing family; to the University periodicals; to the local papers at Asheboro.

We are glad to have our A. and friends with us and hope they will come again.

Dr. Hume was called to Salisbury Wednesday afternoon to lecture on, "The Holy Grail" at the special reception and banquet in honor Mrs. Tiernan ("Christian Reid," the author) by the Young Ladies' Club which bears her name. The Woman's Book Club was invited to meet with them. Thirty-six ladies, some of them from other towns, paid tribute to their accomplished guest and heard the lecture, if we may judge from the Charlotte Observer's report with intense interest.

This is being observed by the associations in all the Colleges and Universities in the United States. The first meeting—on Sunday—will be held in the afternoon at 3:30. This meeting will be about a half an hour long. Several short talks, one by the president of the Association. Following this ten minute meetings each day during the week will be held at 7 p. m. The meetings on Tuesday and Thursday nights will be held in the Chapel and on the other nights in the Association room in the Old West. The students are cordially invited to attend all these meetings.

In the game Saturday between Sewanee and Washington University of St. Louis, the following note appeared in a paper about an old U. N. C. man who played one of the ends on our team and was captain in 1901: "Osborne showed up splendidly at quarter, leading the interference with great agility and using his head admirably in the succession of offensive plays."

In the game last Saturday at West Point between West Point and Yale in which the score was 6 to 6 the following appeared in the northern papers: "A West Point star today was Graves who did most of the punting and played in the line of defence."

Owing to an oversight of the proof-reader, in the announcement of the Soph-Junior Debate last week, THE TAR HEEL said that Hudson, '05, and Hudson, '04, would represent the Di Society. 3 around Fisher. Paul went over Donnelly for 3 yards and Foust 5. Jones ran against center for 3 yards and fumbled, and Capt. Foust fell on the ball. Foust—that bucking Foust—smashed the line for 5 yards and Engle jumped the line for 3. Foust again went through the line for 5 yards and Jacocks circled left end for 12. By interference that proved indestructable, Berkeley ran 25 yards around right end. Foust plunged through the line for another touch down and Berkeley kicked goal.

Score: Carolina 12; V. M. I. 10. V. M. I. kicked 35 yards to Graves who returned 15. Berkeley sailed around right end for 15 yards and Jacocks circled around left end for 5. Foust and Jacocks in rapid succession advanced the ball to Virginia's 30 yard line. Newton, Jones and Foust carried it to their opponents 20 yard lines and Graves stepped back and made a beautiful drop kick, scoring 5 more points for Carolina.

Jones sent the ball 25 yards into Carolina's territory and Graves returned only 5. Newton gained 2 yards and Berkeley one. Graves kicked 30 yards and V. M. I. advanced 10. Virginia made 1 yard over Jones and 5 over Foust. Jones went through Fisher and Jones for 5 yards, but fumbled and Carolina secured the ball. Mann—the revolving half back—skirted left end for 7 yards. Foust went 7 yards through tackle and the same number around left end. Newton hit the line for 3 yards. Mann with two men on his back ran 25 yards. Mann, Newton, Foust and Engle by line bucking and end runs carried the ball to Virginia's 5 yard line when it was fumbled. Virginia punted the leather 45 yards and Graves kicked 30.

Exchanges.

The Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia have passed a set of resolutions, directed to the Legislature, asking that they be granted authority to create an executive head of the University, to be selected outside of the faculty corps. This action points to the election of a President instead of a Chairman of the Faculty.

"I see Blank has stopped college."

"Yes, he made the foot ball team and that was his undoing. He was half back in Mathematics, full back in Chemistry and about quarter back in everything on his card. Besides, he refused to tackle back work, so there was nothing else for the faculty to do but send him to the side line.

LITERARY ADDRESS

Delivered by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith.

SECOND FACULTY LECTURE.

Subject Was "Literature and Industrialism"—Industrialism Not Antagonistic to Literature. Comparison of Periods of Industrial Activity with Periods of Literary Activity.

"I ask your attention to a topic, which I trust will be of interest to all of us: the Relation of Literature and Industrialism," began Dr. C. Alphonso Smith in the second lecture of the Faculty series. With that ready command of splendid English, in which he is so remarkably blessed, the speaker held the attention of his hearers while he advocated the view that industrialism is not antagonistic to literature. He said, among many interesting things:

"No one needs to be told that the age in which we live is pre-eminently an industrial age. We read it in countless newspapers, we hear it in the whirr of machinery, we see it in the evidence of material prosperity all about us, and we are made to feel it in a certain practical way of looking at things and a certain business-like way of doing things, both of which are characteristically American. Only in the last few days there have been hints of a vast European federation for no other purpose than to check the triumphant march of American industrialism and to keep the young Republic from gaining a preponderating influence in the trade and commerce of the world. 'Keep to your own side of the water,' say the old monarchies, and 'we will keep to ours.' And the young Republic replies by purchasing one of England's oldest steamship lines and by threatening to make the carrying trade of the world dependent upon American fuel oil.

"In not other parts of the country has industrial progress been so marked of late years than in the South, and no where else does this progress present such a striking contrast to the preexisting order of things. There are men before me, still in the prime of life, who remember when the South was almost wholly agricultural; but since 1870 so swift have been her strides in manufacturing enterprise that statistics become obsolete before they can be tabulated. The daily output of oil from only four of the Texas gushers is equal to the daily output of all the other wells in the United States. The spindles in our cotton mills are increasing at the daily rate of 5000, and the number of cotton mills, now about 668, is more than twice the number in 1890. The output of cotton goods will be doubled at the present rate in four years; and even if this astonishing rate of progress is maintained, it will be thirty years before the South will manufacture all the cotton that she raises, and during these thirty years not only will the cotton crop increase, but the needs of the world in the matter of cotton goods will surely increase in like ratio.

"When we add to this the proposed construction of the Isthmian canal and the industrial advantages that must accrue thereby to the South, the man is not to be envied whose pulse does not quicken and whose imagination does not kindle at the vista that stretches before us.

"Tis a South whose gaze is cast Not wholly on the past, But whose bright eyes the skies of promise sweep, Whose feet in paths of progress swiftly leap, And whose fresh thoughts, like cheerful rivers, run Through odorous ways to meet the morning sun."

"But there are many excellent persons, chiefly from the ranks of literature, who see in our industrial progress a menace to our literary life. They believe as industrialism advances, literature must necessarily decline; that we cannot serve two masters; and that literature is destined to go down in its struggle with its stronger and coarser antagonist.

"This view of an inherent antagonism between literature and industrialism implies a radical misconception of both. Industrialism is not materialism, nor is it utilitarianism. These are the theories of life, while industrialism is a means of living. The peril of possible degeneration into either of these is more than counterbalanced by the immediate and permanent benefits that industrialism confers. * * * Industrialism means development of natural resources; it means emancipation from temporal needs that threaten and thwart the genius of literature; it means happy homes, and diffused contentment; it means wealth; and wealth means more free schools, longer terms, and more efficient service. Away with the idea that we must de-industrialize a nation, that we must hush the hum of its myriad activities, before the muse of literature will deign to alight! * * *

"Literature is not handicapped by the division of men into employer and employee; she makes her appeals and offers her ministrations to all alike.

"I believe that in all ages Every human heart is human." Wherever, then, the 'human heart is human,' literature proffers her guidance and beckons upward.

"Literature is the expression of life, and the more full, free, rich, varied and abundant life is, the more full, free, rich, and abundant will literature be. * * * Let

EXCITING CONTEST.

Played in Raleigh November Eighth.

CAROLINA 0; A. and M. 0.

No Score but a Game that Was a Sizzler. Best Game of Football ever seen in Raleigh—Most of Game Played in A. and M.'s Territory but the University was unable to Score.

It was a battle of foot ball giants yesterday when the rival colors of the State University and the A. and M. College fluttered in the breeze.

And it was a stiff breeze, too, with lots of cold in it. It came sweeping down from the north and the big crowd on the seats and the thick lines of humanity around the gridiron shivered as the keen wind cut, but forgot all about the cold when the game waxed hot.

And hot it was. Hotter than any other game ever seen in Raleigh. In the struggle the A. and M. team had the larger backing of voices of encouragement, but the backers of the University representatives were in great evidence and cheered on their champions. Between one hundred and fifty and two hundred came from Chapel Hill, and the stand was gay with the bright ribbons of the ladies, the blue and white of the University and the white and red of the A. and M. being here there and everywhere.

There was keen excitement and tense interest. Flushed with many victories, the Chapel Hill eleven knew that they were ready to uphold their colors, yet while the A. and M. men knew it was a very formidable team they were facing, there was a grim determination about their playing, an insistency of effort, a pitting of brawn and brain against brain and brawn that showed there must be a hard fight to defeat them.

The game was admirable in many respects. Proper guards had been placed about the gridiron and there was no crowding on the field. There were differences of opinion in the game, but the referee was heeded and there was no unseemly squabbling. To a spectator it seemed a clear and clean cut game, fought with vigor and resisted with manly strength.

It seemed miraculous that no one was severely hurt, for time and again came the heavy thud and crash of bodies shot forward with all their force, and the players fell and piled over each other till it seemed a bunch of struggling legs and arms and heads upon the ground. Three of the University men, Messrs. Holt, Berkeley and

Cox, were somewhat hurt and retired from the game towards the latter part of the last half.

The A. and M. team and the student body are jubilant at making a tie, with no score, with the redoubtable University team. At the end of the first half the field was crowded and A. and M. cadets were raised on the shoulders of their cheering comrades, and flags were waved and trumpets blown. The University men followed with a similar counter-demonstration, then from the grand stand and all the crowd came cheers for one favorite and the other. It was a scene painted all over with enthusiasm.

Both teams put up a strong game. Each would change from offensive to defensive and each showed strength and weakness alternately. At one period in the game the confidence the A. and M. team have in Delvin was signally shown. The University men had pushed back the Cadet line and were headed for goal. The cadets had the wind favoring them and the ball went to Delvin. He fumbled it, but managed to keep the ball. Again the formation for a kick was made and again the pig skin was thrown to Delvin, but it got by him and more ground was lost. The University men were near the goal, yet the cadets tried the trick for the third time and Delvin—why Delvin got the ball, planted himself firm and kicked the ball high in the air and way down in the University territory.

In the last half the University made a desperate effort to score by a drop kick. The ball went to Jacks, who tried for it, but missed the goal boundaries and it went to the A. and M. team on the twenty-five yard line.

It was after sunset when the game ended. It began about 3:35 and was finished at 5:35, though the halves were of 25 and 20 minutes, the other time being consumed in adjusting matters and in breathing spells. As dark came on the contest grew fiercer and fiercer, and it was crash after crash, but despite it all there was no score made.

Dr. Joel Whitaker was the referee; Prof. Wilson, of Guilford College, umpire, and Dr. Chas. W. Burkett, time keeper.

The line up of the two teams was in this order:

A. and M.	University.
Shannonhouse	L. H. Berkeley
Hauley	C. Stewart
Beebe	R. G. Farlow
Carpenter	L. G. Donnelly
Devlin	L. T. Foust
Neal	R. T. Jones

Tucker	L. E. Condon
Darden	Q. B. Graves

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

At last success has crowned our efforts in trying to get a special train from Chapel Hill direct to Richmond on Thanksgiving. Arrangements have been made, securing a rate of two dollars and fifty cents for the round trip, and we see no reason why Carolina should not send up a goodly contingent to witness the final struggle and to cheer on the white and blue in this our harvest game. Varsity will then need our whole support, and let us not fail to give it. There is one condition: every student who wishes to go must first get permission from home. This condition is imposed in order to relieve the faculty from all responsibility. Let all take heed and obtain such permission at once. We have faith in our team and let's show them that we have by giving them such backing as a Carolina team has never before had.

Others have faith in them too. Listen—Here is what Mr. A. R. Berkeley, an old U. N. C. boy writes us: "I witnessed the Lehigh-Virginia game Saturday. Virginia was badly beaten, but notwithstanding has a strong team.

"Council was acting captain and the star for his side." Bass played end. I think our chances of putting up a strong game against Virginia are good."

We too, think they are good; better than in many years. The men of this team are going to do their part and also are going to do it well. Let the students do theirs and we believe the results will be satisfactory.

Perhaps the demand for University lecturers has never been greater than at present. Calls are continually coming from all parts of North Carolina, and from other States as well, for members of our Faculty to lecture to schools, colleges, churches, literary and learned societies of all sorts. This is, indeed, a flattering tribute to the ability of our faculty, and is sure evidence that the great good work which the University is doing for the enlightenment of our people and for the uplifting of our State is not confined merely to the young men gathered within its walls. Conclusive evidence is it that the University is closely in touch with (may we not say at the head of?) those great forces which are now transforming our State's policy and holding up higher ideals for the guidance of our people.

It is our purpose to publish an account of everything that happens here which would be of interest to our friends and alumni. But without the cooperation of the students and Faculty some things will occasionally escape our notice and fail to appear in these columns. In order to avoid this we wish to ask all the students to furnish us from time to time with any information or suggestions they may have which would help us in carrying out our purpose. We also wish to ask the members of the Faculty to do likewise. And if on returning to the Hill each one will drop us a card stating when and where he has lectured, together with his subject, he will do us a favor which we shall duly appreciate.

We play Georgetown University at Norfolk, Va., today. Last Saturday V. P. I. beat Georgetown 28 to 0 and Saturday before Lafayette beat her 23 to 0. If comparative scores count for anything it looks as if we may safely indulge strong hope of winning.

The two most prominent features of last Saturday's game with A. and M. seem to have been Devlin's long kicks and Varsity's fumbles.

A. and M. Substitutes—Gaithe Abernethy, Koon, Miller, and Isler. The A. and M. team won choice of positions on the toss and chose to defend the north goal. This gave them a stiff breeze to aid them in their fight in the first half.

THE GAME IN DETAIL.

Devlin kicked off for A. and M. and made 50 yards. Jacocks received the ball and recovered 10 yards of these. Foust made 5 yards through centre. Jacocks and Berkeley made slight gains between them, but A. and M. got the ball on failure on third down. Shannonhouse lost 2 yards and Devlin gained 3. Carolina got the ball, but in the first rush lost 3 yards. Jacocks kicked for the University and gained 5 yards against the wind. Then there were gains of 4 yards and 4 yards and 3 yards, and after the next struggle Berkeley got the ball and sprinted around right for a gain of 20 yards. Two crashes with a yards gain and then Jacocks kicked, gaining 10 yards more. Another push and the University gained 2 yards and the pig skin was in the middle of the field. Jones gained one-half yard through centre, and Berkeley made 8. This was followed by successive gains through centre by Jacocks's one half yard, Foust 2 yards, Berkeley 6 yards, Jones 4 yards, and now the University men were 30 yards from victory, but soon there was a fumble and the A. and M. had the ball on the 26 yard line.

Devlin kicked for 40 yards, but Graves got it and regained a few. Berkeley added 2 yards around the right end and Foust 6 yards, and soon the centre of the field was again reached. Jacocks lost 3 yards, but recovered four through center and Foust gained 6, Berkeley 4. After a breathing spell Holt gained 5 yards. Jacocks 1, Holt 1. Jacocks kicked, but gained only 8 yards against the wind and A. and M. had the ball on the 28 yard line. Then twice Devlin lost ground on a fumble and letting the ball pass him, but on the third go he kicked for 40 yards. Graves got the ball and recovered 10 yards.

The men were now a few feet in University territory and the Chapel Hill team by successive advances of Berkeley 3 yards, Foust 5, Jones 3, and others were soon on the A. and M. 40 yard line. These successive gains were followed up a few yards at a time, by Holt and Berkeley until on a fumble A. and M. got the ball.

Then Devlin made a mighty kick, sending the ball 75 yards and when the rush was over the University had it on their 18 yard line and the A. and M. boys were that near success. But then Berkeley 2 yards, Foust 8, Jones through centre 2, and a loss of a few yards left it on the 20 yard line.

This was too close and Jacocks kicked, gaining 35 yards. Welsh caught it but was stopped in his tracks. Then the cadets did the shoving back, Roberson 3 yards, Shannonhouse 2, Welsh one yard lost. Roberson fumbled and Tucker saved the ball for A. and M. The next move was a kick by Devlin to save the ball. It was an off side formation and while Devlin made a fine kick, the ball going out of limits within 15 feet of goal, some A. and M. player held a University player. The ball was then brought back and the University having it kept pushing it up the field until Foust made a spurt around right for 13 yards gain. Then there was a crash of forces until it was again in the A. and M. territory, gains being made by Jones, Berkeley, Foust and Holt. These were all hard collisions. Finally Foust made 4 yards around right end and A. and M. had the ball.

It was well down in their territory and Devlin kicked, gaining 40 yards. The ball was well in University territory when time was called and the first half was over with no score.

Then came a rest and a vast amount of cheering, but soon the battle was on again

(We are sorry that we haven't space to give here the last half.)

Then came great cheers from the adherents of both teams, a vast waving of flags and ribbons and the crowd dispersed, having witnessed the hardest game of football ever seen here.

It was a triumph for both teams, though a victory for neither. It was a splendidly fought and splendidly defended game, and the young men of both teams have reason to be proud of the excellent showing made.—Raleigh News and Observer, November 9th.

The honor system in examination has been recently unanimously reestablished by the Cornell student body.

Exchanges.

The Red and Black of Georgia contained in its last issue a letter from Prof. A. H. Patterson, of that institution, concerning Mr. Sweeny, the S. I. A. A. and North Carolina. The reason assigned for a statement of the facts in the case was: "So much was published and believed last spring that was totally erroneous, concerning the suspension of the University of North Carolina from the S. I. A. A." As a member of the Executive Committee of the Association Prof. Patterson briefly gives the facts in the case, as presented. Mr. Sweeny was salesman in a store in Wilmington. He played on several occasions with the Wilmington team receiving no compensation above his regular salary as clerk, thus avoiding loss and, as he believed, remaining an amateur. Carolina played him only against Virginia—who is not a member of the Association—believing this was in keeping with both the spirit and the letter of the law. The Executive Committee thought otherwise, declaring that no team can play any other (college) team unless all the players on both teams are eligible under our rules. North Carolina was therefore suspended, but promptly reinstated after "the matter was more fully discussed and understood."

Rev. C. W. Howard and son, Master Paul, of Kinston, came Tuesday. Mr. Howard spent the night with his son Z. V. Howard, and left Wednesday for Raleigh to attend a meeting of the County Superintendents of education of the State. Master Paul returned yesterday.

F. B. Rankin '01, (Big Rankin) was on the Hill a few days this week. He is County Superintendent of Education of Gaston County. Rankin was one of the best guards that ever played on the Varsity eleven.

Every student in the University is urged to come out every afternoon next week to show our team we are behind them in preparing for the Virginia game. Everyone should be out promptly at 4:30.

If we ever need college spirit it is now. Many a game is gained or lost on account of the abundance or lack of such. If this is the only thing now lacking to make our team ready for the Virginia game, shall we win or shall we lose? If we would win we must have the winning spirit, and by going to every practice game next week infuse this spirit in our eleven.

J. A. McRae, ex-'03, came Sunday and will stay in college until Christmas. He is rooming with Mr. Chas. Ross at Mrs. Fraley's. He has been elected a member of the Legislature from Anson County.

What's become of the cheerers on the side line? They did fine work at Raleigh but why do they not try the same here. Our team must get accustomed to the cheering because they will hear it at Richmond. Let us be out in full force next week at the practice games and make things lively with the old U. N. C. yells.

A. C. Kerley, '02, came Friday, November 7th, and returned Sunday. Kerley is teaching this year at Siler City. He went to Raleigh Saturday with our team to see our game with A. and M.

The college magazine from the University of Virginia has just been received in the Library. It contains an interesting little story, "Virginia Day," the scene of which is at Richmond and the story happens on Thanksgiving Day. Four hundred students from the University of Virginia and about the same number wearing the White and Blue are on the side lines, the two Universities clash. Of course the University of Virginia is said to beat but the score is very small—from our viewpoint happily small for as a rule they in advance claim a much larger score.

About fifty white oak trees are being set out on the campus.

Last Monday Dr. C. A. Smith delivered his lecture on "Literature and Industrialism," at Winthrop Normal College, Rock Hill, S. C.

Dr. Hume lectured last night in Wilson, N. C. before the Woman's Book Club on "The Problem in Hamlet."

All who expect to go to Richmond will please hand their names to the Committee at once. The following gentlemen compose this Committee: Gwyn, Ehringhaus, Gold, Mears and Ham Stewart.

Prof. Cobb will deliver two lectures November 21st, and 22nd, before the Winterville High School.

About one hundred and fifty of our students saw the A. and M. game last Saturday.

B. A. Brooks, Law '02, spent Sunday on the Hill.

Last Friday night Prof. Collier Cobb lectured on, "A visit to Yosemite Valley."

Dr. Battle made a trip to Raleigh last week on important State business.

Prof. J. A. Holmes left this week for St. Louis where he has gone to take charge of the Department of Mines and Metallurgy of the great exposition.

On Sunday morning and evening October 26, Prof. J. D. Bruner lectured at the First Baptist church of Raleigh, on "The Literary Attraction of the Bible." On Sunday, November 2, he delivered two lectures on the same subject at East Durham, where he will lecture again next Sunday on "The Wisdom Literature of the Bible."

Prof. J. A. Holmes, State Geologist, delivered a strong lecture Monday evening, in Person Hall, on "Mining Development and its Bearing on Strikes."

Death of P. B. Groome.

It is with deep sorrow we chronicle the death of Mr. P. B. Groome which occurred at Maxton a few days ago. Mr. Groome graduated from the University with the class of '02, and has since been teaching at Maxton, N. C. Tho' he spent but one year at this institution, yet during that time his gentlemanly bearing and exemplary Christian character won for him many loyal friends who deeply mourn his taking off.

To the grief-stricken family and friends we extend our warmest sympathy in their time of sorrow.

us not forget that literature means life in all its vastness, in all its complexity, in all its grades.

"It is, therefore, in their joint relation to human need that literature and industrialism find their immutable reconciliation. Antagonism can exist only when literature loses its grip on life or when industrialism degenerates into amonism. * * *

"No more striking confirmation of the view I advocate could be furnished than the simple fact that every great industrial era in English and American history has been at the same time preeminently a literary era." * * *

Dr. Smith, in support of the above assertion, called to attention the three great industrial periods of modern times: The first great industrial period came in the time of Elizabeth (1558-1603), when Flemish refugees came to England and taught the English peasantry their industrial arts, the time when England ceased to be dependent on Flanders and became herself a wool-manufacturing country. "I need not tell you that Elizabeth's reign was and is the glory of English letters. It is needless to rehearse in your presence those illustrious names in realm of poetry that will perish only with the language that you and I speak. My purpose is merely to show that in this wonderful period literature found not a foe but a friend in industrialism." * * *

The speaker drew, likewise, two striking comparisons from the second and third great industrial periods. The second great industrial revolution (1775-1803) produced men like James Watt. "And what was literature doing? She was witnessing a renaissance second only to the spacious times of great Elizabeth. This was the age that nourished Keats, Shelley, Byron, Scott, Wordsworth, Burns and Burke. * * * The age of which Wordsworth says:

"Joy was it in that dawn to be alive
But to be young was very heaven."

In the third great industrial period or revolution (1830-1845) railroads first began to intersect the land, telegraph lines were first stretched, and the ocean was crossed for the first time by a steam-propelled vessel.

"But let us look at the purely literary record of those mechanical and industrial years. Every student knows that the English writers who have dominated the literary life of our Victorian era and who bid fair to dominate many decades of our present century are Tennyson, Browning, Mrs. Browning, in poetry; Dickens, Thackeray and George Eliot in fiction; Ruskin and Carlyle in miscellaneous literature. Every one of these writers rose to prominence between 1830 and 1845. It is equally noteworthy that in 1830, with the single exception of Washington Irving's work, we had no distinctive literature in America; but by 1845 we were represented by Longfellow, Lowell, Whittier, Hawthorne, Emerson and Holmes, — the six names that have given New England her incontestable supremacy in American literature.

"But why did not the South respond to this last literary and industrial movement? Why did she wait until 1870? Because in 1830 her energies began to be more absorbed in defense of her constitutional views and of her cherished institutions. The year of 1830 witnessed the memorable debate between Robert Y. Hayne, of South Carolina, and Daniel Webster, the most significant contest that the Senate of the United States has ever seen. * * * Her industrial system, based on slave labor, stood as a barrier to the new industrial movement; and the enforced defense of this system, together with the political problems and prejudices that it engendered, threw literature into the back-ground and brought oratory and statesmanship to the front."

"But a change soon came and the Old South proved that the sword in her hand was mightier than the pen. Defeated though she was, she has accepted the arbitrament of battle, and with an acquiescence as beautiful as it is rare, she thanks the God of battles that slavery is no more." * * *

In conclusion Dr. Smith said literature loves a lost cause and we should naturally look for another great literary period. The age in which we are now living is preeminently an industrial age and a great literary period will follow.

Meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society met and held its regular meeting in the Chemical lecture room on Tuesday evening. Papers were read by Dr. Mills, Dr. W. C. Coker, and Dr. J. M. Duerden.

Dr. Mills' paper was a discussion of Dulong and Petet's Law. He showed by the kinetic theories of gases how "The force of compression on a gas necessary to reduce it to a liquid form was exactly balanced by the expanding power of the gas." Dr. Mills explained how Dulong and Petet's Law breaks down when applied to some compounds of carbon.

Dr. Coker read the next paper on "A New Form of Mosquito."

He discovered this new species of mosquito at Hartville, S. C. while searching for mosquito forms which produce malaria. This new mosquito is of steel blue color and has a silver band about the thorax. It raises in ponds or barrels and feeds upon living algae on the surface. The ordinary mosquito feeds from the bottom.

Dr. Duerden read the last paper on "Coral Bearing Algae."

On dissolving up some of the hard parts of corals by the addition of acids, green algae or seaweed were found. Also on decalcifying the soft parts they were found to contain algae. So corals are generally penetrated by algae and thus they seem to be both animal and plant formation. These boring algae when they attack fossils resolve them into their constituent parts and this in some way seems to account for absence of fossils where such were not deposited in preserving muds. The lagoons around coral reefs have been probably assisted in their formation by these boring algae.

OUR FIRST DEFEAT.

A Hard Fought Contest With Georgetown Gladiators.

CAROLINA 5; GEORGETOWN 12.

Brawn and Weight Responsible for Victory—Graves Again Distinguishes Himself by Placing the Pig Skin Between the Goal Posts
From the 35
Yard Line.

In a game that was clear and fair from start to finish, Carolina for the first time this season was worsted by the doughty foot ball gladiators from Georgetown University in Norfolk last Saturday afternoon by the score of 12 to 5.

Five thousand people witnessed the contest and cheered the rival elevens. The blue and white followers were far and away in the majority, but the concentrated mass plays of the Georgetown men were too strong for the Carolina line and Georgetown triumphed.

Seldom is there seen a game of foot ball in which the styles of play of the contesting elevens were so entirely different. Georgetown's defensive work was of the open, crouching order, but the moment the "Tar Heels" had put the ball in play every man seemed to hurl himself against his opponent with a movement concentrating upon the center, effectually breaking up line plays and frequently resulting in the runner's being tackled behind the line.

When on the offensive, Georgetown's line was almost a solid mass, and with a wriggling, revolving, tackle-back formation, Hardisty and Hart were able to plunge through Carolina's line for gains ranging all the way from one yard to twenty.

Directly to the contrary was the style of Carolina. When on the defensive the Chapel Hill team huddled close together, but did not get down low, consequently were unable to withstand the mass plays of their opponents. On the offensive Carolina's tactics were almost entirely of the open, end running class and a few attempts were made to buck Georgetown's line.

Georgetown was the victim of stage-fright of the worst variety at the beginning of the game, and twice within the first ten minutes of play they were penalized for off side work.

On the other hand, Carolina went into the contest with steady nerves and lost no time in getting the ball away from Georgetown on downs after the first kick off. Then, by a beautiful spurt, they carried it up the field by a series of end rushes which, together with the penalties upon Georgetown for off side plays, finally put the pig skin on the Blue and Gray's 20 yard line.

Quick as a flash the White and Blue lined up and the oval was sent unerringly into the arms of Graves, who had dropped back. A second later it was hurling through the air and, in a graceful curve, had settled over the Georgetown goal posts.

Carolina had made the first score of the game and the enthusiasm of her followers was unbridled.

But from a little bunch of fellows who carried Blue and Gray flags in a section of the stands came the "Hoya" of Georgetown. They had not lost heart.

And then Georgetown took a brace.

Mahoney kicked off and the ball was caught by Berkeley on the Carolina goal line. Two attempts to gain by end plays failed and Carolina kicked to Abbaticchio in the center of the field.

Then it was that the Washington players started their incessant plunges into Carolina's rush line. First Hardisty and then Hart would dive or hurdle for gains. Delvin would dart around an end almost hid by a mass interference. With tackles or guards back, Sietz and Rourke and Russell were hurled into holes for substantial advances.

Without a moment's cessation the ball was pushed, dragged, pulled and shoved over yard after yard until at last it rested within 36 inches of the Carolina line. Abbaticchio signalled for Hardisty and the big full back fairly scaled both lines in a hurdle that landed him across the Blue and White's goal. Mahoney kicked an easy goal from the fifteen yard line and Georgetown had the lead by one point; the score being 6 to 5.

Carolina kicked off and then forced Georgetown to punt, but Graves fumbled and Hart fell on the ball on Georgetown's 45 yard line. He jumped up and squirmed through Carolina's tacklers for 5 yards and then Russell went through the line for a similar distance.

Georgetown was about to start another series of line plays when Rourke broke through Carolina's line in the center of the field and started for the blue and white goal as fast as his legs would carry him. He was never headed although Condon and Cox were within a few feet of him all the way. When he fell beneath the Carolina goal posts the Georgetown rooters went fairly wild and the demonstration broke forth anew when Mahoney clinched the score by kicking another goal.

Thus the score stood during the remainder of the half and until the end of the game.

In the second half Georgetown weakened very much and Carolina on the contrary, seemed to brace up wonderfully. Hardisty could no longer make any headway against the blue and white line, Delvin was battered up so that he was at last supplanted by Morris and Russell was forced to give way to Carroll.

Carolina kept the ball in Georgetown's territory during three fourth's of the last half and seemed considerably stronger than their opponents and there is no telling, had the game lasted five minutes longer, which team would have won.

The teams lined up as follows:

Georgetown.	Carolina.

A class game of much interest and one rather fiercely contested was played on Friday afternoon between the Junior and Senior foot ball elevens. In it the class of '03 lowered the colors of '04. Here is how:

The Seniors toe the line at the center of the field and kick off to the Juniors defending the west goal. The kick off is run back about ten yards by the Juniors, who then try the Senior line. After three arduous trials they make a bare first down. Failing to do so again the ball is given to the Seniors forty yards from the Juniors goal. Towards it the Seniors advance; a handicap of ten yards for off side play, is overcome by a twelve yard run around right end on a double pass. Several hard but effective rushes, then Gold goes between the posts for a touch down. In the effort to kick the ball between the posts the Seniors not are successful. No more scoring is done in the first half and it ends with the Juniors holding the ball near the center of the gridiron. Score: Juniors 0; Seniors 5.

In half number two the Juniors take the kick off to the Seniors who fumble allowing a Junior to fall on the ball. The '04 men take the offensive within twenty yards of the much coveted Senior goal. Three times in succession Irwin is given the ball. On the third after good gains on the two preceding, he makes a pretty run and falls across the line. (Much to the delight of Brutus!) The Juniors try to punt

UNITED STATES SENATE

Judge McRae Before the Student Body.

SUBJECT SUGGESTED BY FAMOUS ENGRAVING.

The Engraving Hangs in Gerrard Hall. Alumni Among the Members of the Senate.

Various members of the faculty, with their sweethearts, had comfortably seated themselves in the front rows, when the doors of the hall swung open violently and a host of practitioners-to-be poured down the aisle—the Law Class en masse drove the quiet musers from their places and, like some august judicial body, filed in and sat on the Judge's case. The Judge looked and wondered and then began:

"I have been attracted to my subject by the engraving which hangs just inside this Hall.

"A picture which represents the Senate of the United States as it was over fifty years ago, with its President and assembly of distinguished members."

The speaker continued with a comparison of the Senate of the United States with the Roman Senate, which was often moved by the greed of a vicious king and as often ornamented with a coterie of high born thieves, showing that the Roman Senate differed from our Senate in almost every way save in name.

The English House of Lords, he showed, differs from the United States Senate in that it is composed of the hereditary Peers of the Realm but similar to our Senate in that it is a conservative body.

Then followed a graphic description of the Senate chamber, its approach and immediate surroundings. Not the new Senate chamber but the old one, denuded of its galleries, remodelled for its present purposes and bearing witness within its walls to the most sublime scenes in the history of legislative assemblies—the chamber that seated Clay, Calhoun and Webster.

After some interesting facts in connection with the history of the Senate and its part in the function of our government. Attention was called to some of its celebrated members. Upon this feature the speaker placed special emphasis. The members of the Senate referred to, more in particular, were famous alumni of the University.

Judge McRae, in closing made a strong appeal to the students to uphold the splendid record of their predecessors. He said that the day of rail-splitting qualifications and requirements had passed, and that high office was to be obtained through diligent study.

The address was full of witty side expressions and great good humor.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

For the first time this season Carolina has suffered defeat. And tho' it was administered by a team we had expected to beat, yet our faith in the Varsity has not been shaken nor are we at all crest-fallen. We are still confident that the magnificent work of our team in last Saturday's game would have again brought victory to the white and blue had Georgetown sent the team against us she played against Lafayette, V. P. I. and others. But one defeat does not mean failure. We have rallied, and we are going into the Virginia game next Thursday with determination to win, or make the Virginians purchase victory at a dear price.

Johns Hopkins University has refused to accept the query for debate which Carolina submitted some weeks ago. From the frivolous excuse rendered it seems as though Johns Hopkins would like to waive the stipulations drawn up last fall, between the two universities for a series of three annual debates. It is well to note in this connection that she first challenged us for this series of debates and the fact that we won the first debate should be no cause for dissatisfaction on her part. We hope that this matter will be satisfactorily adjusted at an early date so that the second debate may come off at the usual time next spring.

The January number of the Magazine, which will go to press, early in December, needs more fiction. And if any student has an article already prepared, or will prepare one, he will please submit it to the editors within the next few days.

The object of the Magazine is to encourage literary effort, and it is to be regretted that so few students take advantage of the opportunity it offers.

Those who send communications to The Tar Heel will please bear in mind that each article must be signed by the writer. This does not mean however that we are obliged to publish the name; we will not publish the name when requested to withhold it. But we must know who the writer is, or else we will not publish his communication.

All expecting to go to Richmond next Thursday who have not given their names to the committee will please do so at once. Remember we must have as many as two hundred in order to get a special train. Let not your neglect to comply with the above request thwart our plans. We are expecting to send up the largest contingent from Chapel Hill that has ever witnessed a Carolina-Virginia game. This is our hardest game and the one in which our chief interest has been centered from the beginning. Our chances of winning from Virginia are better than they have been for several years. Our men are in fine condition, full of confidence (but not over confident) and are going to put a harder, better game than any they have played this season. Let all who can go with the team do so, and give them that whole-souled support which is so essential for the best team work.

Mozart Symphony Club.

If the frequent applause of a crowded house counts for anything, the Mozart Symphony Club is composed of clever musicians. Every rendering, from the opening by the Quartette to Mr. Hock's Roman Triumphal Flag Pole, was received with no little enjoyment.

"Traumerie," played by the Quartette was very pretty.

Miss Stori had a smile for everybody and everybody got one. She was clever with her violin and voice, soft, mild, well trained.

Descriptive pieces are usually given with the regular musical instruments but Mr. Stoelzer's clock work was a pleasant exception. Judge MacRae got so enthused when he heard the clock ticking that he got clean out of his seat to see what time it was—musically of course. We will excuse the Judge this time but he must stay out of the ladies' light.

Mr. Blodeck's effort was appreciated very much and all we ask of him is that he borrow a smile or two from Miss Stori.

Now, last but not least for our big natured Dutcher, Mr. Hock. He was a "taker" in spite of himself. From the time he established his emphasis on the stage until his last puff into the cornet he had the hands and heart of the ladies. As a full measure of good nature and good music. Mr. Hock is not to be out done. His supply is inexhaustible and his blowing capacity is all right. We hope the Mozart Symphony Club will come again and bring Mr. Hock.

out to a position more favorable for a goal kick, but fail and the score stands 5 to 5.

The Juniors this time receive the kick. They run the ball pretty steadily back into the Senior territory, when—a fumble occurs, quick as a flash George Wilcox takes advantage of the situation, snatches up the ball and runs sixty yards for the winning touch down. The Seniors kick goal and the game is settled. The remainder is largely an exchange of kicks with neither side a material gainer.

The teams line up as follows:

Juniors.		Seniors.
Yelverton	L. E.	Giles
Noble, A. M.	L. T.	Bynum
Royal	} L. G.	Ward
Russell
Frost	C. (Capt)	Skinner

Gregory	Q.	Gordon
Irwin (Capt)	L. H.	Gold
Jones	R. H.	Wilcox, J.
McNider	F. B.	Wilcox, G.

Remember that the Juniors had previously defeated the pretty strong Sophomore team; now the Seniors have downed the Juniors. The class championship is still undecided and therefore much interest should be centered in the game—to be played to day—between Sophomores and Seniors.

The Rev. John William Jones, D. D.

The resignation of Dr. Jones as pastor of the Baptist church deprives Chapel Hill of an interesting personality. Old soldiers thrill to the touch of this large-souled Chaplain General of the Confederate Veterans who from the days when he was a private in the ranks and thereafter as a devoted Chaplain in camp and on the battlefield up to Petersburg and Appomattox bore the Confederate "boys" in his "heart of hearts," and it is just this great heart that we younger men respond to while we at times smile at the enthusiasm of a laudator temporis acti. His vivid pictures of Lee and Jackson as soldiers and Christians, of the brave self sacrifice of Southern privates and Southern women, his loyalty to all that the old South meant and his constant appeal to us to be true to such ancestry such ideals, have not been lost on those whose faces must yet be turned to the future.

Dr. Jones comes from fine Old Dominion people, well known for their hospitality and other characteristic Southern virtues, and the vigor of this good stock, reinforced by the rare quality of a lovely mother, is seen in the capable sons, four of whom are distinguished preachers. His own eye is not dim nor his natural force abated. Indeed, his capacity for work is exceptional. The man and the work are congenial in the new sphere of duty to which he has been called. In the Charles B. Rouss Confederate Memorial Building in Richmond, standing near the Jefferson Davis Home there will be room for Confederate archives and relics, for meeting places for Confederate Camps and Memorial Associations, it may be for a great hall for reunions and lectures, and as custodian of the sacred treasures and Secretary and Historian of the endowed Association to whom they are entrusted, his green old age will be useful and happy. So may it be, say the students of the University, and they appreciate gratefully his earnest interest as pastor and friend. We sincerely regret his departure, and we shall always have a cordial welcome for him.

Exchanges.

The University of Wisconsin has ruled out intercollegiate foot ball. Probably the invincible logic of events, in which Wisconsin has been the master for years, assisted her in making this ruling.

In the game between North Carolina and Davidson College, Graves, for North Carolina, kicked two goals from the field.

The Crimson-White (Ala).

The Cumberland Weekly "consolingly" observes; "All college papers have a long-faced column once-in-a-while. The Texan and The Tar Heel are telling how it happened to be 0 to 0."

Twice they had arranged to go to Horner's but before each Saturday, they received word that they need not come. Last Saturday they thought they were going to Mebane but word was received that some of Mebane's men were laid out and so that game was postponed.

A championship game will be played this afternoon at 2:30 between the Seniors and Sophomores. The Seniors have just beaten the Juniors and have a strong team, but the Sophomores with Emerson, Heide, Singletary and Whitley are no easy eleven to play against, and so an interesting game is promised.

The plank seat at Piney Prospect has about rotted down. Another one ought to be made at once for no seat in Battle's Park is used as much as this one.

Mr. Chas. Ross spent a few days in Raleigh this week.

Two hundred names must be secured to get the special rate to Richmond. Those wishing to go should either see some member of the Committee: Ehringhans, Mears, Gwyn, Stewart or Gold, or sign their names to a paper kept in Eubank's Drug Store.

Only three more practice games before we go against Virginia—this afternoon, Monday and Tuesday. Every student of the University should go out on the athletic field on these three afternoons to show the team we are behind them.

Think of it, you can go to Richmond and return for the small sum of $2.50.

Every student in college and every member of the Faculty should go to Richmond next Thursday to see Carolina defeat Virginia.

Dr. Chas. Baskerville director of the Chemical Department of the University has been appointed a member of the committee of organization representing the American Chemical Society for the congress of applied Chemistry which convenes in Berlin in June 1903.

Wednesday afternoon from five to six Mrs. Chas. Baskerville received friends at a tea given in honor of Mesdames Holmes and Graves who shortly leave Chapel Hill the former for St. Louis, the latter for New York.

Many of the Alumni are returning to help our team in its final preparation for the Virginia game next Thursday. Last year's Coach Jenkins has wired he hopes to be here this week. About twenty old Varsity players have been communicated with and the following will be behind the team next week assisting Coach Olcott: Graham, Whitaker, McKee, McRae, Baskerville, Howell, Mangum, Smathers, Busbee and Moore. It is probable also that Stephens, Murphy, Biggs, Gregory, Devin, and possibly Guion may be here.

Miss Eliza Land, of Williamton, is visiting at Judge MacRae's

Miss Ethel Smith, of Goldboro, is visiting at Capt. Smith's.

College spirit has been showing itself more this week than in a long time. Larger crowds are on the side lines every afternoon than ever before. May this spirit culminate in over two hundred students going to Richmond next Thursday and simply make our team win.

On to Richmond is the cry being heard now.

Are you going to Richmond?

Mr. Joe L. Dayvis, the popular Confectioner has purchased the Chapel Hill Steam Laundry and is catering to the student.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith leaves today for Washington, D. C. where he will lecture next Tuesday on "The Novel in America." This lecture is the third of a series to be delivered by prominent educator and scholars before the Teachers Aid and Annuity Association of the District of Columbia. Among these lecturers are Dr. W. T. Harris, H. W. Mabie, Stanley G. Hall and other men of prominence. It is well to note that Dr. Smith is the only southern man on the list.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

Whereas, Almighty God in his infinite wisdom and fore-sight has seen fit to remove so soon from our midst our beloved companion and classmate Pinckney B. Groome; be it Resolved: first, that while bowing with unquestioning submission to the divine will, and while our hearts are saddened, we are grateful that the memory of him will still be with us.

Second, that in his death the class of 1902 loses one of its most gifted members and we as individual a valued friend.

Third, that we recognize the fact that in him we have had a exemplification of young manhood, integrity, honor, and devotion to duty and we deeply deplore his death.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be tendered to the family of the deceased with tenderest sympathy of each and every member of the class and that copies be furnished the University magazine, The Tar Heel and the Greensboro Record and Telegram with a request to publish.

On to Richmond!

On next Wednesday morning our foot ball team leaves for Richmond where we play our old rival, the University of Virginia, on Thursday. How many men will go to represent the Tar Heels in this contest is not known at this writing; but it is hoped that enough men will go to never lack for substitutes. This is our last game and naturally all attention is now concentrated upon it.

Our team has made a splendid record so far. We have met but one defeat and that was to the strong team of Georgetown. The fact that V. P. I. won from Georgetown by a large score should not discourage us, for our team did not play the same team that V. P. I. played. It is said that you can't tell much about the strength of teams by comparing scores. How true that is we are unable to say, but we are going to compare some any way. We won from Davidson by the score of 28 to 0; and played only 7 minutes of the last half; the University of Virginia won from Davidson by the score of 35 to 0 and played the entire time; we tied V. P. I. and Virginia won from her by the small score of 6 to 0. From this it seems to us that the two teams are nearly evenly matched. Our chance to win is good. As we go against Virginia our men will be in fine condition as we have no other game. Virginia plays the Indians just four days before our game and very likely they will be bruised up to a certain extent.

It is to be hoped that a very large number of men will go on the excursion. Boys you ought to go and root for your team. It will do the team a great deal of good; it means that you are looking at them and cheering them on. It is said that nearly the entire student body will accompany the Virginia team, therefore let all who can, go along with our team.

Our team has about reached its highest training. Coach Olcott has worked faithfully with the men and every man in college thanks him for it. We believe that we are going to win from Virginia and to Olcott is due the greatest praise. MacRae, Smathers, Baskerville, Mangum and Capt. Foust have also worked hard and deserve much praise.

Lastly we wish to say that the Scrub team has made possible the Varsity. The first team is no stronger than the second team has made it. All praise to the Scrubs! When we win the game on Thanksgiving the scrubs will be winning a victory also.

North Carolina Historical Society.

In the hall of the North Carolina Historical Society last Monday evening, Dr. Kemp P. Battle called to order the fifty-ninth meeting of the State Historical Society. There was present a large and appreciative audience, to hear the papers that were read on various historical subjects. Dr. Battle in his pleasing manner, opened with a short speech, stating that the object of the Society is to collect, classify, investigate and issue material illustrative of the history of the State, and the educational aim of the Society is to create a love of historical study and to give training in scientific methods of historical investigation. He urged upon the students the necessity of keeping their eyes open in search of historical information and relics. After each paper was read, Dr. Battle, in his wonderful manner, told anecdotes about the subjects read, and kept the audience in an uproar of laughter. Papers were read by Mr. G. W. Graham, Mr. R. B. Collins, Mr. C. H. Sloan, Dr. C. Lee Raper, and Dr. K. Plummer Battle.

Mr. G. W. Graham read the first paper, which was on the "Capture of Fort Fisher;" and described the daring attack very vividly, showing many interesting details of the great capture.

Mr. R. B. Collins read the next paper, which was on "Gen'l Ramseur." This paper was of special interest and showed what an important part General Ramseur performed in the war.

Mr. C. H. Sloan kept the ball rolling by reading an interesting paper on "The Life of Chief Justice Ruffin."

Mr. E. L. Sawyer showed that he had made a close study of "Governor Graham." He presented points of interest and showed what a strenuous and helpful life he had lead in the interest of the State.

Especially interesting was Dr. Raper's talk on "The Recent Historical publications." He urged the students to read several of the late books on North Carolina history, particularly Dr. Clewell's History of the Wachovia Settlements.

Dr. Battle read a paper on "The Sale of Military Land Warrants in Tennessee, belonging to the University of North Carolina." This paper was highly enjoyed, as it was a subject in which the Society is interested.

The meeting lasted only an hour, and to all present it seemed much shorter. Dr. Battle had decided it would be best to have the meeting last only an hour. After the meeting a large number came up and presented their names to the secretary as applicants for membership. We would urge upon the students all to come out to these meetings. All the papers read at this meeting showed scholarly investigation. We are informed that the next meeting will be of greater interest, so let us all become members, and try to make our Society equal to any in the country. The membership fee is gratis to students.

Forty students have registered for the course in Forestry at Yale.

Carolina 12, Virginia 12---Varsity Played a Magnificent Game—The "Tar Heels" Impregnable.

Coach Olcott's Training Shown in the Magnificent Team Work of Carolina—The Virginians, Flushed with Victory Over the Indians, Thought Carolina an Easy Number—The Stars Were Foust, Graves, Stewart, Albright, Endicott, Cox, Condon, Farlow, Holt, Engle, Berkely, Newton, Jacocks, Jones.

Well! Well!!! Well!!!
You are not so many Virginia!
Now do you think so?
We made you feel as if you were not, didn't we?

"Old Virginia is in the soup,
S-o-u-p C-o-u-p
Soup! Soup!! Soup!!!"

That was the yell the three hundred enthusiastic Carolina supporters were singing Thursday while on their way to Richmond, and that was the yell the same contingent was singing after the struggle with the long haired pig skin chasers from Virginia, was over.

With the scalps of the Indians dangling in their belts, helmeted, armored, padded, mighty in the glory of their youth and magnificent strength, the University of Virginia foot ball warriors found out in fifteen minutes Thanksgiving Day that they were against eleven fighting men, "Tar Heels," North Carolinians who didn't seem to know what giving up meant.

In an area formed by four walls of humans from ten to fifty rows deep—these two sets of eleven young giants fought bitterly, bravely, fairly, squarely honestly, terribly, for seventy cheering, blood stirring minutes.

At two twenty Capt. Foust (God bless him and his noble followers) leading the "Tar Heel" aggregation, ran briskly to the center of the field and the Carolinians began their preliminary practice. At this jun-ture the "Tar Heel" adherents went wild with enthusiasm and the Carolina yell "Boom Rah Ray" could be distinctively heard by all. A few moments later the Virginia team—the mighty Virginia—arrived on the scene of action and was vociferously applauded by her admirers and followers. A spirit of confidence, which was shown in various ways, possessed the Orange and Blue, and the spirit of "I am Lord of all I survey" reigned supreme.

While the two teams were warming up, the ten thousand cold, chilled spectators could be seen sizing up the teams, and it is significant to note in this connection that the betting, which, previous to Carolina's appearance, ranged anywhere from 6 to 1 that Virginia would win, and on even money that Carolina would not score, dropped perceptibly, and North Carolina stock began to rise rapidly. The foundation for this change was well founded as will later on be shown.

A. L. COX.

Both teams, after the preliminary practice, walked to the middle of the field, a coin was flashed in the air and Capt Harris said, "Heads".

THE GAME

For a minute probably the four human walls shut up their mouths.

R. S. STEWART.

Holt (we all love him) was eyeing the pigskin for the first kick and the start of the struggle. He had actually located the one speck on that leather oval where he wanted his toe to land. He tiptoed towards it softly, lightly. His right foot went back, shot forward and the ball left the ground, soared high in the air and the Virginians were up and after it, with the Carolinians up and after them.

Pollard, Virginia's plucky quarter, received the oval and advanced 18 yards making a beautiful run. This occurrence brought forth deafening applause. Council hit the Tar Heel line and was bitterly repulsed and Johnson succeeded in giving a repetition of the Council act. Harris attempted to buck the line for the 5 yards but failed and it was Carolina's ball. The peerless Foust smashed the Virginia line for 4 yards and then Jacocks writhed himself loose from the mass of struggling warriors, and began a run that made Virginia rooters sick. He covered 25 yards toward the Virginia goal and then the old Captain plowed through the line where Mr. Johnson was supposed to preside for 5 more and on the next pass Frank (he was eating 'em up then) hurled through the line of Indian beaters for 23 yards. It took more than one man to stop the ferocious Foust. Pollard cried "Help me, Virginia or I sink." He was near the Virginia goal. Mann—the revolving half back, a rattling good player—took the ball and demonstrated the fact that there was no tar on his heels. He dodged like a scared canine with a can tied to its tail and a pack of boys with rocks behind him. When the "Corn" player was uncovered the ball was seen on Virginia's 10 yard line. Foust smashed the line for 4 yards and Jacocks went 2 more. Now the next act—an act which caused many frantic supporters to

At last the agony is over. Carolina in a beautiful game of hard, straightforward football, devoid of flukes and accidental plays, has tied her old rival the University of Virginia. This was without doubt the hardest best game Carolina has put up this season, and of Varsity's work we have no criticism to offer.

Well did we know that in the formidable Virginia eleven we were to meet foemen of enviable prowess, flushed as they were with victories of so many hard fought fields. Well did we know, too, that there would be battle royal when white and blue met the orange and blue at Richmond last Thursday. And so it was. But in the Tar Heels were found the grit, backbone and skill equal to the emergency. Every man on the team went into the game with the determination to do his best, and he did it. Carolina's three hundred rooters on the side lines did their part too, and well do they deserve their share of credit.

This is the last game in our schedule and so closes our foot ball season.

At present it looks as though Carolina is not going to have a single intercollegiate debate next spring. The query we submitted to Johns Hopkins was refused on the ground that it contained "more words than ideas." Then we kindly asked our friends of Baltimore to select a query that suits them and give us choice of side. As yet they have made no reply. We are patiently waiting to see what their next excuse will be.

Then there is our sister institution to the south of us—Georgia. Why she is delaying so long we don't know. One thing is sure—if we are to have a debate with any institution next spring, arrangements will have to be made before much longer. To us it seems advisable for our committee to write to both institutions again and kindly request that they give us a definite reply at once as to what they intend to do.

Much dissatisfaction has been caused by the delay on the part of the Fraternities to elect an editor-in chief of this year's Yackety-Yack. The work on our annual should have begun at least a month ago, but as matters now stand it seems that nothing will be done before January, as examinations are so near upon us. The societies elect editors three weeks ago, and to many this delay to effect an editor-in-chief seems unnecessary and surely detrimental to the best interests of the Yackety Yack. There is a movement on foot to have a called meeting of the societies to discuss the advisability of their taking no part in the publication of the annual if this dead-lock is not removed by Monday. It is to be hoped that such action will not be necessary and that the Yackety Yack work may begin soon.

During the season which now draws to a close the colleges and universities of the South have been represented by the most magnificent array of foot ball material the Southern gridiron has ever known. And the place to which these men of brain and brawn have brought Southern athletics is one of which we are justly proud. Never before has there been so great an interest taken in athletic in the South; never before have we had such splendid coaching; consequently, never before have Southern foot ball teams reached so high a degree of skill and efficiency. To those who entertain optimistic views as to the value of foot ball in college life the future outlook for Southern athletics is indeed gratifying.

When we look back on the wonderful progress made this season and then turn to the pleasing outlook of the future, it seems safe to predict that should this lively interest in Southern athletics continue, the time is not far distant when the foot ball teams put out by colleges and universities of the South will "hold their own" against those of the larger institutions of the North and West.

The University of Georgia has recently been endowed with a Harvard scholarship worth $250 per annum.

CHAMPIONSHIP GAME.

be relieved of their "here-with-all"—was very short, but my! how spicy and gingery. "All Southern" quarterback Graves called aloud the signal, a large figure quickly stepped back, a rush, a collision, a heavy push—and Foust—the immortal Foust, the idol of the college, whose name was on the lips of every "Tar Heel," was shoved across the line after twenty four minutes of play, scoring the first touch down of the game.

"All hail the name of Foust, Let Virginia prostrate fall." Jones kicked an easy goal. Score, Carolina 6; Virginia 0. Harris kicked the ball to Holt who advanced 15 yards. Jacocks kicked from the field, and Pollard got the ball, but only returned 4 yards. Council made two yards, Wall followed with a like number and Heald made one. Wall smashed the line for three and so did Council. Harris next set the rooters wild by gaining 10 yards around left end. After the Virginians were unable to gain any distance unless "Bull" Council was used, so the old "Tar Heel," the best player on the Virginia team, was given the ball eight times in succession and had advanced the ball to Carolina's 14 yard line when he made a costly fumble and Carolina covered the leather. Jacocks punted 45 yards and time was called with the ball in Virginia's possession on her 45 yard line.

Score, Carolina 6; Virginia 0.

SECOND HALF.

In the second half—that is the first fifteen minutes of the half, the "Tar Heels" did not play with near as much force and vim that characterized the first. But after Virginia had forced the ball twice over our goal line, Carolina awoke to the realization of her situation and gave the best exhibition of an uphill foot ball game and true North Carolina spirit, grit and determination ever known in the South. With the score of twelve to six staring them in the face, the "Tar Heels" went in the game to win and yard by yard they forced the Virginians down the field until Jones was shoved over for a touch down. Although they did not win they proved a source of uneasiness to the "Sore Backs."

After Virginia had made two touch-downs in the second half many believed the result would be 12 to 6. But we know who didn't think so—the Carolina foot ball team. Carolina was given the ball on the 40 line and by hard and consistent plays the ball was brought within 8 yards of Virginia's goal but we fumbled and lost, for the time being, a nice chance to score. Fumbling, however, is a common happening with all teams and our boys are not super human. Notwithstanding this "hard luck" our boys continued their good work (they are no quitters) and by wonderful line smashes and superb generalship the ball was advanced to Va.'s 3 yard line. It was 3rd down, touch down to make. If only this touch down could be made! Thousands were watching breathlessly. Little Graves said to "Bully" Jones: "Can you carry her over?" "I will do my best," replied "Bully" and the signal was given for Jones to tie the score, "4, 36, etc." Stewart dislocated a man's shoulder, Farlow didn't like his man's looks and one could see the sun set through the hole. On went Bully, upheld by Engle and Berkeley and pushed by the "Iron Horse," Newton, against the Virginia line with a tremendous crash and the ball rested peacefully over the Virginia line. Jones kicked goal. Score: Carolina 12; Va.; 12.

Dr. Hume went to Oxford and delivered a lecture before the Oxford Shakespeare Club Saturday night. He will give another some time next spring. Sunday morning he preached at Oxford, and Sunday night in Durham at the First Baptist church.

Russell, '04, and Parsons, '05, spent Sunday in Durham.

R. O. Everett has been elected to represent the Phi Society in the Washington Birthday exercises on February 22nd. The orator from the Di has not been selected.

The two literary societies, according to their custom to adjourn two weeks before examinations, do not meet regularly tonight. The Di will hold a short business meeting but will adjourn in time to hear the Junior-Soph debate.

The Junior-Soph debate between the Di and Phi will take place tonight in Gerrard Hall. Dameron, '04, and Daniel, '05, will represent the Phi; Johnson, '04, and Hudson, '05, the Di. The subject is, "Resolved, that the United States Government Should Own and Operate the Coal Mines." The Phi men have the affirmative and the Di the negative. An interesting debate is promised.

The King's Daughters will hold their annual bazaar Tuesday, December the 9th, from 3.30 to 10 P. M., next door to Herndon's hardware store. The public is invited to attend.

OLD SONG—NEW TUNE.

The following song with a few changes appeared in the last issue of "College Topics." It seems to us that under the present circumstances it is especially appropriate.

In that good old Virginia town,
That good old Richmond town,
Sailing 'round Virginia's end,
Gaining down by down,
We bucked their line
And that's a very good sign
That N. C. U. did carry the ball Across Virginia's line.

On that good Thanksgiving day,
That good Thanksgiving day,
The blue and white, in splendid fight
Did up old U. Va.
Our rooters shout
At Va.'s rout.
They could not hold us down
For there's always something doing
Where Tar Heel boys are found.

In a place called Charlottesville,
A place called Charlottesville,
The score to them it certainly was
An awful bitter pill.
It seems a sin
They thought they'd win
And that's a very good sign
That old N. C. played the devil
With Virginia's beefy line.

Exchanges.

During the past two weeks this—shall we call it a department?, or filler-of-space-not-otherwise-filled—has by the grace of the powers that be, eked out an extremely precarious existence. To its friends we wish to say that if the same kindly interest and magnanimity be shown for a few weeks longer it will very probably survive until Christmas.

This state of affairs has not been caused by our contemporaries on the exchange list, because most of these have come regularly with ample material. In justice to ourselves we must say—not in a spirit of complaint, but by way of parenthesis—that for the past two weeks, only one-fourth of the matter sent in for this department—and that two weeks late—has appeared. While it is conceivable that the great mass of this could have given room for news of more vital interest, yet we were all very much interested in that Theatre Party in Richmond at least.

There was very evidently a re-organization of the eleven, to say the least, before our Norfolk game.

The Georgetown eleven has disbanded. The faculty objected to "ringers" playing and as they were unable to play without them there was but one course to take.—Ky. State Collegian.

On the 26th inst. Vanderbilt, our former rival on the rostrum, met the University of Tennessee in debate.

The Hustler calls upon the students to show their college spirit by helping them to win the Southern Championship in debate as well as in football." Well, there is a possibility of arranging a post season game, and thereby establishing her claims to supremacy on the gridiron. But, in the light of the past and in view of present arrangements, Vanderbilt, even though she defeated Tennessee in debate, would not have a color of title to support her claim to supremacy in this field.

Seniors Win Class Championship.

In a game very closely contested and full of interest the Seniors defeated the Sophomores last Saturday. The margin by which this was done, however, is a small one, since the final score reads 2 to 0. This contest closed the class football season and placed the championship in the hands of the Seniors.

Those who saw the game will remember how the Sophomores, receiving the kick-off ran it back some 15 yards, then by the quickness and dash appeared at first to run the Seniors off their feet. They will recall also how about their own forty-yard line the Seniors stuck their own feet deep in terra firma and recovering the ball, how Gold tore around right end for a pretty run of 20 yards, about the Sophomore 35 yard line. The Seniors being held without gain, Gordon tries a drop kick for goal, which falls a little short. Emerson catches the ball but is downed on the goal side. This gives the Seniors a safety, and the only score of the game. Score: Seniors 2; Sophs 0.

During the remainder of the first half, as of the game, the Seniors did most of the ground gaining, while Worth by two long punts materially aided the Sophomores in holding their own. The Seniors were fortunate in the matter of fumbled balls which they secured with a decided gain nearly every time. Toward the close of the contest the ball was being forced steadily and rapidly toward the goal of the Sophomores. The call of time saved them, however, saved them with the ball within 15 yards of their back line.

The absence of Brown, who was sick, and Singletary, who was ruled off, materially weakened the Sophomore line. The Seniors, on the other hand, missed their captain, Skinner.

The line up follows:

Sophomores.		Seniors.
Worth	L. E.	Giles
		Cumming
Whitley	L. T.	Bynum
Nixon	L. G.	Ward
Ross	C.	Willcox, J
Miller	R. G.	Judd
Wrenn	R. T.	Collins
Groome	R. E.	Tomlinson
Emerson	Q.	Gordon
Meares	L. H. B.	Gold
Haywood	R. H. B.	Graham
Heide	F. B.	Willcox G

Whitley was captain of the Sophomore team, and Gordon acted captain of the Seniors. Substitutes. For the Sophomores: Gilmer; for Seniors: Sibley, Clement and Johnston. Coach Olcott, referee. Albert Cox, umpire. The attendance, 150, was very gratifying.

THE SEASON CLOSURES.

A Review of the Work of Carolina and Her Faithful Scrubs.

The success or failure of the football season as judged from a Carolina point of view is the success or failure of Carolina's eleven in the Virginia game. This is the criterion. When Carolina wins that game, other defeats, other disappointments are all forgotten, all swallowed up in that one glorious victory. But so judged, the season just passed would be indifferent, and yet it was highly successful in that its culmination was a total surprise to all judges of football throughout the South. Reynolds, Georgia's coach, as an evidence of the general expert opinion, predicted a Virginia victory; all Virginians were thoroughly confident, and supporters of the White and Blue were barely hopeful of success. On the appointed day, Thanksgiving, it was ideal football weather; the crowd was large and enthusiastic; the teams were in perfect condition. The game was a battle of giants, well coached, well trained and determined, and on its result hung the decision of the Southern championship. Carolina virtually won. Her eleven wearers of the White and Blue played the Virginians off their feet, and in the first few minutes of play had scored and then, when the tide had turned and defeat stared them squarely in the face, they rallied and scored again, and the final result was 12 and 12.

The work of Carolina's team during the season just closed has been of a surprisingly indifferent character, judging from the excellence of the material and the thorough coaching. The result of the preliminary games was barely satisfactory; the Davidson game was a surprise and gave us hope of a successful season. Following close upon the Davidson game, however, V. P. I. played Carolina to a standstill, and the offensive play of the White and Blue was discerably weak, and our confidence of ultimate success dwindled to a mere hope, and we looked forward to the Virginia game with a feeling of dread. Carolina then played Virginia Military Institute, and the result of a week of offensive coaching asserted itself, and our team walked all over the Virginians. Our defensive play was poor, however, and V. M. I.'s comparatively weak team succeeded in scoring twice and the result of the game was a bare victory for Carolina. The A. and M. game was disappointing; the Georgetown game a failure, and with less than two weeks for the final preparations for the Virginia game, Coach Olcott set to work to develop from a squad of exceptional material a team of men, and to teach these men to play the game with courage and a never-die determination. They played such a game, and the game will go down in memory as a struggle of nerve-force, grit and determination. The team has received its reward; every man has been cheered again and again; his praises sung in song and story, and they will continue to be sung; but there is a team of men, unheard of, merits untold, praises unsung, who fought for Carolina every day in the season, a team of men who were knocked about from day to day without hope of reward, and who made many sacrifices for the Varsity. They are the Scrubs, that's all, just the Scrubs; and this is generally spoken with a sneer, but they are workers, and without such work the Varsity would have failed utterly. The Scrubs were called on time after time to work for the sake of the team, and they never shirked, and every student should have ceased his shouts of victory for the victors and cheered once, just once, for the Scrubs.

College spirit, an uncertain term, is of a two-fold nature: active and passive; positive and indifferent. The Scrub is a living example of the active and positive college spirit. He works and sacrifices for the sake of his college with no hope of reward, he is called out every afternoon; signs every pledge; carries out every order of the Coach; and enters into the game with no incentive but the desire to do his duty. The life of the Scrub is strenuous; he backs work behind a light line; that light line before a heavy line; and all together against a stronger, better team. The possibility of a broken limb and the absolute certainty of injuries of a more or less serious nature constantly confront him, and only grim determination at times forces him into the game. The Scrub isn't looked upon as a very potent factor in college life; he isn't looked upon as a very necessary adjunct to every successful Varsity. He is merely thought of as a matter of course. Consequently, when the Varsity is toasted and cheered, there is barely a thought of the Scrubs and never a cheer. This season Carolina's Scrubs have shown marked ability, and without such a strong Scrub team the success of the college team would have been very doubtful. The Scrubs, with the exception of a few cases, have shown an unusual willingness to work, and they have responded right gladly when the Coach called on them to help build up the team. We owe something to the Scrubs. If nothing more, we owe them gratitude. Their names should be emblazoned on our hearts and when Carolina 12—Virginia 12 is a matter of memory, we should recall two teams of men, the Varsity and the Scrubs, and give to the latter their credit.

A pump has been put in the well on the campus.

A game of basket ball is scheduled to be played in the gymnasium this afternoon at 3 o'clock, between the Meds and the Post Graduates.

AFFIRMATIVE WINS.

The First Inter-society Debate—The Junior-Soph Debate.

In a vigorous contest between the Soph-Junior representatives of the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies Messrs. E. A. Daniel and E. S. W. Dameron, of the Phi, received the decision over Messrs. S. F. Hudson and A. H. Johnson, of the Di, last Saturday night. The question over which the speakers differed was "Resolved, That the Coal Mines Should be Owned and Operated by the Government."

Mr. J. K. Ross, who presided, welcomed the audience in behalf of the two societies and Mr. Nixon, Secretary, read the query and the names of the debaters; the Phi upholding the affirmative, and the Di the negative. The orchestra then appeased the disputants with an enlivening selection and the strife of words was on.

Mr. Daniels said in brief: "The American Government is a political institution to protect private rights, to maintain equitable conditions among its citizens in all pursuits, and to promote public good. There are two conditions upon which government ownership can be upheld. First: their must be industries in which social evils arise as the result of unregulated private administration. Second: they must involve some comprehensive social interest.

"Can this be applied to the coal mining industry of this country? In reply we say that the coal mining industry is a natural monopoly.

"That the government ownership of the coal mining industry is a function of government is not a new idea. It has had a slow and steady growth, that has taken more than four score years to develop into the function of government. Industry has been taken off the old basis and placed upon a new basis, and the fundamental basis of steam is coal.

"There are three objects for which any government ever owns any industry. First: for the purpose of revenue alone. Second: as a necessity to meet the demands of the public, revenues being incidental. Third: for the purpose of service, money being expended.

"The coal mining industry is more closely connected with the government than any other industry. It is the underlying basis upon which the whole machinery of government rests. The strikes in the coal mines are known and read of all men, because they affect all men.

"I condemn private ownership of the coal mines in the name of commerce, whose interest it has disregarded; I condemn it in the name of industry, whose wheels it has blocked; I condemn it in the name of society, upon whose boundaries it has encroached; lastly, I condemn it in the name of the Government of the United States, whose dignity it has lowered by its disgraceful lawlessness."

Mr. Hudson opened for the negative as follows:

"The unifying force of our ideal has lifted our people to a plane above that of any other government. It is to reverse this ideal, to depart from the true function of government for it to own and operate the coal industry. If the government should take into its possession every natural product, every product upon which the people are dependent, there would be a nationalization of nearly all industries. This would be paternalism in the extreme and the deepest State socialism. By this step we prevent evolutionary development, curtailing the freedom of individual initiative lessening the development of manhood.

"The coal industry is fitted by no criterion for a government industry. The evils of our industrial life can be corrected under our present system, no change is needed."

The closing argument for the Phi was made by Mr. Dameron:

"The history of the coal industry for the past fifty years," he said, "has been one of 'wars and rumors of wars.' As labor and capital have become more and more highly organized, strikes have become more numerous, larger, longer, and therefore more disastrous in their effects. Governmental ownership is the only safe and efficient remedy for the strike evil. Society cannot afford to wait upon voluntary arbitration for its coal supply.

"The instability in the price of coal is another evil connected with private ownership. The government, by avoiding strike loss and by laboring with the purpose to serve the public and not to enrich itself, would be able to furnish the consumer with coal at a lower and more stable price; for the Government manages the postal business with economy and efficiency.

"The coal mines will soon be owned by the State. False cries about socialism will soon cease to be of any avail to the opponents of the resolution."

The concluding speech was that of Mr. Johnson, of the Di. He supported his side in part as follows:

"A short review of my colleague's speech shows the question to be one of expediency and practicality. The many evils of the present system can not be eliminated by the proposed theory. First: Because it could not lower the price of coal; coal miners would cost too much; taxation would have to remunerate governmental expenditures. Second. It could not meet the demands or satiate the wants of our country as well as the present system. Third: The very best men are required to operate coal mines and the government lacks the

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

As our fall term now draws to a close it seems well that we stop for a moment and look back over our work of the past few months. And in doing so we may be sure that the most cursory retrospective glance will reveal to us many faults both of omission and of commission. Indeed we cannot expect the result to be otherwise. Yet, we should not on this account hesitate to make such a hasty survey, for by noting our blunders of the past we are better prepared to avoid similar errors in the future. So much for individual retrospection.

Now, for a moment let us look at the work of the University for the fall term. And here, too, just as in the case of the individual, we shall find some sins we may wish had not been committed. But when we look at the work of the session as a whole, the survey does indeed produce a pleasing effect upon all who are interested in the University and the great work it is doing.

A glance at the register of students reveals many facts worth noting. First, we find the enrollment for the fall term going up to 575—the largest in the history of the institution; we find sixteen states and one foreign country represented — including every state from Massachusetts to Florida, excepting Delaware; we find sixty-three per cent of the students church-members, representing fourteen denominations; we find unusually large classes in all departments, professional and academic. It is true that the Freshman class is no larger than that of last year but its preparation is the best on record.

Then there are a few other features of this term we wish to emphasize. The work of all the classes has been of an unusually high order; indeed, after careful observation, we feel justifiable in saying it is the best that has been accomplished since our connection with the institution. There have been better recitations, fewer "grats" and a better spirit generally than we have ever known here. And then what pleases us all is that the abominable practice of hazing has been practically abolished, and may we hope it will forever be a thing of the past.

Let this great progress go on, let this spirit of good will and friendly feeling continue to dominate us, and soon we shall see that our Alma Mater, the pride of us all, has become the Mecca of Southern scholarship.

Subscriptions to The Tar Heel are now due. Our only source of funds in the fall is our subscription collections. Let this urge you, subscribers of the Hill, to see the manager at once and pay up.

We also hope the alumni will hasten to send in their subscription dues. For the most part the alumni receiving The Tar Heel are in prosperous circumstances and will scarcely miss $1.50. On the other hand $1.50 means much to us when we are so short of funds.

In the report of the Virginia-Carolina game for The Tar Heel the Athletic Editor, when naming the stars of the game, through an inadvertence failed to mention Mr. Mann as one of the shining lights. The Editor greatly regrets the occurrence and hastens to extend an apology.

With this issue The Tar Heel makes its last appearance before the holidays. To all our subscribers, exchanges and friends we extend our best wishes for a pleasant vacation.

In reply to our latest communication Johns Hopkins informs us that our proposition will be discussed at the next meeting of the literary societies.

Gorgon's Head German.

On Friday night next after Thanksgiving, the Junior class order of the Gorgon's Head gave one of the most enjoyable, and at the same time most successful, germans of the season at Commons Hall.

Wright's orchestra, of Raleigh, appeared at 10:30 p. m. and discoursed sweetest music until the last strains of "Home, Sweet Home," reminded those present that it was early in the morning.

The german was very ably lead by Mr. Brenizer, assisted by Messrs Dunn and Albert Latta.

The following participated; Miss Nell Hinsdale, of Raleigh, with Mr. Dunn.

Miss Haywood, of Raleigh, with Mr. Albert Cox.

Miss Pettinger of Raleigh, with Mr. Thorp.

Miss Lamb, of Williamston, with Mr. Hayden Clement.

Chapeones. Dr. and Mrs. Venable, Mr. and Mrs. Gore, Mrs. McRae, Mrs. Graves and Mrs. Pender.

Exchanges.

We had never found out what a pretty comic opera could be made from our college songs,—College Topics. And we had never dreamed of what a "roasting" there might have been at the Bijou in Richmond on Thanksgiving night, if every thing had been favorable. We have nothing but the highest praise, however, for the generous hospitality accorded us in Richmond by citizens and students, and for the spirit which afterwards pervaded College Topics when commenting upon the game.

In the debate with the University of Tennessee, on Wednesday, Nov. 26, Vanderbilt won the decision for the affirmative of the question. Resolved: That the United States Senators Should be Elected by the Direct Vote of the People."

Georgia defeated her old rival, Auburn, on Thanksgiving Day by the score of 12 to 5. The cry "Auburna delenda est," backed by the coaching of Billy Reynolds, proved effective.

"Dear Jack," said Kate, with eyes of blue,

To tell the truth, I cannot see Why you don't make a verse or two Which I can say is for me alone"

"My love" said Jack, "that would I do

If I did not with fear foresee That if I make a verse to you,

It might make you averse to me." Yale Record.

John Wanamaker, the merchant prince par excellence, is displaying philanthropic tendencies in a very practical way. It is his purpose to provide Philadelphia with a college similar in its aims, equipment, and practical work to the Armour Institute of Chicago and the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn. This college will be an adjunct of Bethany College.

The large appropriations for the increase of our navy, made by our last Congress, have rendered necessary a three year course, instead of four, at the naval academy for the manning of the new men-of-war.

At Harvard, tennis is the most popular sport. Last year it attracted 799 men, while rowing attracted 645, foot ball 242, track work 145, and base ball only 22.

A Serious Love Spell.

A young lady sings in our choir Whose hair is the color of phoir,

But her charms are unique.

She has such a fair chique, It is really a charm to be thoir.

Whenever she looks down the aisle, She gives me a beautiful smaisle,

And of all her beaux

I am sure she sheaux

She likes me best all the whaisle.

Last Saturday she wore a new sacque,

Low-cut in the front and the bacque

And a lovely bouquet

Worn in such a cute wuet, As only few girls have the knacque.

Some day ere she grows too antique,

In marriage her hand I will sique;

If she's not a coquette

Which I'd greatly regruette

She shall share my six dollars a wique. —Ex.

Mrs. Gore gave a delightful entertainment to the young ladies visiting in Chapel Hill and to about forty students on an evening during Thanksgiving week.

Prior, '02, who has been taking a post-graduate course here in chemistry, left Thursday for Birmingham, Ala., to accept a position as a chemist.

The next entertainment in the Star Lecture Course will be given Monday night at 7:30 by Willoughby Reade.

Misses Nellie and Annie Hinsdale, of Raleigh, who have been visiting at Judge McRae's, returned to their home Thursday.

Miss Eliza Land, of Williamston, who spent several weeks here at Judge McRae's, left Thursday for Raleigh to visit the Misses Hinsdale.

Judge Jones was on the Hill this week visiting his two sons. The Judge was at Richmond on Thanksgiving to see the Carolina-Virginia game and it is said that he and General Cox forgot their dignity for a while that day and walking arm in arm cheered loudly for Carolina.

Dunbar, on account of the sickness of his brother, left Thursday for his home in the extreme eastern part of the state.

A fencing class has been formed in the University and meets once a week, on Saturday afternoons at 3 o'clock in the gymnasium.

What about forming a boxing class after Christmas? Mr. Von Den Steinen, the physical director is perfectly willing to help in this, and he says that if enough students will get gloves, he will teach them in place of the regular exercises. It is too late to take any action in this matter before Christmas but it is well for those interested to think of the matter, and be prepared to help in forming such a class after Christmas. It might be well to suggest to Santa Claus the appropriateness of a pair of boxing gloves for a present, while at home.

The University has been receiving more applications lately for chemists than it can fill. At one place where several U. N. C. men are stationed a demand was sent here for more men. The company was written that we had men, but they were not quite ready. This company answered immediately to send what we had. The chemical department of the University is thus doing a great work, but it is greatly hampered by lack of room.

The Young Men's Christian Association has received an invitation to send a representative to the national celebration which the Y. M. C. A., of Princeton, is holding this week.

Two hundred and fifty U. N. C. students saw the Virginia game in Richmond on Thanksgiving. A special train left here at 6 a. m. on Thanksgiving and reached Richmond after a seven-hour trip. About the same time was required for returning. The cars were not crowded, and, leaving aside the long time spent in making the trip, the day was probably the most pleasant ever spent by the students.

The schedule of the afternoon train leaving Chapel Hill has been changed from 3:55 so as to make connection with the train for Durham, Raleigh, Goldsboro and also the one going west to Greensboro. This is a great convenience, especially to students going east.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon Dance.

Last Saturday evening in Commons Hall, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity gave an informal dance to the young ladies of the Hill. Besides the members of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity there were many others who participated and the stags were numerous. The village band furnished the music. The occasion was an enjoyable one.

The following couples were present:

- Miss Graves with Mr. Gordon.
 - Miss Parsley with Mr. M. Calder.
 - Miss G. King with Mr. A. Cox.
 - Miss N. Hinsdale with Mr. H. London.
 - Miss Clark with Mr. Meares.

These editors have faithfully begun work and are endeavoring to get out a truly representative annual. To accomplish this the hearty cooperation of the student body is necessary. One of the best ways to aid the editors is by subscribing for the book. The subscription price is fifty cents in advance and one dollar when you get the book, making a total of $1.50. This advanced money is asked for so that the editors may be able to pay expenses until the money for the advertisements can be collected. Give your subscription to McIver or Abernethy and thereby assist the editors in their endeavor to make this the best Yackety Yack ever published by the University.

The council of Missouri University has passed an order that gatherings of the students won't be tolerated in the future. If more than three assemble in a noisy manner they will be held liable to punishment. Henry Farrar Linscott, A.B., A.M., Ph.D. Born at Thomaston, Maine, June 4, 1871; Died at Chapel Hill, N. C., December 30, 1902. A.B. Bowdoin, 1892; A.M. Bowdoin, 1893; Ph.D. University of Chicago, 1895; Phi Beta Kappa; Alpha Delta Phi; Instructor in Brown University, 1895-96; Instructor in Latin in U. N. C., 1896-97; Associate Professor of Classical Philology in U. N. C., 1897-99; Professor of Latin in U. N. C., 1899-1902; Assisted Harkness in the latest edition of his Latin Grammar; At the time of his death he was engaged in the preparation of two Latin text books; Published various articles, lectures and poems. Son of A. N. Linscott; Mother and father both living at Thomaston, Maine; Married Miss Annie Orr of Chicago, 1900.

AS KNOWN BY HIS COLLEAGUES.

The University has lost, by the death of Henry Farrar Linscott, one of the ablest men in its Faculty. Finely trained for his work, he entered upon it with a zeal and fidelity which could only lead to the highest success. Few more scholarly men have ever taught in these halls. His literary instinct was true, with a touch of the finer poetic spirit. His judgement was safe and he kept a quiet, sound balance of mind which made him of great value in council.

He gladly took his part in all that made for the upbuilding of the University and did not spare himself in loving labor for its welfare. Honest and true, gentle, unselfish and un-faillingly kind, a rare and lovely spirit has been taken from our midst, and we shall long feel his loss.

F. P. VENABLE.

There are times when from the fulness of the heart the lips cannot speak. Poignant emotions overwhelm the friend as he would estimate the man.

Dr. Linscott may be spoken of as a "northern gentleman," an example worthy of emulation, it matters not what may be one's heritage. It is rare that a scholar, brilliantly erudite, possesses a gracious combination of the three great qualities desirable in an University professor. Primarily a teacher of exceptional ability; a delver into the unknown giving the results of his researches to the world; a conservative, yet advanced, leader of younger men was Linscott.

Reared among traditions of extreme localization in one part of this immense Republic, having viewed life for some several years from the vantage point of a great urban University, he came into another rural community which had risen with ideas inherited from a stalwart people, diametrically opposed to those of his parentage, and he was at home. Such was the judicious tact of the ripe young man, that while he held to the juster views of the people of his youth, he grasped the good of his new friends and would not see their shortcomings. Sifting the best from all life wherever found, he earned an exalted seat in their affection.

Linscott's breadth of conception was the outgrowth, to be sure, of a wide knowledge and profound scholarship; but the success meted him resulted not from those qualities alone. The culture of the single son, the innate gentleness and kindness of his nature readily gained for him friends, sincere and genuine, among the people new to him.

This pen falters when the writer knows he wrote with such elegance, but force, spoke with such rhythmic ease, but power. One is reminded of the remark of a colleague who said, "Linscott never writes or speaks but 'tis a poem."

In the taking away of this good man, a flower of genius was plucked in the splendor of its blooming; a stay removed from a tender devoted wife and we mourn profoundly his loss from this world, but breathe a prayer of praise in the quieting thought that he has gone to the brighter home.

You ask me what about Dr. Linscott impressed me most. It was the genuineness of the man, his broad sympathy which was deep as well, and his ready helpfulness. There may be many man who know as much Latin, but I don't know where we shall ever find such another man.

COLLIER COBB.

Dr. Linscott was a teacher, a gifted and successful teacher. His scholarly training was thorough; his devotion to his calling complete. But he had also a creative talent which marks the man of letters.

When, a few years ago, the younger members of the University Faculty wished to perform a play for the entertainment of the Thursday Club, he wrote a very creditable one and wrote it with ease. During the rehearsals he frequently added without effort new verses which the situations seemed to demand. It is not likely that he attached much importance to this production, which however might have been a difficult task for many college instructors.

His public addresses and even his occasional speeches were characterized by richness of thought and elegance of diction. They afforded the intellectual pleasure which comes from the adequate expression of wholesome truth.

We do not know whether his thought often sought expression in poetic form. But we may believe that it did. It is certain that the verses published in the University Magazine for March, 1900, on the death of Samuel May, display no touch of the prentice hand. They have the chastened beauty and suggestiveness of true poetry.

If more time had been allotted to him, Professor Linscott might have obtained an honorable place among the American scholars who are also men of letters.

W. D. T.

Though my association with Dr. Linscott extended over only four months, I felt from the start that his was a rare nature and that closer acquaintance would mean closer friendship and warmer admiration. And so it was, for I never left his presence without feeling anew the charm of his genial personality and realizing afresh the beauty and distinction of his character.

Scholarship fused with rugged manliness, gentleness wedded with strength, a culture that placed service above self, a courtesy as refined as un-failing, keen critical power but with no taint of cynicism, breadth of view matched only by an equal breadth of sympathy—these were the traits in Dr. Linscott that changed my respect into admiration and my admiration into love.

Three years ago, on the death of an honored colleague, he closed a poem with these lines:

"And mortal life is like the gentle stream,
Which leaps with rippling of its childhood song,
Fulfills, in manhood strength, the youthful dream;
Yet, be its tranquil course or short or long,
Must ever widen to the sea
And float into eternity."

He too has now passed from the hurry of the river to the calm of the sea. Perhaps "the youthful dream" remained in part unfulfilled; but he has left behind him the record of an honorable achievement, the memory of a gracious life, and the heritage of a stainless nobility.

C. ALPHONSO SMITH.

The passing away of Dr. Linscott has caused a very great loss to the University. He was so finished a scholar as to leave nothing to be desired in the head of his department.

He was so wise in council and conversant with business methods as to make him an invaluable aid in the management of the internal affairs of the institution.

He was so gentle and cultured in his bearing towards those who were under his instruction, as well as in his association with his fellows, as to beget not only respect but regard for him in the minds of all with whom he was brought in official contact. And he was so pleasant and genial in his intercourse with all that he will be long missed in the social life of the community. Looking back upon his career since he has been a member of the faculty of this University, there is absolutely nothing which one would wish to change. He was a gentleman without reproach.

JAS. C. MACRAE.

About the middle of December I walked from the office with Dr. Linscott. A sad, vivid feeling came over me and I remarked on reaching home that our friend would not live until New Year's. On Christmas Day a party of us dined with him. The gentleness of his spirit was so strong that his physical pain was overlooked. His concern for his guests was so eager that we forgot his weakness; and the occasion will live as we live—a day of sweet social concourse. On Wednesday following we rendered the last solemn services of friend to friend.

Thus the life of gentle service, of sweet sympathy, of heroism, of self-control, flowed on into the very ocean of Death.

What is the secret of such a life? How can a man born and reared in Maine come and take his place in our heart life? Tell me this and you tell me the secret of the rare life that has gone from us. Dr. Linscott was a child of the sea. Life on the sea is a bold thing and yet dependent; it is free yet full of trust; it is intense yet wide as the heavens. These were his characteristics. He was intense, yet no one thought of him as sectional. He was firm in his mental processes, yet all good things claimed his interest and sympathy. He was broad and progressive, yet he labored peacefully by the side of the most conservative.

Such a life as this cannot die. It is genuine; it is high. It must abide with us as an inspiration.

H. H. WILLIAMS.

Dr. Linscott came among us a stranger and was with us only a few years, yet it seemed that he was a life-long friend; a kindly face, heartiness of manner and goodness of heart sealed at once bonds of friendship. He was broad and liberal in his views, candid and earnest in expression of opinions, yet always mindful and considerate of the feelings and sentiments of others, strong in mind and character, forceful in expression, yet of gentle disposition and charitable in his judgements. He was cheerful, frank and earnest in conversation, without a tinge of insincerity or of doubtful meaning.

His earnestness and enthusiasm were contagious and his responsive interest in what concerned his friends was quickening.

There is but one estimate of him: as a man—strong, kind and true; as a scholar—zealous, accurate and broad; as a teacher—clear, patient and inspiring; as a friend—beloved.

Touched as we are with a profound and painful grief at the sudden taking-off of our beloved friend and professor, Dr. Linscott, we, the editors, have seen fit to devote to his memory this issue of THE TAR HEEL as our poor tribute, tho' in some way indicative of the esteem and affection in which he was held by colleagues and students alike.

If we were asked what one thing about Dr. Linscott impressed us most, we should say it was his style—"That exquisite something called style, which, like the grace of perfect breeding, everywhere pervasive, nowhere emphatic, makes itself felt by the skill with which it effaces itself and masters us all at last with a sense of indennable completeness." Such was the style of him whose loss we all so deeply deplore, and this was one of the secrets of his power.

Tho' born and reared in New England, yet the gentle influences of a sunnier clime seemed to have been bound up in his warm, poetic nature. By his broad sympathy and kindly interest, his scholarly attainments and gentlemanly bearing, his intellectual power and originality, he had so entrenched himself in the hearts of colleagues and students that it may truly be said of him:

"None knew him but to love him;
None named him but to praise."

To his widow and relatives we offer our deepest heartfelt sympathy in this our common time of grief.

By the death of Dr. Henry Farrar Linscott, the University of North Carolina loses a strong man. His conception of life found expression in faithfulness to the work in hand, whatever that work might be. He impressed me as having a broad, well trained, well-furnished mind, yet modest, reserved, retiring; never pushing himself before the public, or seeking especially to win their applause. It was in the private walk of life, standing side by side with his fellows, that the best and purest qualities of a noble manhood found such easy and pleasing expression that he drew men to him and made them his friends.

Resolution of Sympathy.

The following Resolutions were passed by the Faculty of the University of North Carolina on Jan. 5th, 1903, and were recorded in the Journal:

The death of Dr. Henry Farrar Linscott, Professor of the Latin Language and Literature, has brought profound sorrow to the Faculty of the University of North Carolina.

As scholar and as man, he won for himself a place of rare distinction in the esteem of the University circles and of the community at large.

Thoroughly equipped in scholarship, endowed with intellectual gifts of high order, he exerted an inspiring influence over his colleagues and over the large number of students whom he taught.

He was helpful and judicious in the counsels of the Faculty. He rendered invaluable service as Editor of important University publications.

In all these things he was the reliable, the inspiring scholar, the efficient officer. But he was something more. He was a man of broad culture, a courteous gentleman, an affectionate, sympathetic friend. The sweetness and gentleness of his disposition were the charms of those to whom it was given to know him intimately.

To the family whose circle has been broken by the departure of this chosen member, we respectfully offer our deep sympathy.

F. P. Venable, Pres.,
Walter D. Toy,
Eben Alexander,
C. L. Raper.

There was a meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina in the office of Gov. Aycock at noon yesterday. The reports of the treasurer and bursar were received to be transmitted to the Legislature with the Governor's message. President Venable presided and feelingly announced the death of Professor Henry Linscott of the chair of Latin, and thereupon Mr. F. H. Busbee offered the following, and asked that it be spread upon the minutes:

"The members of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina, through their executive committee, have heard with profound grief of the death of Professor Henry F. Linscott, Ph. D., head of the department of Latin in the faculty of the University.

"By his great attainments in his chosen department, his high scholarship in general literature, his zeal for the advancement of learning, his unflagging labor in the upbuilding of the University and his charming personal character he had established for himself a reputation in educational circles of the State as rare as it was enviable.

"By his untimely death the University has suffered an irreparable loss, the faculty, the deprivation of a dear personal friend and companion, the students, a guide and mentor in whom they loyally trusted, and his widow and relatives, a bereavement beyond language to express." Raleigh Morning Post, Sunday, January 4.

DR. LINSCOTT.

What the Students Thought of Him.

Tuesday, the 30th of December, was a sad day for the University of North Carolina; for on that day, early in the morning, there passed away one of her strongest and most beloved professors. Dr. Linscott had been at the University only six and a half years, starting in 1896 as instructor in Greek and Latin. Yet such was the strength of his character, such was his thoroughness in his department that a few years sufficed to bring him to the chair of Latin. His was not the struggle of most men for recognition. He forged ahead by dint of mental strength and vigor; yet, as is characteristic of great men, he never esteemed himself higher than those who stood about him in his shadow. Dr. Linscott was still a young man, and though eminently successful in all his undertakings, his life gave promise of still greater achievements than had yet crowned his efforts. As of Thos. B. Macaulay, so it might be said of Dr. Linscott: "Of regular beauty he had little to boast; but in faces where there is an expression of great power, or of great good humor, or both, you do not regret its absence."

"Old Jack," as the boys fondly called him, was honored, esteemed, and loved by the entire student body, especially by those who daily sat under him as he lectured. He possessed that rare quality of being able to put himself upon a perfectly familiar basis with his pupils, at the same time maintaining their profoundest respect, and preserving the integrity of his own dignity as professor. To the industrious student his face was always pleasant, his words kind; but to the shirker of duty and him who wished to disregard the proprieties of the classroom, his words conveyed the keenest satire.

As a lecturer he was exceedingly entertaining, though it may be truly said that the public never knew him at his best. He was never so natural, or so at his ease as when speaking to his classes from his private desk. At times he grew eloquent; and on occasions, when depicting scenes from Roman life, in such language as only he himself could command, breathless silence reigned. Not a foot moved not a word whispered as the orator drew forward to his eager listeners by the grandiloquence of his words.

But he is gone; his labors are ended; our dear professor is no more; but, as today his body lies beneath the soil of chilly Maine, our bleeding hearts sob beside him there. In scholarship Dr. Linscott may be replaced; but in the affection of his boys, never.

ZEB V. JUDD.

For the first time in three years, Death has aimed his shaft at the faculty, and this time the man who fell was a man who could ill be spared. Those who studied under Dr. Linscott will not forget him soon; his long stride as he came into the classroom; his calm, "Mr. A. will you please read?" and his quaint sayings and touches of humor that were among his characteristics. Many were the dull, impenetrable passages that he would light up by one quick, striking translation that instantly unraveled some knotty point or gave a humorous turn to a sentence in a way that always helped to clear the difficulties from the way. He never failed to make the student understand. Though often evidently in pain, it was seldom he failed to appear on class and listened patiently as some hapless student floundered through the mazes of Livy or Tacitus. Always courteous, patient, obliging and willing to see more than one side to a question, by the death of Dr. Linscott, the student body has lost a good teacher and a firm friend.

The sorrow we feel over the death of our friends is always less than the esteem in which we hold them. This is especially true in regard to our beloved friend and professor, Dr. Linscott, who has been so suddenly and unexpectedly taken from us. Our sorrow is great. How great then is our esteem!

All we can say amounts to nothing to those who knew the man, still we desire to give a faint expression of our regard for him. As a teacher, we can say that Dr. Linscott always inspired his students with a desire to know just what he, himself, knew. His whole bearing was simple and yet majestic in its simplicity, so that all who knew him loved him and admired him. No one could listen to his lectures without being impressed with his strength of character and his love for the true, noble, and manly life. Mere learning to him was a small thing.

His influence on us who were once more intimately associated with him than we have been recently was great and lasting. His sympathy and kindness we can never forget. In his death the University and the State lost a life in the very bloom of its usefulness. His place will be hard to fill. We are glad that it was our privilege to know him and be guided by him.

DR. LINSOTT IN THE LECTURE-ROOM.

I would speak of Dr. Linscott from the point of view only of a student who has known him as a teacher. Yet in his case it is impossible to divorce the teacher from the man; for the teacher was the man. I have never heard him called "Professor"; something about him forestalled the title, to think of him in that capacity, or in that of teacher in the lesser meanings of the word rarely occurred to the student. If he could be said to teach, he taught as Socrates, as the Master; he was διδάσκαλος. And this means that the man himself was the knowledge imparted. The light that was in him, his character, his fine spirit, and poetic force formed the chief content of the ideas and truths carried from his lecture room, whether consciously or unconsciously by the student.

Of the field of knowledge in which he had specialized he was an interpreter. Undoubtedly he knew where the Latin roots were buried, but it seldom occurred to one to ask him, and otherwise he never dug them out; there was something vastly more important. He could lift the veil of centuries, and you were in imperial Rome, not on a sight seeing expedition, but breathing the finest atmosphere created by the best minds of the Roman world. He heard Virgil sing and could make you hear him; and better, somehow you would learn to love and know Virgil, not Virgil the preeminent stylist and poet, but Virgil the man—and Horace and the others. They became intensely human. So it all did. Still there was a something about his teaching difficult to specify—a sort of nobility of attitude, a sincerity of purpose, a sympathy of thought, that ennobled the subjects of study and gave a sense of cleanness, of poise, of reality. He would touch the frailties of Cicero with such gentle comment of charity and sympathy that you forgot them in the true greatness of the man, and saw the orator a faithful friend, a loyal patriot, a veritable hero of style.

From the students, Dr. Linscott met with the same fine courtesy, the gentlemanly dignity of bearing he always showed to them. Around him was an atmosphere in which he breathed freely and deeply. There was no uneasy sense of a critical eye upon you. One forgot oneself, became oneself and could burgeon out into something freer and better. If consciousness of a relationship arose at all, it was to recognize and reverence a spirit of rare delicacy and power, a poet, a man. No words describe him better than those he himself wrote in memoriam of a departed friend: "To his colleagues he was resourceful of help and pleasure in a common service; to his students a sympathetic interpreter of the Beauty and Romance and Humanity of life; to all a friend. In character generously good and wholesome; in personal relations constant, thoughtful and gently courteous; in the manhood of mind and heart and soul finished, he came to an environment that had not been his, knew it and was known, he brought to its people a message of Beauty and Worth effective as it was uttered in the silence of unobtrusive effort."

WILLIAM S. BERNARD.

Ever since the death of Dr. Linscott I have heard from everybody I have met expressions of regret and inquiries as to where a man could be found capable of filling his place. This shows the respect and esteem people had of him and the opinion they had of his scholarship and worth. Dr. Linscott had a way of calling a spade a spade that commanded respect. For instance if a student didn't know his lesson Dr. Linscott would tell so in plain language. But when a student treated Dr. Linscott right, no one could treat him nicer than would Dr. Linscott. And as to his scholarship, well, what he didn't know about Latin wasn't worth knowing. His scholarship was of the highest order. He had risen to the position of a scholar from the position of one who earns his sustenance by hard manual labor. So naturally he was of a serious nature. True he had wit, but for the most part he was a serious man. He looked everybody in the face, and in all his various duties proved himself, besides being a scholar of the highest order, a plain, honest, straightforward, gentleman, and I am sure I voice the sentiments of the Sophomore Class when I say that in Dr. Linscott were combined as many of virtues that go to make up the best there is in man as can well be combined in the character of any one individual.

I. C. WRIGHT.

I knew Dr. Linscott but as a teacher. It was my good fortune to be under his care three years in succession. The very first time I went on his class I had a deep respect for him and each succeeding recitation taught me to like him better. Probably no man in the faculty had exactly the same influence over his class as did Dr. Linscott. He was quick to detect mischief and frank to reprove it. He had nothing short of good order in his classes at the same time students were at ease and all loved him.

He died, "before his sun had reached its noon-day meridian and while the shadows were still slanting towards the West." He had already made for himself a high place as a teacher, and with his original-ty and capacity for work none can tell where he would have stopped if he had lived. Dr. Linscott had his own way of saying and doing things. He despised show and pretence. "He called a spade a spade." He loved to work himself and he loved to see those under him work. He was frank, sympathetic and kind in manner. He was poetical and did what he did well. Highest of all, he was a broadminded, cultured, manly gentleman,

R. S. SEWART.

In the death of Dr. Linscott the University and everyone connected with it has sustained a great loss, but I feel no hesitancy in saying that the loss falls heaviest upon the individual student. In Dr. Linscott the student had, and knew that he had, an instructor who was not only ready and willing but, at all times, eager to help him in his struggle toward the goal of knowledge; and not only to help but, what is far more valuable in this time and age, to sympathize with the wayfarer at every step. Nor was this sympathy a narrow one, extending to the student in his class-room work only; but it pervaded every phase of our college life, and this is why he was so popular among the students.

So mild, so merciful, so strong, so good,
So patient, proud, loyal, loving, pure."
A scholar, a gentleman, and, best of all, a friend in every sense of the word, it was an education in itself to be brought in contact with the man.

THE SUN.

A Scientific Address Illustrated with Stereopticon Views by Professor J. W. Gore, January 15th, 1903.

"The earth, our home, the theatre of our activity, is to us the most important of the family of worlds. In fact, so important does the earth appear that it requires some effort to think of our world other than the center of universe, with the sun, moon, planets and stars as servants, attendants and ornaments.

"The beauty and mystery of the heavenly bodies," continued Prof. Gore, "early fascinate thoughtful man and the Science of Astronomy was well advanced, when Copernicus assigned to the earth its humble place among its sisters and gave to the sun its rightful place, the center of the solar system. * * *

"The once proud earth now meekly follows the leading of the sun and modestly exerts lordship only over its one silver-faced satellite. But let us forget for a short while that our hearts are wedded to this sphere of the third rank and consider the great central body—the sun. * * *

"The moon is distant from the earth sixty times the radius of the earth or 240,000 miles. The radius of the sun is 430,000 miles. If the earth were at the center of a hollow sphere as large as the sun, the moon would be only a little more than half way the distance to the surface of such sphere. * * * It would take 1,300,000 spheres the size of the earth to make a globe the size of the sun; or to girdle the sun would take ten years of continuous travel at the rate of forty miles an hour. The sun contains just 332,000 times the amount of matter possessed by the earth and is equal to 3,600,000 millions of millions of tons. * * A person weighing 150 pounds on the earth would weigh a little more than two tons on the sun. Bodies near the earth fall 16 feet per second; near the sun they fall 445 feet per second. A second pendulum there would have to be 82 feet, instead of a fraction over three feet. * * *

"The amount of heat received by the earth from the sun in a year is sufficient to melt a layer of ice over the whole surface of the earth of an average thickness of 136.5 feet; or enough each day to melt a layer of ice 4.5 inches thick. Assuming that the amount of heat radiated is the same in all directions, we receive the 2,000,000,000th part of heat and light emitted by the sun. * * *

"If at a distance of 240,000 miles the temperature is sufficiently high to volatilize the most refractory terrestrial substances, one naturally asks: what is the state or condition of matter of which the sun is composed? Is it simply a sphere of gas or is it made up of such stuff that can endure such temperatures without volatilization? By spectrum analysis it has been shown that a great many of the terrestrial elements are present in the gaseous state in the atmosphere of the sun. * * * The atmosphere is thought to be a cloud-like mass of partially condensed vapors of very irregular surface. * * *

"When we even partially realize the great prodigality with which the sun is disposing of heat there necessarily arises questionings as to its sources. Is there any danger of a diminishing supply? If so how long will it be before the sun becomes bankrupt and the earth lifeless? * * * If the present order of things continues, there is but one conclusion—explanation of the store of energy, the cooling off of our furnace, and a dead earth. This is no dream of the scientist but the necessary result of the greatest of the laws of nature. * * * Five million years is the lowest estimate for the complete exhaustion of the sun's energy and we should have no fear of being inconvenienced."

Prof. Gore concluded his lecture with an excellent description of spots on the sun and the causes for the same. The spots range from four to 500 miles in diameter for the small ones and 50,000 to 60,000 miles in diameter for the larger ones. He also touched in striking words upon the mysterious and most beautiful phenomenon connected with the sun—the coronation crown or halo of soft pearly light that surrounds the sun and visible only during the total eclipses.

After the address Prof. Gore illustrated the chief points of his subject with especially fine stereopticon views.

Convocation Week.

The various scientific societies of America met with the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Washington, D. C., during the holidays. Fourteen men from the University of North Carolina were in attendance: President Venable, Professors Holmes, William Cain, R. H. Whitehead, Collier Cobb, Chas. Baskerville, J. E. Duerdon, A. S. Wheeler, Dr. J. E. Mills, Messrs. H. H. Bennet and R. O. E. Davis from the teaching force, and Messrs. Weller and Sibley from the student body.

The following papers were presented by our University men: "Suggested Improvement in Chlorine Determination."—Chas. Baskerville.

"Report of Committee on Atomic Weight of Thorium"—Chas. Baskerville.

These were read before Section C—Chemistry.

Before Section E.—Geology and Geography:

FOOT-BALL TALK.

Mr. Lambeth Says Carolina is Entitled to Four Representatives on the All-Southern Team.

Well, four out of eleven is not bad. According to Mr. Lambeth, of the University of Virginia, this is the number North Carolina is entitled to on the All-Southern Foot Ball team for 1902. The names of these heroes who will go down in history are Foust, Graves, Holt and Cox. Foust, "the level-headed Foust," deserves a place on the team if any man does. He made an admirable captain, always cool and collected and inspiring his men by word and example. He held his place in the line well, is wonderfully fast for a man of his size, and when called back on "tackles back," destruction always ensued in the ranks of the enemy; when the dust of conflict had cleared away after every play, Foust was almost invariably from 3 to 25 yards nearer the goal. We hereby recommend him for Captain of the All-Southern team.

Graves has at last come into his own. Not only was he unsurpassed as a quarter alone but he was also a good long punter, a sure tackler and his goal-from-the-field abilities were little short of marvelous. He was always accurate in passing the ball, kept his head at critical moments and ran the team well. In returning punts and kick-offs, it was often he carried fear into the bosom of the opposing team and caused the heart of the Carolina rooter to be made glad with joy. There is no better quarter in the South.

Holt was a terror to the opposing line, however firm. He hit it with the force of a shell from a cannon and beside the ground he gained with his feet, his long form when measured on the ground always added something over six feet more to his score. As a full-back he was like a steel spring, giving to a blow, but his rebound always dangerous. Time and time again when an opposing back bucked the line for what looked like a sure gain, Holt had him twisted around and his head pointing in the opposite direction before the astonished runner could yell "Down." Holt is also a good hard punter and great on a kick off. He fully deserves his position.

Cox is admirably built for an end: tall, broad, fast and a hard sure tackler. He is unsurpassed in getting down the field on kicks, often flooring the receiver in his tracks. On end plays, he was great; quick in starting, his weight enabled him to break up almost any interference though he repeatedly got behind the interference and tackled the runner from behind for a decided loss. His long, keen nose enabled him to scent out almost any trick play around his end, and the foe, after a few tries, generally marked these "N. G." and tried something else.

As an end, Cox has no superior in the Southern States.

Carolina is well pleased at getting four men on the team but her private opinion is that a pretty good All-Southern eleven could be gotten out of solely her own men. However, we don't want to be hog-gish, and our parting word is, "Congratulations to our representatives on the All-Southern and all honor to the team of 1902."

Tribute to Dr. Linscott.

I could not feel that I had discharged my obligations unless I had made a simple statement concerning a very dear friend and colleague, Henry Farrar Linscott. I have known him for only sixteen months, but during this short period I have known him most intimately. I have lived with him in the same boarding-house and in his own home. Many a time have I sat with him at the same fireside, smoking, talking, and laughing together, sitting between him and his beloved wife. From our first meeting I was much attached to his very charming personality. I at once felt the presence of a very interesting and kindly being. For sixteen months my attachment to him grew and grew until it became a very strong and abiding love. I never knew him as a teacher, though I would readily think him very interesting, intelligent and stimulating in that capacity. I never knew him as a student in his own field, but others have found him very able, original, accurate and artistic in that particular. It was in his home life and general work that I knew him, and knew him well. It was here that I found him possessed of the rarest personality, the kindest and noblest heart, with a very accurate and sound judgment; it was here that I admired him as being almost above any other man I have ever known. It is sad indeed that such a bright, charming life should come to its close before thirty-two years had passed. But the work which he did and the impression which he made upon many people can never die, they become a permanent possession of those who knew him, to be handed down through the years.

"Resolved: That Congress should not subsidize our merchant marine" is the query which Johns Hopkins has submitted to the University of North Carolina for our next annual debate to be held this spring. As this query is stated, North Carolina has chosen the negative side. Several of our strong debaters are now hard at work on this question. Competition is going to be sharp, and at present it is hard to predict who will represent us. It is safe, however, to say that North Carolina will be represented by a strong team.

Georgia has submitted this query: "Resolved, That the recommendations with regard to taxation, contained in the report of the Industrial Commission should be adopted by the people of the United States." North Carolina has not yet made a choice of sides, and will not do so until she hears from Georgia again and learns what specific principle in this part of the above named report Georgia wishes to discuss. To attempt a discussion of this question as here stated would be too much like firing at random, involving, as the question does, so many principles.

THE TAR HEEL takes this opportunity to offer its thanks to all the alumni and friends of the University who have so kindly written us expressing their satisfaction and pleasure at the success of our foot ball team last fall. Many of the letters were received after our last issue before the holidays had gone to press or we should have published some of them just to show the student body with what kind solicitude our friends all over the State are watching our efforts and praying for our success. It is well that the attention of the students be called to this fact occasionally. For nothing can inspire us to greater efforts than to know that our success or failure brings rejoicing or sorrow not only to ourselves but to thousands of devoted friends from Manteo to Murphy.

The December number of the University Record contains President Venable's annual report to the Board of Trustees. This is much more elaborate than previous reports, and is full of information which all University students and alumni should acquaint themselves with. Tho' the report is indeed very favorable, yet it sets forth many pressing needs occasioned by the rapid growth of the University within the past few years. These needs, of course, call for increased appropriations which, it is hoped, the wisdom of the present Legislature will cause that body to make.

Among the exchanges which have recently come to our table is one which we think deserves special mention. This is THE OLYMPIAN, a southern magazine devoted to Literature, Education and Amateur Sport, published by the Olympian Publishing Company of Nashville, Tenn. It made its initial appearance with the January issue and gives promise of being what readers of southern literature have long felt the want of—a magazine representative of the literary effort of the South. Filling, as it does, a place in southern life which heretofore has been sadly neglected, THE OLYMPIAN should be accorded a hearty reception by all who are interested in southern letters.

In its desire to aid the public schools in helping on the great educational revival, the University offers this spring, in addition to the regular normal course, several special courses for young men preparing to teach in these schools. This special term extends from March 9 to May 16, 1903. No charge will be made for tuition. The only fee is one of $3.00 for registration and use of the library.

The following special courses are offered: English, Mathematics, Latin, Greek, History, French, German, Pedagogy, Physical Geography, Botany and Physics.

Owing to the fact that last week's TAR HEEL was devoted as a memorial edition to Dr. Linscott, many things which regularly should have appeared in our first number after the holidays, had to be held over until this issue.

Mr. L. L. Parker has been elected from the Di Society as orator for Washington's Birthday exercises.

Dr. Hume attended the Modern Language Association, which met in Baltimore during the holidays. He preached at the Eutaw Place church, Baltimore, and addressed the Pastors' Conference of the City on "Spiritual Teaching in Literature." He also visited Portsmouth and Norfolk.

Prof. D. A. Du Pie visited Chapel Hill, last week on his way from Washington to study the methods in our department of geology, with a view to the reorganization of the work in Wofford College.

McDonald, who finished a course in pharmacy here last year, and was a pitcher and fielder on our baseball nine last spring, has received a good offer to coach a college nine in South Carolina this spring.

E. P. Carr, '96, has just received an appointment as field assistant in the U. S. Soil Survey. Mr. Carr is the eighth man to enter this survey from our geological department, and the twenty-fifth to enter geological service from this department in the last five years, a record very creditable to the University and to Prof. Collier Cobb.

Moore, (Big Moore) ex-'04, who dropped out from his class a year ago and has been teaching in South Carolina and also near his home in this State, has returned to take up his work.

Groome, ex-'05, did not return to the University this year but has gone to Woffard College in South Carolina.

A few students have been skating on the ponds near here this week. The weather, however, did not allow much of this sport.

Confirmation of Freshman Election by Dr. Alexander.

I hereby certify that I have examined and counted proxies signed by seventy men,—all, but one, members of the Freshman Class. The proxies, each, authorized "Mr. J. A. Parker to cast the signers' votes in all questions, motions, and elections arising in connection with the election of officers for the Freshman Class (1906)."

The vote of Mr. John L. Saunders, not now registered as a student, was not counted. The rejection of his proxy left sixty-nine, a majority of the Freshman Class now in the University. These proxies Mr. J. A. Parker casts in favor of the following:

D. E. Mc Donald, President.
P. E. Seagle, Vice President.

Dum poli sidera pascunt,
Tuum nomen, laudes manebant.

One Hundred Thirty Thousand Brave,
Her offering vast she freely gave;
Of these One Third to Death were hurled,
Where Southern flags their folds unfurled.

Let pæns loud from others ring,
Let poets now for others sing,
'Twas Lee who said with praises great,
"God bless the sons of the Old North State!"

Thy sons, Good State, were nowhere shorn
Of the glorious name thou long has borne;
For as heroes bold, whom none surpassed,
Thy shield they brightened e'en to the last.

Thy Cavalry and thine Infantry,
Thy Home Guards and Artillery
Thy glory share, and none must dare
From these to tear a wreath so rare.

Thy daughters, too, with soul as grand,
Stood every test that man can stand;
And, though their sons or brothers fell,
They bore the shock with faith as well.

Their hearts were true, their fingers deft,
And precious gifts, from homes bereft
Of brother's love, inspired his soul
To live forever on "Honor's Roll."

O daughters bright and soldiers bold,
Your sacrifice is yet untold!
Not Homer's thought your fame could sound,
For soul so great mock's plummet's bound.

At Old Manassas twice thy sons
Did meet invaders of our soil,
And twice by aid of their good guns
We made our enemy recoil.

Against Antietam's swelling flood,
With feet as strong and firm they stood
As "Iron Duke's" at Waterloo,
And from their front the tide they threw.

No richer stream of nobler life,
Was ever shed in grander strife,
Nor higher fame can earth e'er yield
Than thine on Gettysburg's great field.

On Tennessee's historic ground,
In crashing thunders awful sound,
Thy sons with lightning's flash and stroke
The "Rock of Chicamauga" broke.

In "Bloody Angle's" fiery hall,
Brave North Carolina did not fail;
Though murderous battle's holocaust,
She gained and held what others lost.

At Appomattox, though at last
Egyptian gloom o'er all was cast,
With courage still, without its boasts,
She dared oppose the Northern hosts.

Great Carolina, thy wondrous glory
Must shine forever through song and story;
Of men renowned and women grand,
The world ne'er knew a nobler band.

"So long as rivers run into the seas,
So long as shadows creep o'er the leas,
So long as heaven is flecked with stars,
Thy name and honor shall ever remain."

Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening in Person Hall. Mr. C. A. Shore presented a paper on "The Work of the Beaufort Laboratory;" and Prof. Collier Cobb offered as his subject "Some Studies in the Movements of Sand Waves." On account of the limited time, Dr. Chas. Baskerville did not discuss "The Washington Meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science." He also omitted his "Methods of Studying the Rare Earths." It is hoped that the two subjects last mentioned will be given at the next meeting.

Mr. Shore recently visited the laboratory established by the government at Beaufort, N. C., and in his talk gave the students many interesting points gathered from personal observation. He described the laboratory and spoke in general of the important work being done through the Fish Commission. The men at the laboratory, he said, were thoroughly enthused over their work and valuable discoveries, of a biological nature, were anticipated.

Ask Mr. Shore about his rolling trip to sea—he has a brief but forcible manner of picturing himself as a victim.

Prof. Cobb followed Mr. Shore, illustrating his subject with stereopticon views. The professor is an expert shot with his camera and makes his lectures very attractive with the canvas pictures.

The movement of the great sand waves on Hatters Island was discussed freely, and methods of arresting their progress were demonstrated. The problem of stopping the march of the waves is a serious one and in some places the government has taken steps to check the wave movement. Often farms and even whole forests are covered by the sand. In one illustration the speaker showed a photograph of a man and his wife standing upon a huge sand bank, and beneath this were the remains of their former home. In other cases a grove or forest could be outlined from the pictures, the tops of the trees barely showing above the sand.

The effect of the wave action is rather peculiar, being very much like that of water. In places the original loam surface is removed for from three to five feet and the roots of trees are exposed to view.

Prof. Cobb has spent considerable time on Hatteras, carrying out geological research work and is familiar alike with soil and people. He claims that the best average North Carolinian is the Hatteras Islander. We leave the case with him—and express not any doubt. A people that spend their leisure time romancing upon the great waves, planting shrubs to impede the march of the monsters, display indeed a fine temper and a patience long suffering. The Islanders, too, have a remarkable turn for developing the best that is in them and an ideal field for the study of Geology. There is every reason to believe that—physically and geologically—Hatteras is the home of the all-round Tar Heel.

BASE BALL TALK.

Encouraging Prospects for a New Team. Former Players Return. A Word to the Students.

With the thermometer several degrees below zero and the base ball season numbered among the things which must come to pass, an article on diamond dust, no doubt, to many, will seem rather premature. And, generally speaking, it would seem impertinent. When viewed, however, from strictly an athletic standpoint its appearance can be easily justified. We believe, as do many of the other leading Universities and Colleges in the South, that a long walk can only be completed by taking the first step, and it is the intention of THE TAR HEEL, at this early date, to advocate with as much force and earnestness as it may possess the supreme importance of an early awakening in base ball life and to urge every student in the University to think and talk base ball. If this spirit characterizes the student body, then manifestly enthusiasm will know no bounds and college spirit—that something which has caused victory to be taken from the very jaws of defeat so many times—will find its truest expression.

At this writing, two months, or to be more accurate, six weeks, before the real practice games begin, it is a burden approaching an almost impossibility to ascertain the true strength of the team, and it shall not be our purpose to paint in glowing hues the wonderful and enormous strength of our team, when perhaps the contrary is the proper condition, unless we have at our command sufficient facts which would authorize such an assertion. One can, however, conjecture as to the sort of team Carolina will send forth this season. It may be said with fairness, we think, that Capt. Donnelly's aggregation will, with one exception, in every sense be an equal to those heavy "swatters" led by the matchless Holt last spring. In support of this statement we recall the following old men who will return and who have fought many battles and won many victories for Carolina: Earle P. Holt, captain of last year's Varsity, who plays at and all around the initial cushion; Donnelly, who goes by the appellation of "Jack" in base ball circles, Captain and left fielder; Frank Smathers in whom a perfect specimen of western manhood is exemplified, third base-man; Billy Carr, a "cracker-jack" short stop, who has played on the Varsity three years and possibly John Wilcox, the fellow who twisted the leather around the necks of the Virginia lads last year.

In addition to these old men several new players, new only in the sense that this is their first year at the University, will afford excellent material to fill all vacancies caused by graduation. Among the number of candidates who will present themselves for the first time on the Carolina diamond for positions on the team, we mention: Noble, Condon, Wilcox, Cheshire, Greene, Curran, Hart and several others whose names could not be secured. Being ignorant to a certain extent the playing qualities of these men, it would be idle for us to attach too much importance, at first, to our new acquisitions. If they are real players, if they are the genuine article, branded with the right sort of label, Captain Donnelly and Mr. Curran will not consider it a difficult question to discern these qualities.

Mr. George W. Graham, the clever and efficient manager of last year's team, who, in the opinion of many, arranged decidedly the best and most economical schedule ever known in the history of athletics, on account of his business capacity and wise management was unanimously re-elected manager of the base ball team of 1903. It was a deserved compliment to Mr. Graham and the University should congratulate itself upon being able to secure the services of one who is so thoroughly identified with this particular work.

In conclusion, we would leave this as our parting thought for your kind consideration. It is a notable fact that has ever been characteristic of the University of North Carolina to produce well-trained, excellent athletic teams—both in foot ball and base ball—teams that would have reflected credit upon any institution south of the Mason-Dixon line and it is incumbent upon every student in the University to preserve and protect, in a sense, the noble traditions of Carolina made possible by such men as Oldham, Stephens, Winston, Lawson and others. This preservation of our athletic prestige can best be made secure by individual effort. Let every student in college, therefore who loves the University and we believe every one does, make it a point to send every available man to the University; a duty to talk of past athletic achievements and the possibilities of the present team thereby creating enthusiasm and generating a college spirit; an obligation to attend as many games as the circumstances will permit and cheer and root for your college team—the University base ball team for 1903.

With the Societies.

The Di Society at its regular meeting last Saturday night discussed this query: "Resolved, that under the Monroe Doctrine the United States should uphold Venezuela." The negative won, and Mr. Chas. Ross was reported best debater.

The query discussed by the Phi was: "Resolved, that the United States should abolish all tariffs except for revenue only." The affirmative won, and Mr. Huske was the best debater.

HOW WORLDS ARE MADE.

Star Course Lecture, Delivered January 21, 1903, by Garrett P. Serviss.

Mr. Serviss, after a brief but fitting introduction by Dr. Alexander said: "What I am about to offer you is in the nature of an argument for the universality of law. Worlds do not happen. The earth, our own earth, came into existence through the operation of certain laws. * * * That combination of laws which caused the existence of worlds shall surely bring about their destruction. "The origin of worlds, as we shall discuss the subject to-night, is based upon the Nebular Hypothesis: that is, all matter was once in a nebulous state. The earth, upon which we live, the sun that heats and lights it, the moon, planets and stars all, were originally parts of a vast cloud-like body.

"But, how are we to fix this theory in mind and how are we to get at it? Most knowledge is simply the result of curiosity. * * * Imagine we have a block of ice and apply heat; the solid disappears and a liquid results; continue the heat and the liquid passes into steam. Reverse the process and we have steam changing to a liquid and the liquid to a solid. If this was not an almost daily experience, it would seem a miracle. * * * There is no solid substance on earth which cannot be first melted and then changed into a vapor or gas. There is only one known gas, Helion, that, so far, has not been liquified and solidified.

"Heat, cold and pressure, then, are the apparent miracle workers of nature. Heat, cold and pressure, operating in the greatest of laboratories, made this globe upon which we have our being."

The lantern operator here began a display of distinct astronomical photographs. Many pictures of nebulae, taken from the Lick Observatory, were exhibited. To give some conception of the immensity of one of the great nebulae, the lecturer said if a cannon ball, traveling at the rate of half a mile per second, were discharged from one border of the nebulous mass, it would take a thousand, or more probably, ten thousand years, for that ball to traverse the cloudy way.

With vivid illustrations and fine diction, the speaker gave an instructive description of the development from the nebulous mass to a revolving body with its several rings. In the views shown, the great nebula, from which the sun, earth, moon and planets were formed, resolved itself into a central ball—the sun, with nine revolving rings. One of these rings, became first an ellipsoid, then a globe, and finally our own earth. As the most remarkable example of ring matter Mr. Serviss referred to Saturn's magic rings, "I have yet to see the man" he said, "who, when he first beholds this proud planet with its rings, does not utter an exclamation of astonishment. * *

"The occasionally discovered worlds are nothing in comparison with our planet. These tiny worlds come from the asteroid constellation. Many of them are not more than ten miles in diameter. So small, in fact, are they, that should you happen upon one of them and so desired, you could make an upward leap and go whirling, whizzing through space, a flying, gyrating world of your own. * * *

One of the best pictures thrown upon the canvas was that of the corona, the brilliant crown of the sun, visible during a total eclipse. "Science," he continued, "says the end must come, the sun must die. Even now the moon is a dead planet, fit to serve only as a kind of reflecting mirror. The moon-lit lover's path would not furnish so many romantic scenes if the strollers knew that it was only the cold face of a skeleton looking down on them from the skies."

When the speaker said the end must come, an attentive spectator near the front assumed a mathematical air and a furrow of care plowed through his brow. But as the lecturer explained, "Science, considerate science, has placed a convenient remoteness of five million years to the occasion," the listener concerned, cast aside his formularity and a smile broke over his countenance. But a gentleman at the rear was straight and rigid—"time is short—five million years is but a moment in the on-going of time." A cloud of anxiety hung about him. He was dreaming, perhaps, of the catastrophe that threatened his posterity. And so closed the scene!

Mr. Serviss also explained the principle upon which the valuable spectroscope is made and how by its use the scientist is enabled to prove that the heavenly bodies are one with the earth in substance—thus verifying the assumption of one original mass—the nebula.

Gym. Notes.

Boxing class began Wednesday. All those that expect to enter this class should report not later than the 28th. Class meets Wednesday evening at 5:00 for the present. Each man is required to furnish his own gloves. No fee outside the regular gymnasium fee is required.

A beginners' fencing class will be organized, provided enough men will pledge themselves to enter. If organized this class will meet Saturdays at 4:00 p. m. Each man to furnish his own equipment.

A basket-ball game will be played Saturday, January 24th, at 4:00 p. m., between the academic and the professional students. It is hoped a good crowd will turn out to see this game.

Physical examinations will be made January 24, 31, and February 7 between 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. Make your appointment with the physical director.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

Those who failed to hear Mr. Garrett P. Serviss' lecture Wednesday evening on "How Worlds Are Made" missed a rare opportunity of hearing a charming lecture on a fascinating subject. An account of this lecture will be found in another column, and so no further comment is here necessary.

We wish to call the attention of the students to the rules and regulations of the "Prize Essay Contest" which we print in this issue. These have been sent us for publication by the Alpha Tau Omega Alumni Association of New York, and we gladly present them to our readers with the hope that some of our best writers will take advantage of the opportunity here offered.

In mentioning the work of the members of our Faculty at the meeting of the Modern Language Association which convened in Baltimore during the holidays, through an oversight, we failed to state in our last issue that Dr. C. Alphonso Smith presented a paper on "A Tentative Generalization in English Syntax." This paper will be published soon in Englische Studien. Leipzig. At this meeting Dr. Smith was appointed a Director of the American Dialect Society.

The chair of Latin, made vacant by the death of Dr. Linscott, will be filled this spring by Professor George D. Hadzsits, Ph. D., of the University of Michigan. Dr. Hadzsits was formerly Assistant Professor of Latin in the University of Iowa and has recently been Acting Professor of Greek in the University of Maine during the leave of absence of the regular professor. He comes to us with excellent recommendations and will, no doubt, be an able addition to our Faculty.

His appointment, however, is not permanent, as his services have been secured only until June.

On account of conflicting college duties Mr. F. S. Hassell has been obliged to tender his resignation as one of our associate editors. We are sorry to have to give up Mr. Hassell, for our relations have been very pleasant, and his work, of a high order, but it is not for us to question the wisdom of his action.

To fill the vacancy caused by his resignation the choice of election has fallen on Mr. L. S. Holt whom we gladly welcome to our Board. Mr. Holt is well known for his contributions to the U. N. C. Magazine. His literary ability which has been shown by these contributions eminently fits him for the place to which he has been chosen.

Meeting of Shakespeare Club.

The second meeting of the Shakespeare Club was held in Gerrard Hall on the night of Thursday, the twenty-second. The following papers were read: "Hotspur in Ballad and Drama" by Will Gordon; "Glendower, Historical and Ideal," by Rufus C. Morrow; "Shakespeare's Sources in the Trilogy of Henry IV and Henry V," by Miss Faison; "Social Coloring in Historical Plays," by W. C. Rankin. The attendance of students was large and the papers showed literary ability and careful preparation.

Mr. P. C. Gore, brother of Prof. Gore and father of Mr. Walter T. Gore, '06, died Monday at his home near Winchester, Va. Prof. Gore and his nephew left at once to attend the funeral. Mr. Walter T. Gore, '06, will not return this spring but expects to be here again next fall.

The meeting to elect Chief Ball Manager and Subs for Commencement of 1903 was held Thursday night, January 15th, at 7 o'clock. The following gentlemen were elected:

Mr. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Chief. Messrs. Staton, Galloway, Phillips, Parsons, Bell and Graves, Subs.

Dr. Hume on Saturday and Sunday was at Hollin's, one of the great colleges for women, of Virginia, and delivered three lectures, one on "The Literary Study of the Bible as an Aid to the Devotional Use of the Book," the second on "The Two Voices in Ecclesiastes" and the third on "The Huguenots and the Families Derived From Them in Virginia and North Carolina."

At a meeting of the German Club on Tuesday, February twentieth was selected for the annual February german. Leader, John Cheshire.

Last week, by an oversight, we omitted one of the papers presented by Prof. Collier Cobb before the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its Washington meeting. The title of the paper which will appear in the next number of the Journal of Geology, was "The Origin of the Sandhill Topography of the Carolinas."

Professor Cobb addressed the teachers of Darlington county, South Carolina last Saturday, on "The Kind of Education We Need." On Saturday night he gave his lecture on the Yellowstone National Park before the faculty and students of the Welsh Neck High School at Hartsville, S. C.

Rev. J. E. McCulloch, of Nashville, Tenn., a graduate of Vanderbilt University, is making a tour among the colleges of the South to speak on some living subject in missions. The International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association has secured him for this, and those who know of Mr. McCulloch say the selection is a fortunate one, for he is considered a strong man and a strong speaker. He is expected to make two addresses here in the Chapel, one tomorrow night and the other on Monday night. The people of Chapel Hill and all students in the University are given a cordial invitation to both these meetings.

The Sophomores are loudly against the export and compulsory immigration law.

James Sprunt Historical Monograph No. 3.

The University of North Carolina has published the James Sprunt Historical Monograph No. 3. It embraces letters of Nathaniel Macon, John Steele and Wm. Barry Grove, with very full annotations by Dr. Kemp P. Battle. The letters and notes shed light on the histories of the administrations of Washington, Adams, Jefferson and John Quincy Adams, with occasional glimpses of the history of our State. The letters are prefaced by sketches of the writers by Dr. Battle, and of James Hogg, to whom some of the letters are addressed.

Nell—"Why is it that a girl can never catch a ball like a man?"

Belle—"A man is so much larger and easier to catch."

Prize Essay Contest.

Are fraternities an aid or a hindrance to the development of the ideal college man? What is the value of the fraternity in college life? The rapid growth and development of the fraternity system in American colleges and universities during the last decade have made the answer to these questions of undeniable importance.

Appreciating the fact that insufficient data is at hand to warrant a logical answer to these questions, the New York Alumni Association of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity has decided to give a prize of $50 for the best essay on the value of American college fraternities.

The aim of the Association is first, to get the facts, and second, to stimulate research in a new field of sociological thought. The judges will be representative literary men, chosen from the fraternity and non-fraternity ranks.

The contest will be governed by the following rules:

I. The subject of the essay shall be "The Effect of the Fraternity on American College Life."

II. No essay shall contain more than three thousand words by actual count.

III. Any student pursuing a course of study leading to one of the recognized degrees in an American college or University may enter this contest, whether he be a member of a fraternity or not.

IV. Each contestant shall, on or before the first day of May, 1903, mail to the chairman of the committee three typewritten copies of the competitive essay, signed in a pseudonym. He shall also, at the same time, send to the chairman of the committee a sealed envelope containing his name and address with his pseudonym on the outside.

V. The winner of this prize must, if requested by the committee, give the sources of his information and the grounds of his belief in regard to all matters not stated upon his personal knowledge.

VI. Three judges to be selected by the Association shall pass upon the essays submitted and award the prize.

VII. All essays submitted in this contest shall be the property of the Association and may be used as the Association shall direct.

VIII. As soon as the judges have made their decision, the committee will notify the successful contestant and the result will be announced in the Alpha Tau Omega Palm and other fraternity publications in June.

For further information address; H. W. PITKIN, Chairman.

THE MAN OF GALILEE.

Star Course Address, Gerrard Hall, January 27, by Wendling.

"I once knew a preacher," said Dr. Alexander. "who in appearing before an audience, was introduced as the Demosthenes of the Southern Church, or something to that effect. Whatever the title applied, I remember distinctly that he was not 'it.' But tonight it gives me great pleasure to present to you a man who has achieved already a grand success as jurist and orator. The subject to which he asks your attention is 'The Man of Galilee.'"

Mr. Wendling said, in part:

"I come upon this platform to speak to you of an astounding person—the Man of Galilee. I shall not ask you to approach the subject in a religious spirit, on the contrary, let us go to the task, not irreverently, but in a critical mood. * * *

We are nearing the crisis of a great battle. The twentieth century will see the followers of the Nazarene rapidly diminished or greatly increased. The century upon which we are just entering will decide the contest. * * *

"Whatever form of government men adopt, they are always governed by a king. Except as to their political methods, men are not at heart, and never will be, democratic. They will always want a king. In the final issue, in every community, in every State, and in every nation, goes the will and character and the power of the best man. * * *

"Some nineteen hundred years ago, Galilee was a most densely populated country. Close to the water's edge the shore of the sea of Galilee was adorned with rich palaces. The streets were thronged; the government was Roman; the climate tropical. On the hills stretching away from the backs of the sea of Galilee was delivered the most widely distributed speech of all times—the Sermon on the Mount. He who delivered that sermon has been called a Reformer, but he was Revolutionist.

"Let us draw nearer and look at this wonderful speaker. No picture can describe Him. He is tall in stature. There is not a spot or blemish on Him; His brow is smooth; His complexion is clear; His eyes, blue with the deep blue of the sky—the fairest among ten thousand. He is modest and dignified; His voice is soft and low; and he wears the costume of his time. I do not see in his face as the modern painter saw. It seems to me I see wonderful love, fathomless, boundless sorrow.

"If the Nazarene had a plan to work out, what was that plan? Let us attempt first an analysis of His mental life and intellectual process. It is a simple but wonderful story that has been told from thousands of pulpits and millions of books. But let us look this story over again.

"Above all things, what is His work? What is the matter with the world that he should want to set it right? He came to establish a kingdom, a kingdom with himself as king. No one can read His life without finding so often the striking phrase, always and everywhere the same—the kingdom is at hand,—my kingdom." * * * The condition is this; there is a disagreement in human affairs, for despite their philosophy and wealth men hate each other; darkness lies before them; the world is resting in doubt. Humanity has many sorrows and hence is easily cast into despair.

"This condition is abnormal because it springs from a violation of law—from sin. We all know that wilful violation of law is the source of countless human ills. The man of Galilee comes and says: 'I am here to found a kingdom, my motive is Love for the human race; it shall be called a kingdom, and I shall be its King. I propose to deal directly with its society and I demand homage, obedience and complete surrender to my will.' He has no prophet to help him, no books, no newspapers, no money, no army. The Galilean says, 'I will found this kingdom alone. The laws which I make shall no man repeal or modify and I defy all the powers of the world and the gates of hell to overthrow my work.'

"His plan was complete and perfect at the start. He abased nothing, conceded nothing, changed nothing, but carried it straight through. This plan, as a mere mental concept, is one of immeasurable breadth, as high as the throne of the Infinite. Have you ever thought of that plan? As it presents itself to His own mind, it antedates the Abrahamic age. He says 'All the ages lead up to me,' and then, pointing to the future, 'tis mine.' All the dreams of the imagination that have entered the hearts of the world's greatest men fade into insignificance beside the cosmic outline of this amazing plan.

"'Unto the end of the world—forever.' He announces His plan with perfect quietness—just as you would say, 'The weather will be fair tomorrow—and He makes this announcement without the shadow of a doubt as to His success. Indeed if we would pause right here, we need only say, 'Here is greater a.dacity than one would expect from an archangel.' A tremendous fact stands in our way—he succeeded. He had at the very lowest estimate, a clear and well balanced mind.

"What is He then, and what right had He to this plan? He was born in obscurity and reared in poverty; simply a mechanic, a worker in wood. The only books he read were three: the Old Bible, Man, and Nature.

"I ask you to put aside two mistaken ideas: first, He was not the meek and lowly man so often represented. He was a majestic, kindly noble-like man. Second, Do not think of him as an unsophisticated peasant, but think of him always as a courteous, self-possessed man. He was cosmopolitan. Study Him from this point and you will make the discovery that He mingles with all forms of society with perfect ease. Was it genius? What is genius? Genius is the distinguishing quality of mental insight that enables one to see, at a glance, all that is to be seen in a given field. In the Man of Galilee we have the highest example of genius.

"The first thing about Christ that strikes us is his egotism. In all the annals of biography we can find nothing that approaches it. But the strange thing about it all is that somewhere in the background there is an unselfishness in all His sayings. 'I am the Way, the Truth and the Light. Ask in My name and it shall be granted.' These are the ravings of wild insanity; a conclusion from which I find no escape, unless in the man's being a visitor from the other world, veiled in human form. There is present all the time a most remarkable spirit of self-sacrifice. He is the only egotist who is absolutely unselfish. He is never jealous of any one. He is never impatient; a man of most excellent refinement; such delicacy and tenderness! He is the only pure man in chronological history.

"The Man of Galilee, from first to last, is always at his highest level. How gentle and tender, yet there was something in his presence that could subdue the strongest will. The money changers were not scourged, but awed. Roman soldiers recoiled before him. What a strange power in that face and voice of His!

"Christ held toward man a fraternal affection, fathomless and boundless. 'The greatest of these is charity'—no, 'the greatest of these is love.' Men and women never want charity, they want love. The thing millions are holding up their hands for is love. No man can hate you if from your heart you love him and give him your sympathy. 'Tis love alone that gives a man clean hands and a pure heart.

"But what right had the Man of Galilee to interfere in the affairs of this world. Because He loved and loved from the bottom of his heart—because He is Love. From the very beginning the whole world is against Him but he never shows a sign of trembling; He never made a concession.

"There are five mental characteristics, combined in no man save the Man of Galilee:

"1. He never has the slightest shadow of doubt or uncertainty. 2. He is never afraid of going too far. 3. He is never surprised. 4. He is never found taking counsel with men and weighing their words. Christ knew just as much at the beginning of his ministry as at the end. He did not develop. Think of Him as a philosopher from the beginning. 5. His penetrating insight into character. In all great moments recall the failure and you can associate them with a lack of discernment of character. The man of Galilee never made a mistake and never failed to do the right thing."

Library Reading Committee Prizes.

Two prizes of the value of fifteen and ten dollars, respectively, will be awarded to the two members of the class of 1905 who do best and second best work in a general reading, known as the Library Reading Course. These prizes are offered by friends of the Library and will be awarded by a committee of three from the Faculty. Full information concerning the condition of the competition can be obtained by referring to the bulletin board inside the Library, or by consulting with the members of the committee and the Librarian. The following are the general rules governing the competition:

(1). The course is open to the members of the class of 1905 who are duly registered and are pursuing regular courses of study which lead to the degrees of A.B., B.S., Ph.B.

(2). On or before February 16, 1903, all competitors must notify the committee of their intention of entering the course and must consult with one member of the committee with reference to the work they wish to do. The notice must be submitted in writing.

(3). On or before May 9, 1904, a list of the books must be submitted in writing to the committee and competitors must be examined. The examination of each competitor will be based upon his individual list and will be conducted in such a way as the committee thinks best.

(4). Books read previous to February 1, 1902, or books read after that date in connection with any course, whether counted for a degree or not, must not be submitted.

The committee is composed of Dr. Smith, Dr. Raper, and Mr. Bernard.

Signs and Omens.

To see the father of your girl approaching with anger in his eye and a heavy cane raised in his right hand is a sign that you are going to travel.

To lose $50,000 and not have enough money left to buy a dinner is a sign of poverty.

To be hit on the head with a brick is a sign of bad luck.

To lose a leg in a railroad accident is a sign that you will be crippled for life.

To dream of a monster with seven eyes, a tongue of fire, a forked tail and a double-barreled head, is a sign that you ate a dish of pig's feet a mince pie and a plate of tripe, before retiring.

To throw a stone at a skunk is a sign that you are going to get a new suit of clothes.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We wish to call the attention of the students to the rules and regulations governing the Library Reading Course Prizes, which we publish in this issue, and to urge them to give this plan the consideration and attention which its importance demands. This is indeed an opportunity which all, who can, should avail themselves of. This scheme has met with the approval of several members of the Faculty of the State Normal College and has, this year, been put into effect at the University of Georgia.

Now, it is useless to urge the importance of reading. Every one is going to read something; every one must read who lays any claims whatever to scholarship and culture, or who wishes to keep himself informed as to current events. But this reading is generally done in a desultory way; yet it has its value and this value is great. How infinitely more valuable it would be if done systematically along well-defined lines with a definite purpose in view. Now, the purpose of this plan, in addition to encouraging and stimulating the reading habit, is to give the student an opportunity of doing this sort of reading. And herein lies the great value of the scheme.

The courses have been marked out by men who know what is the best reading to supplement the work of the regular college course. Yet these courses are so broad and varied as to be inviting alike to every student whether his tendencies be towards literature, science, art or philosophy. Who can doubt the culture of such a plan? Again let us urge every one who cares to give this matter due consideration and to avail himself of the rare opportunity here offered.

Work on the Yackety Yack is progressing very well, tho' the editors are still in need of more fiction, poetry, drawings, jokes and drags. They hope to have the book ready for press early in February. All those therefore, who expect to contribute anything for this annual are requested to submit their productions just as soon as possible so that the work may not be delayed. The editors are enthusiastic in this work and are laboring with determined effort to make the Yackety Yack of 1903 the best annual ever gotten out from this University. Many new features have already been introduced, and others may yet be suggested. With the right sort of support there is no reason why the editors should not succeed in their undertaking. Let everyone do his best during the few days now remaining before the book goes to press.

The Virginia tennis club has sent a challenge to the tennis association of this place for a match to be played in Charlottesville at the time of the baseball game there. The tennis association here is being organized, and a tournament is being arranged for, to take place some time in March. The challenge from Virginia is still under consideration. All tennis players are urged to join the association and enter the tournament at once. A further notice of the tournament will appear later.

THE TAR HEEL was in error last week in saying Dr. George Depeu Hadzsits would take Dr. Linscott's place in the Department of Latin. We take pleasure in correcting the statement by saying Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., will be at the head of this department and that Dr. Hadzsits has been secured by the President to assist Dr. Wilson. We hope his stay among us may be pleasant and that he may be a valuable addition to the department.

Don't Use Big Words.

In promulgating your esoteric cogitations and in articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable philosophical or psychological observations beware of platitudinous ponderosity. Let your conversational communications possess an exceptionally clarified consciousness, a compacted comprehensibility, a coalescent consistency and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations or flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and asinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous decantings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligible and veracious vivacity without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, pompous prolixity, psittaceous vacuity, ventriloquial verbosity and vaniloquent vapidty. Shun double ententes, prurient jocosity and pestiferous profanity, obscurant or apparent. In other words, talk plainly, briefly, naturally, sensibly, purely and truthfully. Keep from slang; do not put on airs; say what you mean; mean what you say and don't use big words.—Ex.

The following men, composing the Senior Law Class of the University, will apply for license next Monday:

Smathers, Peele, Lockhart, Lunsford, Davis, Smith, Palmer, Gudger, Thompson, Reymour, Phaelen, McMichall, London, Godwin, Cook, Wooten, Gibson, McLean, Borham, Robbins.

Mr. Chas. H. Johnson, '98, has recently been elected Professor of Philosophy in the University of Argentine Republic, at a salary of $3000 and expenses.

The following are the debaters for the Commencement debate: Messrs. A. H. Johnson and N. R. Graham from the Di society and Dameron and Winston from the Phi.

Individual pictures for the Senior class will probably be put in the Yackety Yack this year. If this idea together with the many other proposed new features can be carried out, the annual bids fair to excel any annual issued from the University in many years.

Rev. J. E. McCulloch, a graduate of Vanderbilt University, addressed the students and people of Chapel Hill in the Chapel Sunday night on missions. On Monday night he spoke to the students alone. In this talk he urged them to have a definite life purpose to help humanity and thus throw their work into a result.

The following men made the Alpha Theta Phi this year: Rankin, Robins, Winston, Walker and Marriott.

Dr. and Mrs. Klutz gave a progressive whist party Thursday evening in honor of Miss Jeffries, the guest of the Misses Robinson. The evening was very much enjoyed.

At the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday night the president announced that the Association would be represented this year at Commencement. Under the auspices of the Association one of the most prominent preachers that can be gotten will preach in the Chapel Sunday night following the Baccularate Sermon that morning. Before this there has been a gap in the Commencement exercises by the fact that there were no public exercises Sunday night. This new arrangement is due to the President of our University.

This is one of the Booklet series. Vol. 2, No. 7, issued by the North Carolina Booklet Comgany of which Miss Martha Helen Haywood and Mrs. Hurbert Haywood are editors. The author is Dr. Kemp P. Battle, Professor of History in the University. A full explanation is given of the location of the Seat of Government at Wake Court House, the name being changed in order to honor Sir Walter Raleigh. Tryon gave to the place the name of Bloomsbury, which Dr. Battle thinks was in honor of the Duke of Bedford, then owner of the manor of Blamordsbury, which survives in Bloomsbury Square in Northwest London. The Duke was then President of the Privy Council. The struggles to obtain the location of the Capital and the men engaged in it are fully described. The chief competitor was Fayetteville.

Work of Young Men's Christian Association.

The following new officers were elected at the regular meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association held Thursday night for the new association year which now begins:

R. M. Harper, President.
F. S. Hudson, Vice President.
C. P. Russell, Corresponding Secretary.
Z. V. Howard, Recording Secretary.
E. McDonald, Treasurer.
The retiring officers are:
C. A. Bynum, President.
Z. V. Judd, Vice President.
C. C. Barnhardt, Secretary.
G. P. Stevens, Corresponding Secretary.

H. M. McFadyen, Treasurer.
The Association work during the past year has probably been better as a whole than ever before. More men are in the Bible classes, and more interest seems to be taken in studying the Bible, among the Association men than has ever been seen here before. About one hundred men are in Bible classes, counting the mission study class. Of course, some men have dropped out but, new ones are often brought in to fill their places, and thus the number is being kept higher this year than last. These classes, which are held from 12:30 to 1:15
Sunday in the Alumni Hall and are lead by members of the Association, are always glad to have any one interested to come, in the hope that when one really understands the work that is being done, he will join in and help. The mission study class, lead by Mr. J. K. Ross, who is a student volunteer for foreign work, is held Sunday night in the Y. M. C. A. room in Old West building from 8.30 to 9.15. Tomorrow night a new course of study will be begun. The new book to be used is an introduction to missions, and gives one a good practical knowledge of the mission life.
Any interested in this course will be welcomed at the meeting tomorrow night.

The attendance at the Thursday night devotional meetings in the Chapel last fall was a little better than the year preceding, but it is not what it ought to be. Short but strong practical talks have been made by the leaders each week, and yet somehow the attendance has not been justly responsive to these.
The devotional committee is now preparing a strong list of leaders for the remaining part of this session, and it will try to make the meetings more helpful.

The mission side of the Association during the past year has nearly doubled its prominence. Giving and going are both practiced. The students of the University this year have pledged seventy dollars to missions. Over half of this is already collected. The going side of the Association in missions is seen in its Sunday School work near Chapel Hill. Four Sunday Schools near here are being run by the association men. Three of these have each an average attendance of thirty. The other one has just been started and is not yet under way.

TROPICAL NATURAL HISTORY.

Faculty Lecture Delivered by Dr. J. E. Duerden in the Chapel Thursday, Feb. 5th.

Dr. J. E. Duerden delivered the fourth lecture of the Faculty series in Gerrard Hall on Thursday night. His subject was Tropical Natural History. The lecture was illustrated by numerous stereopticon views and was highly enjoyed. He spoke of the cultivation and characteristics of the cocoa nut, sugar-cane, pineapple, coffee plant and other tropical fruits. Also of the various forms of coral and fishes peculiar to tropical regions.

Dr. Duerden said in part: "It is of the highest importance to the Naturalist to acquire an actual personal acquaintance with tropical regions. Here he sees nature in a different garb from anything she wears within the temperate zones; he gains different conceptions of the possibilities of both animal and vegetable life; without such an experience his Biological education must be considered incomplete. Within the tropics there is greater exuberance and variety among both animals and plants, of which the temperate regions give only a faint indication. The perpetual sunshine, the absence of any winter which checks growth for several months in the year, results in a development of plant life altogether unknown elsewhere, and the animals are found to modify themselves in various degrees in adaption thereto. You will be pleased to know the several members of the biological department this coming summer will visit the West Indies under conditions which will afford them a full introduction to tropical wonders.

"This evening I propose to bring before you, by word and picture, some of the more obvious and striking characteristics of tropical plants and animals.

"The proper control and development of the tropic has thus become an important political and sociological problem, and should be well understood by any having dealings therewith. The British Government with its large colonial experience and large Commercial organizations have long realized that tropical undertakings can only be successfully conducted by constant interchange between the warmer and colder countries of the responsible officials. New and vigorous blood is constantly required to replace the old and effete, if the highest results from tropical occupation are to be secured.

"I mention these considerations in all seriousness as well deserving of attention by those whose interest are likely to lead them into close association with tropical life.

"I can best close by quoting from 'Wallaces' Tropical Nature' a few lines which present the contrasts between tropical and temperate climates:

THE TROPICS.

"Land of the Sun! where joyous green-robed Spring
And leaf-crowned summer deck the earth for ever;
No winter stern their sweet embrace to sever
And numb to silence every living thing,
But bird and insect ever on the wing,
Flitting 'mid forest glades and tangled bowers,
While the life giving orb's effulgent beams
Through all the circling year call forth the flowers.
Here graceful palms, here lucious fruits have birth,
The fragrant coffee, life-sustaining rice,
Sweet canes, and wondrous gums, and odorous spice;
While Flora's choicest treasures crowd the teeming earth.
Beside each cot the golden Orange stands,
And broad-leaved Plantain, pride of Tropic lands.

ENGLAND.

Sweet changing Seasons! Winter cold and stern,
Fair Spring with budding leaf and opening flower,
And Summer when the sun's creative power
Brings leafy groves and glades of feathery fern,
The glorious blossoms of sweet-scented May
The flowery hedgerows and the fragrant hay,
And wide landscape's many-tinted sheen,
Then Autumn's yellow woods and days serene,
And when we've gathered in the harvest treasure,
The long nights bring us round the blazing hearth,
The chosen haunt of every social pleasure.
Land of green fields and flowers! Thou givest birth
To shifting scenes of beauty, which out-shine
Th' unvarying splendour of the Tropic's clime."

Basket Ball Game.

The Juniors and Sophomores played a game of basket ball Tuesday evening resulting in a victory for the Juniors. The score was 21 to 7. Two fifteen-minute halves.

The line up was as follows:
Juniors. Sophs.
Irwin, R.G. Hill.
Graham, L.G. Townsend.
Lockhart, C. Petty.
Sifford, R.F. Cash.
Dunn, L.F. Fisher.
Johnson, L.F. Fisher.

Goals from fouls: Lockhart 4; Dunn 1; Cash 5.

On Saturday at 4:15 the Juniors will play the Medical Team; Tuesday the Seniors will play the Juniors at 4:40.

Every class except the Freshman is represented in this game and it is hoped that they will soon make their debut.

President Elliott, of Harvard, recommends the following plan for the student's day: ten hours for study, eight hours for sleep, two for exercise and four for meals and social duties.

The University girl's motto: "What is life without a lover? One for each week-day and three on Sunday."—College Topics.

BASEBALL PROSPECTS.

Old Men Back—New Applicants—A Word to the Students.

As we have previously announced in these columns, it is the purpose of THE TAR HEEL to advocate, in and out of season, the absolute necessity of an early awakening in baseball life. And, it is in furtherance of this view that we again present to the students of the University, an article on the prospects of our ball team this season.

It will be hard to determine at this early date how good or how bad are our chances for developing a good fast aggregation of base ball tossers this spring. The musky atmosphere of uncertainty will clear up soon and then one may be better able to decide our chances. It does not require a prophet, however, to say that our prospects, while not so good as in former years are indeed encouraging, and we have good reason to believe that Carolina's high position in Southern athletics will be sustained.

Our chances of victory depend, of course, a great deal on the material we have. Of the old men, we have Captain Donnelly, Holt, Smathers, Carr, Oldham, Cheshire and Wilcox back. We have lost our pitchers, catcher and second baseman of the infield and two outfielders. The infield, however, will not suffer from lack of applicants. Messrs. Green and Hart, two well known slab artists, will succeed Wilcox and Sweeny. Curran, Noble, and Wilcox, G., who are hot rivals for the receiving end, are good men and have fine base ball qualities.

Four candidates for the out field, whose names we could not secure, but who, we are informed, have shown themselves to advantage, are working hard for their positions, so admirably filled by such men as Graham, Wilcox, Pendleton and others, and the best men will win out. It is plain, therefore, that Captain Donnelly has enough material and he need not fear anything on that score.

Another important element in the result of the baseball scores—and for that matter in all branches of athletics—is what is called "College Spirit." It is elusive and we can't find it when we think we have it. Go out to the practice games—you can spare the time—and encourage the men by your presence. Do not go to the practice games only, but support the team financially. It is conceded that our success in the Thanksgiving game at Richmond with Virginia was due in a large measure to the support the team received on the side lines. So make it a point to attend as many games as possible this Spring.

So here it is: we have good prospects so far; the making of a good team is here; if you want to see that good team, encourage every good play made, sympathize with every player who makes an error, support the team and you will have done your duty.

The Star Course.

"George Wendling's lecture, 'The Man of Galilee' was a gem, and I am very sorry all the students did not hear it," remarked a member of the faculty.

Why was it that some of the students did not take advantage of such splendid opportunity? The admission fee to all the lectures is very reasonable—one they can well afford. No doubt the fault is with the lecture reporter in not calling more attention to the Star Course. A good number of students have expressed their regrets, claiming they would have heard this or that lecture had they known more of the speaker. This is all very true and we are very sorry that they were not informed.

We are not grumbling about the attendance for it has been very satisfactory indeed. But the University has taken particular pains to aid the Societies in securing the best lecturers to be had in the country and it is earnestly desired that all students may attend every address.

We take great pleasure in announcing that Jno. B. DeMotte will lecture here February 12, on "The American Boy and Python Eggs." Dr. DeMotte has been lecturing for 18 years, covering over 300,000 miles and has never failed to fill his appointment. His lantern operator is one of the most skilled in the country. Many of us remember Demotte on "The Harp of the Senses," in 1901.

In the first issue of The Tar Heel last fall, we asserted that Alton Packard, lightning fun-maker and crayon artist, would tickle the most fastidious lady, though she be upholstered and encased in modern fashionable paraphernalia. We want to add a little more assertion. Packard will make the most serious student laugh. We make this announcement for the benefit of those who have not been attending these lectures. Mr. Packard will appear February 17th. Verbum sap.

Story readers and story lovers will be delighted in George W. Cable, author of "Creoles of the Grandissimes," "Old Creole Days" and "Strange True Stories of Louisiana." He is scheduled for February 23rd.

Dr. W. J. Holland, Curator of the Carnegie Institute, of Pittsburg and Dr. Walter H. Page, Editor of "The World's Work" will lecture on March 5th, and 23rd, in order. Further notice of these lectures will be given in proper time.

Dr. Baskerville, Dr. Lewis of Raleigh, and Dr. Bruner are scheduled for Faculty lectures on March 19th, 26th, and April 4th, respectively.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

Our latest communication from the University of Georgia virtually cancels our debate with her this spring. Our friends claim that inasmuch as the query they submitted did not suit us, and since it is too late in the season to select another and begin work on it, they deem it best to negotiate no further this year. They hope, however, that our friendly relations may continue to be as congenial in the future as they have been in the past.

So do we hope our future relations may be as pleasant as they have been in the past. There have never existed between the University of North Carolina and the University of Georgia any other than the kindest feelings and the most friendly relations. So may it be in the future; so shall it be. We are indeed sorry to have to cancel the debate for this spring. And for the benefit of those who may not understand the exact situation of things, we wish to offer a word of explanation, and to show to those interested in us that this state of affairs is not due to neglect, indifference, or tardiness on our part.

Just a word will suffice to show why the query did not suit us. The question submitted comprised practically our whole system of taxation in all its phases. It consisted of seven divisions any one of which would be a big question within itself. Our proposition was, on receiving this query, to confine our discussion to just one phase of the question, or rather to one of the seven questions, but Georgia seemed unwilling to do this. Her second excuse, namely, that the season is too far gone to select another question and begin work on it, we admit is plausible. And to this we have only to say that this tardiness is due entirely to the continued delay on the part of Georgia. If Georgia had really wanted to debate with us this year, we can see no reason why matters could not have been adjusted long ago.

We read in every paper and hear from the lips of every speaker that this is distinctively the age of the craftsman, that the tendency of modern education is toward specialization. We catch the refrain and repeat it ourselves. But what do we mean by it? Do we mean that the man who enters the field of scientific research is to ignore literature and philosophy? Do we mean that the man who devotes his attention to literature is to confine his labors to that alone and let all the great world of science remain as a closed book to him? Do we mean that the man who is preparing himself for the legal profession must spend all his time reading law, and know nothing of, and care less for the beauties of Homer, Virgil and Milton? If this is what we mean, then there is no question about it, we have caught the spirit of the age and perhaps all will be well. Yet we believe a closer examination will do no harm and may be of some good. After noting the tendencies of students for some years we have observed this: the new men who turn their attention to science too often ignore literature, history, philosophy, etc., while those who turn to literature too frequently know nothing of the sciences.

It is true that men have only one lifetime to spend on an education, and therefore should begin work in their chosen field as soon as they are prepared for it. But should they begin before they are prepared? Should a man begin to specialize in literature before he knows anything of the laws of gravitation or of the atomic theory? Should a man begin to specialize in science before he is able to compose a decent English paragraph? In short can we be broad and deep and thorough in any one subject without knowing something outside our own field? We may be in error in saying this, but it seems to us that many of our students are making a serious mistake along the line we have indicated. But, for fear of being charged with questioning the wisdom of their way we will leave the matter with them and say no more.

The University of Virginia has made a proposition to the University of North Carolina to the effect that these two institutions have an annual Field Day. This seems to us to be a capital idea and so Virginia's proposition meets with our hearty approval. We see no reason why this plan should not be put into operation, and doubtless it will be. An effort is now being made to effect an early organization whereby this movement may be inaugurated this spring. It behooves all, therefore, who are interested in this phase of athletics, to get together and begin practice as soon as possible.

Mr. Edward Ray went to Raleigh Friday and returned Saturday.

Wilson, '05, and Parker, '06, were elected from the Phi. Society last Saturday night to represent that Society in the Fresh-Soph debate this spring.

It is hardly necessary to state that the law students here who did not go to Raleigh, could have easily stood the examination given. From their personal viewpoint distance lends enchantment.

Chas. Ross spends today in Raleigh.

PROFESSOR DEMOTTE.

On "Python Eggs and American Boy." Star Course Address Delivered February 12th.

Jno. B. DeMotte received a cordial welcome on his second appearance here and for another time deeply impressed a large audience. "Python Eggs and the American Boy," the sequel to his "Harp of the Senses," has gone deep down in the memory of those who heard it as a unique treatment of a vital subject—a word of kindly advice, a word of wisdom fitly spoken.

In his introductory remarks, Professor DeMotte said he would give his right arm if he were but the age of so many that sat before him—fresh, young, vigorous, prepared to enjoy the magnificence of this bright twentieth century. From the start he expressed his love for the young—young man and young woman—and he showed the genuineness of his love to the close.

"The grandest picture in all the world" he said, "is that of a true mother and her babe." Here the skilful lantern operator threw a beautiful picture, a happy mother and her contented baby, upon the canvas, and the soft clapping of hands died away in silent admiration.

"Two things," he continued "will decide the character of that child, heredity and environment. The first of these is too broad for me to discuss in connection with my subject to-night but heredity has much to do in determining life. Environment is what I shall touch upon briefly."

His theme, thenceforth, was "Habit," which he called, "the biggest word in the English language." He compared the forming of habit to the egg of terrible Python. "The egg must be crushed and then we need have no fear of the snake. * * To shape aright the life of a child takes patience, patience long-suffering. What the young need is Formation not Reformation. What the parent must strive for is Formation. The time to caution, to strengthen is before temptation. I sympathize with reformers, from the bottom of my heart, but the work of reform should begin before habit has enslaved. The world, again, needs more brain and nerve traing. The young must be equipped with well trained brains which will enable them to resist temptation.

If I could impress these two sentences upon your minds, I would be paid for standing upon this platform to-night:—The constant execution of a definite function determines structure.—What I shall be, that am I now becoming."

The lecture was a psychological study of the brain, profusely illustrated. Of the many views, one picture that best brought out his great point was that of an American youth who who standing by his companion one evening on the Jut-tenbuhl east of Gesprengte Thurm of the Schloss at Heidelberg—the most magnificent ruin in all Germany—and pointing towards the setting sun exclaimed, "Over there in America, right there where the sun is going down, is the girl I love and I am keeping myself pure for her sake."

Our lives are songs, God writes the words,
We set them to music at pleasure
And the song grows glad or sweet or sad
As we choose to fashion the measure.

Appropriations to U. N. C. Professors.

We give below a list of the appropriations which have recently been made for the purpose of aiding several members of our Faculty in continuing their scientific researches. So far as we are aware no other Southern institution has been so fortunate as to receive any of these donations. This seems to be sufficient evidence of the efficiency of our scientific departments and of the attention they are demanding abroad.

A Splendid Record.

It is hardly necessary to announce to the public that Judge J. C. MacRae, Dean of the University Law School, and Dr. Thomas Ruffin, his able and scholarly associate, as well as the entire University, are highly gratified, to say the least, at the high standing which every member of the University Law School maintained before the Supreme Court last Monday. The whole law class, consisting of twenty-four intelligent and capable young men, well read in the law, approached, though with fear and trembling, met and subdued, the "common enemy," thereby making a most wonderful record without parallel in the history of the State.

When seen tonight in regard to the excellent showing his boys had made, Judge McRae said: The result of the examination before the Supreme Court came as no great surprise to me. Every member of the class was well prepared, and I confidently expected, and I did hear, good results from their labors. You may say for Dr. Ruffin and myself that we feel satisfied that our efforts have not been in vain."

The outcome of the examination is a good indication of the thorough and efficient training one receives at the University, and it is a lasting compliment to the honored Dean of the Law School and his able associate.

News and Observer, Feb. 10th.

Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society held its 146th meeting in Person Hall on Tuesday night, February 10th.

The following papers were read: The Biological Blood Test, by Dr. Whitehead.

When an animal, say a rabbit for convenience, is inoculated with the serum of another healthy animal of a different species, certain physiological changes take place in the blood of the animal inoculated, about which very little is known. It has recently been discovered that if serum of the animal which was used to inoculate the rabbit, or serum from any other animal of the same species, is poured into a test tube containing serum of the inoculated rabbit, a precipitate is formed. This is especially valuable in enabling us to discover the true blood stains. For instance we have a garment upon which are stains which chemists know are blood stains. Till now they have been unable to distinguish between blood stains of different animals. Now the problem is quite easy. A solution is made of some stain and tested with serum of a rabbit which has been inoculated with human blood. If a precipitate is formed the stain was caused by human blood, if not by some other animal. The identity of the stain is then found by other similar tests.

Recent Work on Corals by Dr. Duerden.

Dr. Duerden showed that similarity between coral of the present time and Paleozoic Corals could be established from the Zoanthid Aremore.

A Static Transformer, by Prof. Gore.

This is an invention of Peter Cooper Hewitt whereby a three phase current may be converted into a continuous pulsatory current without the usual rotary transformer. The invention consists of a glass globe or bulb filled with mercury vapor into which the three wires of the three phase system are inserted. The current is transmitted from the three wires through the space of vapor to the fourth pole which consist of mercury which fills the bottom of the globe and which is connected with the external circuit. There is comparatively little loss of voltage and the saving in weight and cost of equipment is very great.

Track Athletics.

In view of the recent proposition made us by the University of Virginia, a word about the track team which will represent us may not be amiss.

As is probably already known by most of the student body, the University of Virginia has challenged us to meet them in track athletics this spring, with the purpose of establishing permanently an annual field day between the two institutions. A meeting of the Advisory Committee will be held in a few days to consider the matter and from present indications it seems probable that the proposition will be accepted.

Since we are now debarred from any track meets with institutions belonging to the much abused Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, there are two courses of action open to us: namely, we must either seek laurels elsewhere or let our track team go to pieces. We are sure that no true son of Carolina would agree to the latter course so it is evident that we must find somebody to compete with us. Virginia would naturally be the first to enter one's mind. She is our one great rival and has always been an opponent, to suffer defeat at whose hands has never meant disgrace, while to win from her has always been a feat to boast of. With the exception of '99, we have been on the best of terms, and the fact that she has three games scheduled with us this spring shows with what esteem she regards us. Also we are now to have a tennis tournament with her, which we trust will be the beginning of a regular annual meet.

The track team has already been organized under Manager Thorpe, and a captain will be elected very soon. Mr. Von den Steinen will begin indoor exercises for the candidates this week. Quite a number of old men have expressed their intention of appearing on the cinder track this spring. Some of these are: Irvin, Berkeley, Thorpe, Ramsey, Calder, Foust, Newton, Cox, Oldham, Fisher and Hill, while several new men have given in their names, also, among whom are Crawford and Farlow. There are many other good men in college and we hope to see them come out. Remember there isn't a single event that is "cinched" and every man will have a fair show.

Let all come out and we will beat Virginia.

The University and the Literary Societies have gone to great expense this year to get for our Star Course the best lecturers to be secured, and so they may not feel able to assume the extra expense of taking on another lecture this spring. But would they not assume this expense for the sake of hearing a celebrated foreigner who has made himself famous in the literary world? Mr. Sidney Lee, one of England's noted scholars is now visting in America for the first time. In a recent letter to Dr. C. Alphonso Smith he states that he will deliver a lecture here for one hundred and twenty-five dollars. His engagements are all in the North and West; so far no engagement has been made in the South. This is a rare opportunity of hearing a man who has something to say and who knows how to say it. Let's hear him.

Mr. Lee is editor-in-chief of the Dictionary of National Biography which, in point of range and accuracy, is the most noted biographical dictionary in the English language. He is also editor of The Life of Queen Victoria, a work marked by rare judgment, unerring taste, unflinching tact and an accuracy of statement that will doubtless make it the standard life of England's best loved Queen. But Mr. Lee is best known to University students for his Life of William Shakespeare, a work that has superseded all others and yet a work that shows a knowledge gained from first-hand study. His latest work is a copy of the First Folio of Shakespeare. This work cost $40, and all the copies were taken by subscription before it was published.

It seems to us that it would be well for the University to make an effort to get Mr. Lee here while he is in America, and we would suggest that the Societies take action on this matter tonight.

There is an increased interest in the Cecil Rhodes scholarships since the recent conference held in Atlanta. Dr. Parkin as agent of the Rhodes trustees, met representatives of most of the Southern institutions offering courses which prepare students to meet the requirements of Oxford. He has held similar conferences in various sections of the United States. When the suggestions offered have been received and duly considered, he will make report to the trustees, Lord Rosebury, Lord Milner, Mr. Alfred Beit, Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Hawksley, Dr. Jameson, and others.

In North Carolina and the other Southern States the nomination of Rhodes scholars will be intrusted to a committee, of which the President of the University is chairman, the other members of the committee being selected by him from the College faculties of the State. Two scholars will be chosen from each State. The recipient of a scholarship will receive $1500 a year for three years. He must be able to pass the Oxford examination known as "responsions." In a general way, it may be said that, in order to pass this examination, candidates must have such knowledge of Latin, Greek, and Mathematics as a good student in a good college usually has after he has finished his Sophomore year. The Atlanta conference, however, suggested that candidates "must have been regularly enrolled for at least three years in the collegiate department of an American college whose standing is satisfactory to the Rhodes trustees." The conference also recommended that "the selection of candidates be limited to persons not less than 19 nor more than 24 years of age." It is not certain that this suggestion will be adopted, as the Oxford authorities prefer to have younger men. The age limit may be fixed by the trustees as from 18 to 21 years.

In addition to evidence of attainments in Latin, Greek, and Mathematics, the candidate must be a man who has such traits of character as fit him for leadership among his fellow students; and preference will be given to those who have done well in athletics.

If arrangements can be completed in time, the first elections to scholarships will probably be made in January, 1904, and the first scholars can become residents at Oxford in October, 1904. Some newspapers have recently been announcing appointments to Rhodes scholarships, and pictures of successful candidates have been printed. All these are fakes, though possibly unintentional fakes.

Omega Tau.

With this issue of the Tar Heel the advent of a new fraternity is noted.

It is Omega Tau, a fraternity limited to the Law Department. The impression we get of the main purpose of this fraternity is that it is organized to encourage and recognize excellence in the Law, that is for mutual advancement and to give opportunity for further development in the Law to those who can work together congenially and who in the Law Department have shown themselves to be good workers and the accomplishers of good results.

Conditions in the fast developing Law Department of our University seem naturally to have given rise and place to such an organization; and we gather that it is not the object of Omega Tau's founders that their fraternity shall degenerate into a clique, but their ambition seems rather to be to make the presence of Omega Tau in the University operate as a stimulus to study and to legal excellence, and thus that many of our young lawyers may qualify themselves for membership. If such are the aims and objects of this new fraternity, we welcome it to the Greek world.

Walter Page lectures in the Chapel next Saturday night.

Sunday afternoon the Universal Day of Prayer for students was observed by the Young Men's Christian Association. About fifty students were present.

The Fresh-Soph debaters elected from the two Societies for this spring are Wilson, J. K., and Parker from the Phi., and Robertson and Klutz from the Di.

Dr. T. D. Bratton, president of St. Mary's School, preached the monthly sermon in the Chapel last Sunday night. Music was furnished by the University Quartet assisted by several members of the Episcopal choir.

Dr. Hume left Monday afternoon to attend the funeral of his mother-in-law. He was compelled to be absent the remaining part of the week.

Tom Worth, '02, of Asheboro, was on the Hill this week.

Newton is said to have had thirty-six pictures taken—one for home, the others for females abroad.

Rev. Hight C. Moore, of New Bern, has been called by the Chapel Hill Baptist Church and a letter just received says he has accepted. He will begin his work here March 1st.

Pay your subscription.

James Cannon, '05, who has been home on account of sickness, has returned to the Hill.

Frank Smathers is here again after a week's visit to Wade Chisman, ex-'03, at Pine Hall, N. C.

Quite a number of students and faculty spent Sunday in Raleigh. Among the number were, Andrews, Johnson, Faison, Shore, C., and Prof. Howell and Mr Bernard.

Miss Louise Venable is visiting Miss Mary Thompson in Raleigh.

Miss Frances MacRae returned home from Raleigh yesterday.

Cate Tomlinson was seen at large on the streets of Durham yesterday.

Horace Emerson, '05, has appendicitis. His father is here with him.

S. W. Hoffman is in the infirmary with typhoid fever.

This is to urge you who have not done so, to pay your subscriptions at once. THE TAR HEEL cannot run without funds.

Ode to the Pony.

Friend of our fathers, known of old,
 Steed of student of every clime,
 We fain would have thy praises told;
 Thy hoof prints left in sands of time;
 Friend of our fathers, bear us yet,
 Lest we forget, lest we forget.

The college halls grow gray with age,
 The Presidents and Profs. depart;
 Few still live on, save thee and Page,
 Thou idol of the Freshman's heart,
 Pride of our course, trot with us yet,
 Lest we forget, lest we forget.

The cribber bold that puts his trust
 In printed cuffs or pony's word,
 No tough exam. by him is ousted;
 No vain regret from him is heard.
 And ages still to come, you bet,
 Will ride on thee, lest they forget.

South Carolina Club.

The "South Carolina State Club," or "Palmetto Club," has been organized here by the South Carolina students in attendance at the University, in order that their State may have proper representation in the coming number of the University annual, the Yackety Yack. At the organization meeting which was held in the Chapel, on last Friday evening the following gentlemen were voted in as officers:
 Royal Oscar Eugene Davis, Ph.B., of Columbia, was elected President.
 Roach Sidney Stewart, of O. K., was elected Vice President.
 Sam Klutz, of Chester, was elected Secretary and Treasurer.

Southern Students' Conference.

The Southern Student Conference of Young Men's Christian Associations will be held at the Asheville School, near Asheville, N. C., June 13 to 21. The location of the Conference among the mountains of Western North Carolina is exceedingly attractive. The program which is being arranged assures a very successful meeting. Mr. Robert E. Speer, who has always been a favorite of this conference, will again be one of the platform speakers. Other leaders of Christian thought and work among the different denominations will speak from the platform. Among the Bible class teachers whose presence is assured are: Mr. Augustus Nash, of Cleveland, Ohio, who will conduct the class in Personal Work; and Mr. F. Boyd Edwards, who two years ago was Secretary of the Student Department of the International Committee, who will teach "Studies in the Life of Christ." The detailed announcement of the program will be given later. The total cost of attendance, in addition to railroad fare, will be a program fee of $5. and $9 for board for the nine days. It is expected that very favorable railroad rates will be secured. At the same time the Conference of the Young Women's Christian Associations will be held at the Normal and Collegiate Institute. This conference will have many of the speakers who address the conference for young men.

Basket Ball Game.

The Junior-Medical basket-ball game resulted in a victory for the Medical team—score, 8 to 4. This was clearly the best game played so far, the passing of the Medical team being especially noticeable. The weak point in the games is, above all things, in the defensive work. In all cases where a goal was thrown from the field the man was entirely uncovered.

Goals from the field: Dunn 1; Cates 3; Fenner 1.
Goals from fouls: Lockhart 2.

ALTON PACKARD.

On "Types of Uncle Sam's Folks." Star Course Address Delivered February 18th.

Mr. Alton Packard delivered the fifth Star Course Entertainment in Gerrard Hall on last Wednesday evening. His subject was "Types of Uncle Sam's Folks." Mr. Packard as a cartoonist holds a place unique and universal among Lyceum Entertainers. His great versatility, his graceful wit and genial humor added to skill as an artist, musician, and impersonator enabled him to present an evening of rare enjoyment.

He began his lecture by portraying the four seasons of a hat. First it appeared upon the head of the bloated bond-holder; upon next his coachman; then upon the drunkard, and lastly our friend "Happy Holigon."

He then made sketch in similarity in expression, beginning with a Chinaman, passing on through, Jew and Irishman, finally ending with the old negro preacher. He next attacked the Anglo-maniac, telling several good jokes at the expense of our cousins across the pond. The Indiana hoosier also came in for a share of attention accompanied by lines from James Whitcomb Riley. He also demonstrated his ability as a sculptor by carving, from a seeming block of marble a Cupid's head.

Next he showed types of Uncle Sam's women, beginning with the typical American girl and ending with the Old Maid of Boston, who dipped into science, read medicine, and attended all anti-societies, while her father stayed home and darned socks.

He discussed the Delsarte woman at length and cited lines showing how even Delsarte could be turned to good account.

He closed the evening with a landscape showing the evolution of a Cuban wilderness into a modern city with sky scarpers, rail road, and the Carnegie Library, and all other late improvements. His parting advice was "Keep cheerful."

A New Book Coming.

I am now asking the citizens of the State to send me any copy or copies of Original Poems they may have in hand—such poems as have not heretofore been published in book form. I will have them examined by a committee of scholars.

Any poems that are accepted and published in the book will entitle the author of such poem to a copy of the book free, when issued.

The book will be neatly bound in cloth, and will contain about 300 pages, and retail at $1.00 per copy.

Also any newspaper copying this note and sending me a marked copy of the paper, will get a copy by mail free, when issued.

Review of the February Magazine.

The February issue of the Magazine comes to us with a new name at the head of the "Editor's Page," but judging from the contents and the get-up it is still in the hands of its friends.

On the editorial page we have these words: "A college magazine should represent the institution's serious thought, * * what goes in it should be worthy of preservation." This seems to be a statement of the policy of the present editor-in-chief, and in the front-piece and opening article, certainly, he is living up to his ideal. It is eminently fitting that Dr. Linscott should have the place of honor in this issue of the University Magazine. His address on "Pure Scholarship and the College" needs no comment. It is well known to University men and the State in general. It is worthy of preservation. We are all indebted to the Magazine for publishing the few short poems of Dr. Linscott. They serve to show us how "symmetrical, rounded, and perfect like the sphere," to use his own words, his life and scholarship was.

The article by Mr. Wilson, "Critique of Westward Ho," is a valuable and interesting paper. It is a carefully worded well written piece. The setting of the story is especially well given, and shows us something of the spirit of adventure and of the full free life of Elizabethan England. The bibliography will, no doubt, be a help also, to students of Kingsley.

The article entitled "More University Days Seventy Days Ago," adds materially to the interest of of the number. We are liable to forget what manner of men our forefathers were in their youthful days. The above mentioned article will lead to the conclusion that they were at least indued with something of the same kind of human nature that some times expresses itself in the college student of today.

The piece of fiction by D. A. B. is good, and displays some talent on the part of the author. The tone of "A Summer Episode" is well sustained throughout.

The account of the "Washington meeting of Scientific Society" will be read with interest by all.

We consider this issue of the Magazine up to the standard set for it this year. We only regret that the students themselves will not permit the editors to put in more distinctly student work.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

Again it becomes our unpleasant duty to protest against the barbarous practice of cutting and tearing the magazines and papers found upon the exchange table in the library. This thoughtless mutilation that our exchanges suffer at the hands of some readers is a shame that should not be tolerated. We would kindly ask those guilty of this charge please to have a little consideration; remember others may want to read the articles you clip and don't be so cheaply selfish.

Owing to the fact that the 22nd of February falls on Sunday this year, we shall have holiday on Monday, the 23rd. On that day, in the Chapel, the two Literary Societies will hold their usual joint exercises in commemoration of the natal day of the Father of his country. The speaker of the day is Dr. C. Alphonso Smith. The representatives from the societies who will deliver addresses are Messrs. Judd and Parker. Music will be furnished by the University Orchestra. A most interesting programme is offered and it behooves all students to be present. To all who come we can assure a most enjoyable occasion.

Walter H. Page, Editor of The World's Work, will speak in the Chapel tonight at eight o'clock. Mr. Page's subject is "The New Spirit of Nationality, with Especial Reference to the Contribution of the South to National Thought and Character." Suffice it to say that this topic which is of prime interest to us all will be handled in a masterly manner. Mr. Page needs no introduction to a North Carolina audience. He is a native North Carolinian who, by indomitable pluck, energy and perseverance, has placed himself in the fore-rank of American journalism.

The lecture this evening will be free to all. Let all avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing this distinguished scholar.

Verily it seems that the sin of the fathers has been visited upon the children even unto this generation. North Carolinians have ever been loth to write literature. They have even left to other pens the writing of our own history. And in too many cases the glorious achievements of our State's heroes have not yet found their true place in song and story. We have a store-house rich in materials that would delight the pen of a Scott or a Dickens. This material is going to be used by some one some time. Shall it be used by North Carolinians? Why is there no effort on the part of the youth to give to the world in the form of fiction these old traditions of our fathers? Why no effort to touch up these old legends and heroic deeds and preserve them in literature? In short why is there no effort to write something for our Magazine That excellent publication is sadly in need of fiction. It is true that some creditable pieces have appeared this year, but the fiction department is not what it should be.

Many of our exchanges give us credit for getting out the best college magazine in the South in all respects except the one we have mentioned.

The February Magazine is just out and is in every respect a very good issue. The frontispiece is an excellent cut of the late Dr. Linscott. A review of this issue will be found in another column and so no further comment is here necessary.

Dr. Smith Speaks.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith spoke to the Young Men's Christian Association in the Chapel Thursday night. His thought was probably more condensed and contained more practical thought for the average student than any talk in the Association for several years. His explanation of Browning's view on why sin was in the world was helpful. In his poems Browning holds that sin is necessary in the world in order to have the moral life. Sin is but the antitype of good. If faint, further could be reduced to an absolute mathematical certitude, then there could be no credit for anyone believing any more in the Divinity than in the axiom that the whole is greater than the part. The talk was thoroughly practical.

The Devil and the Lawyers.

The Devil came up to the earth one day,
And straight to a court-house wended his way;
Just as an attorney with serious face
Was about to present the points in his case.
With eloquent logic the lawyer repaid
The insinuations his learned friend made;
Then talked to the jury an hour or more—
All heard very plainly by Nick at the door.
Then up rose the other at the end of the day
And denounced his opponent in a different way.
He stormed and he sputtered till blue in the face.
And seemed bent on fighting or winning his case.
"Now, one thing is certain," said Satan, aside,
"You may lay it down surely one lawyer has lied,
But which one is guilty I'm sure I don't know.
For I've followed the story and I'm dreadfully slow,
I'll back to my domain and strengthen my power,
For one of these lawyers could spiel for an hour
And nearly convince me he owned me and,— well
The two of them surely could rob me of hell!"

A Tulane student has submitted the following subject for his graduating thesis: "The Part played by the Economic Element in Engineering; the Function of the Engineer in the Industrial Life of Today and the Necessity of an Economic Course in College Training of the Engineering Students." We would suggest that this gentleman add one or two amendments and submit the amended subject as his thesis, provided Tulane does not limit him to less than fifteen thousand words.

The Man and the Mosquito.

In dire distress the young girl sat
Two foes were hovering round her.
So frantic was her terror that
An easy foe they found her.
Upon her cheek both made attack,
One raised an ugly blister;
The other, hovering at her back,
Well, he just simply kissed her.

A Matchless Maid.

A maid was she, eighteen years old;
Her cheeks were flushed, her tresses gold
Of finest shade.
She was the toast of all the boys,
Who pledged her, with tumultous noise,
"A matchless maid."
But ten years hence her charms had failed;
Her hair was thin her cheeks had paled
To palid shade.
And when she had no lover more,
Her father groaned "She is," he swore
"A matchless maid."

PROSPECTS OF THE BASE BALL TEAM.

Coach Curran's Good Work---More Material Wanted on the Diamond.

It is admitted in the outset of this article that this is an early date to tell exactly the men who will compose the Varsity. No such thing is going to be attempted. But to understand the present and judge the future correctly a little knowledge of the past is necessary. Therefore we are going to say something about the old and new material.

Before we begin on the personnel of the team, however, we want to say a few words about our excellent coach. His name is Jack Curran and his home is in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. He learned the rudiments of the game at St. Mary's College, Belmont, N. C., during the spring of 1897. He was captain of St. Mary's College team in 1898. In 1899 and 1900 he was captain of the Pittsburg College team, Pittsburg, Pa. During the summer of 1901 he played with the Raleigh League Team of this State. Last year he was with the Durham League Team. His record is a good one, his knowledge of the rudiments of the game is thorough and his willingness to work unqualified. "Jack," as the boys familiarly call him, has done more real work up to this time than our last year's coach did the whole year. And though the present outlook is not as good as it has been at times in the past, we believe this year's team will be a winning team because we have a coach in whom we can trust and to whom we can look for the best team possible. When asked about the prospects of the team and who were the most likely candidates Coach Curran said: "I cannot say who will make the Varsity. It is too early to set an estimate upon any player's ability. What I want is more candidates for the team. I believe there is good material in college and if you will give me the material I will do my part. No man is sure of any certain position on the team, but each man is to be used where he will add most to the strength of the whole team." Concerning the men who are to play certain places very little can be said. Of course, Captain Donnelly will take his old place in left field. Captain Donnelly has done splendid work for Carolina on the gridiron and the diamond. He has given and given freely his time and skill to University athletics. For this he has the thanks of the entire student body. He has always played good ball but we predict that he will play his star game this spring. Captain Donnelly says, "The man who works hardest will win out."

Earl Holt, the old reliable, will care for 1st base. It is useless to say that the whole college has implicit confidence in his ability to play this position as well as any man in the South. It is admirable to see how hard and how anxiously he is working to make the team a good one.

Smathers, the old 3rd baseman, is at 2nd base now. Can't tell how long he will be there.

Will Carr, the old short stop, has been unwell and has not come out for practice. He will be out in a few days.

Other infield men are: George Graham, our popular and excellent manager, John Cheshire and Hal Worth.

For catcher, Wilcox, Moore, Cox and Noble have made the best impression. It is sufficient to say that one or two good catchers can be developed from these.

Oldham, McNeil, Hart, and Greene are trying for the position of pitcher.

Wade Oldham is trying for an outfield. It is reported that "Fatty" Giles and Murray Allen will be here in a few days to try for outfield positions.

Others who have showed up for practice are: Neill Graham, Harris, Pritchard, Condon, Fenner, Sifford, Norton, Engel and Ham Jones.

A word about that much abused phrase, College Spirit, and I am done. Every man in college has the inalienable right to stand on the side lines and yell until his throat is sore. Moreover it is your duty to cheer on the team. Last fall there was plenty of the right sort of college spirit behind the foot ball team. Every student in college knows the record of that team and speaks of it with pride. College spirit sent 250 boys to Richmond, Virginia, and college spirit made the score 12 to 12. Heretofore there has been no college spirit behind the base ball team. Instead there has been a "cuss-out" spirit. That is when one of the team happens to make a costly error the above mentioned spirit finds expression in such phrases as these: "I told you he was no good and I don't see how he ever made the team;" "I knew he wasn't worth anything;" "I expected that fool (Abe Shivers?) to lose the game by some of his rotten work."

Boys, such a spirit will never win. On the other hand it will ruin the best team that ever went upon the diamond.

Now let's rise above this. Let's go out and watch every practice, encourage every good play and every good effort. Sympathize with the man who makes a costly error; it pains him a thousand times more than you, hence to "cuss him out" only makes bad matters worse. Let's show every man on the team that we have confidence in him whether in victory or defeat. The coach is going to do his part, the captain, we know, will do his and the team as a whole will do its utmost if we show our interest. From today on let's go out there and help develop one of Carolina's best teams.

THE WASHINGTON BIRTHDAY EXERCISES.

A Splendid Tribute to Ante-bellum Orators of the South by Dr. C. A. Smith.

The annual George Washington birthday celebration was held in Gerrard Hall Monday. Mr. McFadyen presided and Mr. Otho Ross performed the duties of Secretary. Mr. McFadyen said, in opening the exercises: "We have come together to-day not from a sense of duty but from a custom that springs spontaneously as it were, from the heart of every true American."

After a touching prayer by Dr. Meade, the president announced the first speaker as Mr. Z. V. Judd, of the Phi.

His theme was: "Progressive vs. Proportional Taxation." This subject, in the short time allotted, he gave a thorough treatment and interesting presentation.

He said in part:

"In a Democratic country one of the most ominous tasks for the law-making powers is that of devising a just scheme of taxation. It was especially so with Washington, his cabinet and the first Congress of the United States. The truth of this is all the more evident when we recall that our people had just rebelled against the Mother country because of unjust taxation.

"The two fundamental principles of taxation are proportion and progression. The theory of proportion is older than that of progression, though a little retrospect will show that the two principles have struggled side by side from the early legislation of Solon down to the present time. The arguments have been advanced in favor of progressive taxation, in three groups: The socialistic, compensatory and economic theories.

The foremost advocate of the socialistic theory bases his defence of progression upon the principle that it is the duty of the state to redress all inequalities of wealth among its citizens. This would lead us at once into socialism. But it is perfectly logical to repudiate the socialistic theory and still uphold progression on economic grounds. But before considering progression on an economic basis let us view the arguments of the compensatory theory. One of its chief exponents, President Walker, claims that differences of wealth are due to a great extent, to the failure of the state in protecting its citizens against violence and fraud; and to the state's own acts, having a political purpose, such as commercial treaties, tariffs etc., in which case he argues, allowance should be made therefore in the tax system. The defect of this theory lies in the impossibility of laying down any general principles by which this influence of the state, in creating inequalities of fortune, can be measured.

"Before considering the third—the economic theory of progressive taxation—let us observe that the real contest between the two principles of proportion and progression turns about the fundamental question as to the basis of taxation—the theory of benefits as the theory of ability. By the one it is held that a man should pay taxes according to the benefits that accrue to him from the state, by the other, that he should pay taxes according to his faculty or ability to pay. The benefit theory held that protection was the chief function of the state, and so concluded that taxes must be adjusted to the protection afforded. This conclusion was soon modified by the introduction of the theory of the minimum of subsistence; later it was discarded, and in its stead was put the cost-of-service theory, that is, taxes should bear a definite relation to the cost of the protection afforded. This was likewise set at naught, and for it was substituted the doctrine of ability or faculty. Faculty was at first interpreted to imply general property; later it came to denote income, and then only income or the excess of the minimum of subsistence. In other words the idea of burden or sacrifice was introduced. Human needs became a fundamental consideration, and it was declared that to impose equal sacrifices, we must tax the rich, not only absolutely, but relatively more than the poor. The tax must be, not proportional, but progressive.

"To most of the existing forms of taxation in the United States the progressive principle is difficult of application; but the principle is true, and it remains for our genuine statesmen who are actuated by a sense of truth and justice to remove the obstacle and apply the principle."

Dr. Smith's address on "Some Southern Orators of Ante-bellum Days," captivated those who heard it.

He said, in part:

"It must be remembered that the oratory of a nation is the product of the national life. There are periods in every nation's life when we have a right to expect great orators and there are other periods when the presence of great orators is an exception. Two conditions are essential for producing great orators: First, There must be a stir of popular life, associated with freedom of speech. Second, There must be vital questions, clamoring for solution—questions that appeal not only to the scholars but to the laboring man as well.

In America we have had two such periods: the Revolutionary Period, that immediately preceded and following the Revolutionary, 1760-1832; and the Constitutional Period, 1832-1850. In the first, the questions at issue were relative to the formation of our constitution and in the second, the

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

Very few of us have an adequate conception of the amount of time and work required to get up an intercollegiate debate, and fewer of us, perhaps, realize the value of the training received and of the skill acquired in preparing for one of these forensic contests. In our opinion there is not a two-hour course in college more valuable to the student, and surely not one that requires more time and hard work, than the preparation a student has to make in order to discuss intelligently some great question of national importance.

Yet this work counts for nothing in the college course. We see no tenable reason why the time and labor thus expended should not count, for something at least, towards graduation.

In some of our universities the authorities have recognized the value of this work and have seen the need of encouraging debate, and as a result of their observation, they allow students who serve as intercollegiate debaters to count this work toward graduation. Why such action has never been taken by the authorities here we are unable to say, but this policy seems to us to be sound and worthy of consideration.

The preliminary contests to decide upon our Johns Hopkins debaters have been held in both societies and our team has been chosen. Messrs. R. O. Everett, of the Phi and S. S. Robins, of the Di, will represent us in this forensic contest with the Baltimoreans in April. Both are strong debaters and forcible speakers, and we have no fear as to how they will acquit themselves. We may rest assured they are going to do their part. But something more is to be done: the students of the University have a part to perform.

Since the debate with Georgia has been called off—much to our regret—the Hopkins debate is the only one Carolina will have this spring. Now it behooves us all to put forth our utmost efforts to win this one. There are many ways in which we can render our debaters great service, but the especial assistance we can give them is, to express it in the words of one of last year's debaters, to make them feel that six hundred students are behind them as one body. In other words, we must make them feel that we are interested in this debate; that we are determined they shall win; that victory or defeat comes not to them alone, but to our Alma Mater and to us all. Let us make them feel that we, as the student body, have an implicit faith in them as our representatives, and we feel little hesitancy in predicting as a result another victory for Carolina.

Baseball practice is now progressing finely. The attendance is good and the prospects encouraging. Coach Curran deserves much praise for the excellent showing he has made even at this early date. We hope to publish before long a criticism of the individual candidates for the Varsity.

Hon. Walter H. Page.

The editor of The World's Work, Hon. Walter H. Page, of New York, spoke before an anxious audience of students and villagers in the Chapel Saturday night. His subject was "Literature as an Industry"

Mr. Page's introductory remarks may be summed up in these three statements: "Individual democracy caused the settlement of this country. Individual democracy created our government and peopled the West. Individual democracy will next be applied to education in the attempt to elevate society so as to make every citizen an efficient economic factor.

Speaking from experience, Mr. Page said that the most naked thing that comes into the world is a novel—a modern novel. He discussed the ups-and-downs of the publisher in treating with a host of authors and more especially, authoresses.

Descriptive of literary critics and book reviewers Mr. Page used a very fitting bit of originality when he said "one fact becomes fifteen fancies."

In comparing the differences between a poet writing in the midst of a reading and of a non-reading public, the speaker used Edgar Allen Poe and John Greenleaf Whittier as examples.

We agree with Mr. Page when he says that ten of Whittier's book of poems are read to one of Poe's—that is, if he will confine his statement to New England. A Frenchman said that Poe was the only great poet America has produced. Whittier is barely known in France or Germany, while edition after edition of Poe's poems have been published in the native vernacular of those countries.

A piece of advice offered by Mr. Page, and worthy of repetition, was "Young men, if you intend to enter journalism, edit and own a paper or magazine—or else beware. It is a hard life and offers many disappointments."

We are always glad to welcome this distinguished son of the Old North State and we will give him an attentive hearing when he comes again, for he is polished and practical and common sensical. But we must be frank and say—perhaps we judge him unjustly—Mr. Page's address was very good what there was of it and plenty of it such as it was. We are extremely sorry Mr. Page did not tell us how the University might "produce a man of note in a chosen profession."

Homer, '04, went to Henderson Saturday and returned Monday.

Stevens, G. P., "Parson" Adams, Chas. Ross and Robins went to Durham last Monday to hear Page speak at Trinity that night. All were well pleased with Page's speech.

The contest in the Di society to decide who should be its representative in the Johns Hopkins debate this spring, was held last week. The two contestants were Robins and Gold. Each made a strong speech; each made such a speech as Dr. Smith said, would wipe Johns Hopkins off the earth. The committee, consisting of Drs. Smith and Raper, and Mr. McKie, gave Mr. Robins the place.

The devotional meetings of the Y. M. C. A., commencing with the coming week, will be changed. The two mid-week meetings will simply be interchanged. That is, the half hour devotional meeting Thursday night will be held on Tuesday night and the ten minute Tuesday night prayer meeting will be held in the association room on Thursday night. The hour for each, 7 p. m., is unchanged.

Between now and June the professors of other colleges will take up about one fourth of their class time in explaining their courses in which the students ought to take advanced work. This is done by the professors not to get more men in their courses, for as a matter of fact "it makes no difference" to them if their classes are small. Their object is to give mere illustrations and then to the few, who may be enlightened enough to take the course, to give a unity of study.

According to her base-ball schedule in College Topics, Virginia will play twenty-two games at Charlottesville this spring and only six away from home.

Death of Miss Elva May Abernethy.

Miss Elva May Abernethy, daughter of the late Rev. J. T. Abernethy, of the North Carolina Conference, and Mrs. Anna M. Abernethy, was born at Rutherford College, September 20th, 1878, and died at Advance, N. C., February 21, 1903. She attended a teacher's institute at Mocksville on Saturday, February 14th. On that morning she contracted a deep cold which developed into pneumonia and ended a bright and beautiful life. She was a student of the University 1900-1901, and will be remembered as a faithful and diligent student. Quiet, gentle and modest, guileless in her Christian life, beloved by all who knew her, aspiring to fill a woman's place worthily in a busy world, her death at such an hour, when life seemed so full of promise and usefulness is a striking reminder that death often comes at such an hour as we think not. She was buried from the Methodist church of this place last Monday. A beautiful floral offering was sent by "The King's Daughters," of which she was an esteemed member.

To the bereaved family we extend sincere sympathy.

questions at stake related to the interpretation of that constitution.

"Without disparagement to other sections, one of the most striking chapters of American History is yet to be written—and that chapter will be dedicated to Southern orators; for, as the home of great orators, the South can challenge any nation and any age. * * *

The speaker paid a glowing tribute to Henry Clay, "The Demosthenes of the Forest," of whom he said "though he was not the scholar that most of our orators were, he could touch with impulsive power the keys of passion." Though my theme is of great orators no one can refer, however briefly, to the Revolutionary period without mentioning the name of Washington—no nobler figure ever stood in the forefront of a nation's history. The greatest tribute ever paid to anyone was that said of Washington,— "though time shall be no more, the exact measure of the nation's progress in virtue and wisdom can be found in noting what veneration it pays the name of Washington. His pure heart and serene temper gave his words a force Demosthenes might have envied."

Of James Madison, Dr. Smith said that America has produced many more gifted orators but none more brilliant.

John Randolph, of Virginia, he said, spans the two periods. Randolph was once opposed on the floor of Congress by a watch-maker. When Mr. Randolph got up he said that if the gentleman wanted to know anything about tactics let him come to him and if he wished to know anything about tick-ticks he would go to him.

"In the second period—Robert Y. Hayne, who defeated Daniel Webster on every point raised in the great debate; John C. Calhoun, whose ideas were so clear and whose language so plain that he made a path of light through every subject he discussed; Sargeant Smith Prentiss, 'whose style with its gleam of humor, and superstructure of purity and grace, I believe will stand out as the highest reach of popular oratory yet attained in this country;' and Henry Clay, 'who stands today as a most magnificent figure in history;' Hayne, Calhoun, Prentiss and Clay, all were eulogized in a masterful effort.

"When the true history of the past has been written, as written it shall be, it will be found that these men did not juggle with words, merely to tickle the fancy of people. They were successors and worthy successors of him whom we have come together to-day to honor. It was their voice that sounded the trumpet call to freedom and redress. I fling this challenge to the open pages of history—that their voices were raised never in behalf of conscious wrong, never in defense of known usurpation."

UNIVERSITY MUSICIANS.

Concert By The Glee and Mandolin Clubs and Orchestra.

The University Glee and Mandolin Clubs and Orchestra made their first appearance of the season in Gerrard Hall, Monday night.

"Hail to Carolina," rendered ensemble was especially appropriate as opening selection. The enthusiasm it aroused was suppressed by the rousing cheers that drowned Virginia voices at Richmond—

"Hark the sound of Tar Heel voices
Ringing clear and true,
Singing Carolina's praises Shouting N. C. U."

Luder's "King Dodo" by the Orchestra and Bennett's "Daughter of Love" by the Mandolin Club reflect no little credit upon Directors Woolen and Leinbach and the applause these renderings received was the well merited laudation won by a set of of faithful and patient musicians.

A celebrated songstress once said that she was always enthused while listening to trained male voices. The voice of man, whether bass, baritone or tenor, seemed to appeal to her with a charm surpassing the soft notes of woman and equalled only by the clear shrill clarion strains of the mocking bird. This feminine critic was neither a mere flatterer nor a genuine old maid but a whole lover of the art. She was right and there are many here who sympathize with her. That is the reason, no doubt, our Glee Club and Quartette receive that full measure of appreciation which they deserve.

The old saying "he that hath no music in his heart is fit for treason, etc." grows truer every day. Then let us develop this the undisguised voice of inner self and, stepping to the tune of "Dixie" and lifting our hats to "The Star Spangled Banner," cast away our gloomy feeling and in soothing song our sorrows to sleep.

The program, as executed by the Clubs and Orchestra is inserted sing below:

1. Hail to Carolina . . . Arr. By Woolen
Glee and Mandolin Club and Orchestra
 2. March from "King Dodo" . . . Luder
Mandolin Club
 3. Idol "Hiawatha" . . . Moret

The Glee and Mandolin Clubs, Orchestra and Quartet are expecting to play at the State Normal in about two weeks.

Y. M. C. A. Missionary Service.

The address which Dr. Thomas Hume delivered at the regular missionary meeting of the Y. M. C. A. showed that that the missionary movement of our age has in it the secret of social reform and progress, as it preaches the reconstruction of society through the transformed individuals who are to leaven the lump and proffer the divine life which satisfies human instincts everywhere and creates the power to realize otherwise unattainable ideals. The traditions, the customs, the spirit of heathenism will be changed only as Paul the apostle changed Corinth and Ephesus by presenting "Christ Crucified." The personal conviction which is accompanied by the Holy Spirit will be as effectual in China or India as it was in the ancient day in undermining the Greek-Roman system of thought and life by the proclamation of sin and the atoning sacrifice and the infinite love.

THE GHOST AND THE GRIND.

AN OPEETTA IN ONE ACT.

Dramatis Personæ—Shakespeare, Schiller, Goethe, Racine, Corneille, discontented ghosts, Protogoras Vellum, a grind.

Scene: Hades and Harvard.
Time: any old.

(Curtain rises, showing Bill Shakespeare on the banks of Styx. He soliloquizes as follows:)

Shakespeare—Oh, 'tis beyond endurance! The way we classic chaps are treated by Harvard men would make the Sahara weep. They scoff at us. Our immortal lives, our noble thoughts, Behold, my colleagues approach. They are sad, solemn, silent. They, too, brood over their wrongs.

(Enter Schiller, Racine and Corneille. They have been haunting lecturers in Sever and are very melancholy.)

Schiller (sings)—
Ach! Tell and Die Jungfrau I wrote,
Und Wallerstein's Lager and Tod,

Yet all in the klass
Say Schiller's ein Ass:
Ach, das ist ein hell of a note!

(He opens a bottle of Wallenstein's Lager, and drinks it, weeping.)

Racine—
Oui, zat is quite true, my dear sir;

Zey call me a bore—ah Mon Dieu!
Zey hate "Athalie."
Zat sweet play by me.

And love ze Freres Rogers, parbleau!

Schiller—Poor Racine! He will eventually perhaps anyhow doubtless past present subjunctive himself sick make.

Dante—
Inferno! To whatta low depths have I sunk!

De Harvarda student he tinka me punk;
Hecalla me bad,

He make'a me mad.
He treata me like a hsd-organa monk!

[He sits on the bank, in wild despair.]

Racine—Look! See! Get onto! Goethe and Corneille approach! What is it that it is that they cuss at?

[Enter Goethe and Corneille, who also come from Sever. They are in frenzy of anger.]

Goethe—
Ya! mit rage I'm going to burst.
Donnerwetter! Liberwurst!
Mein classic fame ist up der spout.—

Blitzweinerschnitzelsauerkraut!
Gorneille—

Oui, monsieur,
Same chose here.

(They all weep in one another's arms.)

Shakespeare—We'll stand no more. I have an idea. Let us fly to earth and haunt a Harvard man. He will be terrified; he will tell his comrades of his dreadful experiences and they will respect us for ever after. Come on! To earth!

[They all hasten to earth with yells of joy, and enter the room of Protogoras Vellum, the grind. He awakes in terror.]

Shakespeare—Tr r-r r-remble!
Schiller—Pr-r r r r-retzel!

[All clank chains and howl dismally.]

Protogoras—Gentlemen, why do you treat me thus? It's all a mistake! You are my idols. You are my grinding stars. I have never got less than A in any of you.

Stop clanking that chain. Schiller I got A in you last year. Quit howling John Goethe! I love you every one of you.

Shakespeare—Beloved young fellow.

Racine—Enfant adorable!
Corneille—Monsieur tres amiable!

Dante—Spaghetti amico!
Goethe—Mein lieber Pumpnickel!

Schiller—Mein Wurzburger Engle!

[All embrace Protogoras Vellum with mad fervor, forget their plans of vengeance and lose the last boat across the Styx.]—Harvard Lampoon.

GEORGE W. CABLE.

Reading From One of His Books on the Creole People.

On the night of Friday the twenty seventh, George W. Cable gave a reading in Gerrard Hall from his book, "The School Master of Grand Point." His gesture and adaptability to the various dialects which entered into the story were exceptionally good.

The Schoolmaster of Grand Point is a story of life in a little Acadian settlement on the banks of the Mississippi. An enthusiastic but not over-learned teacher of French extraction comes to Grand Point to start a great educational movement among his simple kinspeople. We are told of his humble beginning and his interesting zeal. Among his pupils, was a lad named Claude and a young girl named Sedonie. Both the school teacher and Claude fell in love with Sedonie. An element of opposition to the school arises. The school teacher makes this proposition, that the school children would be examined and if any scholar missed a single question the school would be closed. On the day of the examination a book agent arrives at Grand Point. He is mistaken by the school master for the State Superintendent of Public Education and is asked to examine the children. The children recite perfectly until Sedonie is called upon. The teacher mispronounces the word, Sedonie, however spells it right. The teacher thinks it is a mistake and is bewailing his fate when the book agent explains that it was the fault of the teacher and not of the scholar; therefore great rejoicing follows. The school teacher continues to hold his job, and marries Sedonie.

If marriage licenses were issued with divorce coupons attached, it would be a great convenience to the four hundred.—College Topics.

The patent office has decided it to be unlawful to use the President's name as an ad. without his consent. This is hard on the shoe polish manufacturers who might have put a "Roosevelt Black" on the market.—Skiff.

Before many moons have waxed and waned, the diamond will resound with the merry crack of the base ball bat, the horsehide will do gymnastic aerial stunts, the rooster's lungs will wax elastic and there'll be something doing.—Ex.

I asked the Faculty one day
What makes them look so wise.
"You think perhaps," I heard them say
This is some strange disguise,
And if we did not look this way
How could you guess we're wise.
College Topics.

Woman's faults are many.
Men have only two:
Everything they say,
And everything they do.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We publish here an extract from Dr. Alderman's speech delivered some days ago at Johns Hopkins University, as the Founder's Day address. We should like to publish more of this masterly production, but a lack of space forbids.

"The South has changed the emphasis of its thought from personal-ity to social progress. It has made the change that every country makes that passes from the patriarchal to more complex forms of life. Its insistence is to be upon community effort, upon civic progress, upon general well-being rather than upon individualism. It has entered for good or ill upon its probation as a member of the modern world. It has found that civilization is an economic as well as an ethical fact. It has seen the dignity and value of childhood and of the common man to the general life. It has shifted its social center of gravity from the cathedral and the court house to the schoolhouse and the university. It is still conservative. It still believes in God, reads Walter Scott and votes the Democratic ticket—a trinity of somewhat unequal virtues, I must confess. It is still fortunate in the raw material of its citizenship, whether it issues out of old stocks, sobered and dignified by endurance and suffering, or out of the ranks of the plain people who inherit the English consciousness. Its cry is for men to help it realize its highest self in life and law in the spirit of the modern world. How shall the charm and loveableness of the old be blended with the vigor and freedom of the new?"

The action of the Medical Class in organizing their base ball team and beginning practice so early is indeed commendable, and we should like to urge the other classes to profit by their example and get their teams out for practice as soon as possible. From an athletic standpoint the importance of class teams cannot be too forcibly emphasized. To have strong class teams means well-trained candidates for the future Varsity; and to have well-trained men to begin with means a winning team; and a winning team is what we are striving for. But we cannot have strong class teams except by constant practice. Now is the time to begin. The team that makes the early start is going to get the jump on the others and sometimes this means success. Why should we not have a spirit of friendly rivalry among the class teams? No better incentive can be found, and the sooner it is started the better it will be for the interest of the several teams.

Johns Hopkins now wishes to postpone our debate until May, but we are unable to give her reasons for making this proposition. We all know the sooner this debate comes off the better it will be for the debaters. True it is that our men must have some time to divide the question and rework their debates; this done, we see no practicable reason why the contest should be delayed so long. An effort is being made to get the Baltimoreans to agree to meet us in April, and if they agree to this, the debate will perhaps take place about the 17th.

If some people would attend to their own business as diligently as they meddle into the affairs of their neighbors, they would be marvels of success. And if others would only apply their doctrine to their own cases and secure the results they claim will follow, they would not have half the trouble to convince other people of the importance of their advice.

Truly this is the season when the editor of a college journal has to "scorn delights and live laborious days" in his effort to get something with which to fill his paper.

First Year Meds.

The First Year Medical Class met in the Chapel, Wednesday, March 4, and elected A. H. Rose, Captain, and J. W. Tankersley, Manager, of their Base Ball Team for this Spring. They have some good material and should put out a good team.

A Matchless Maid.

A maid was she, eighteen years old;
Her cheeks were flushed, her tresses gold
Of finest shade.
She was the toast of all the boys,
Who pledged her, with tumultuous noise,
"A matchless maid."
But ten years hence her charms had failed;
Her hair was thin her cheeks had paled
To palid shade.
And when she had no lover more,
Her father groaned "She is," he swore
"A matchless maid."

About one hundred postals have been received by the members of the Junior and Senior classes from a publishing firm in Ohio. It contains the following: "We wish to announce that we are still in the business of preparing outlines and furnishing material for all kinds of literary productions. We also write the entire article when the customer desires it." The view of a Senior is the universal view of the University students—that house can go to thunder. University boys do their own work.

The classes in French I are now using Dr. Bruner's edition of Chateaubriand's Le Dernier Abencerrage which has recently been published by the American Book Company. Prof. Bruner is also editing other French texts which will be published soon.

The following delegates of the Young Men's Christian Association left yesterday afternoon and this morning for Winston-Salem, to attend the State convention of the association: Chas. Ross, Z. V. Judd, R. M. Harper, Ed McDonald, O. B. Ross, L. Brigman, J. S. McNider, J. H. Vaughn and F. S. Hudson. Judd will be compelled to return before the convention adjourns, but the others will not come back until Wednesday morning.

The contest to decide upon the scrub debater in the Hopkins debate was held in the Phi hall Thursday evening. Messrs. Wright and Daniel, both Sophomores, were the only contestants. Mr. Wright won.

On Friday evening of last week Dr. Hume lectured before a large audience at St. Mary's on "The Life of Shakespeare's England as Reflected in his Hamlet."

The query discussed last Saturday night in the Phi was: Resolved, That the Legislature Should Pass the London Bill. The affirmative won. The committee was unable to decide best debater.

The Di discussed the query, Resolved, That President Roosevelt was Justifiable in Holding a Bi-colored Reception. The negative won, and Mr. Hudson made the best debate.

Mr. E. G. Willson, College Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, of North and South Carolina, spoke Sunday afternoon in the Chapel on "Sin." About one hundred students were present. The new song books which the Association has just bought were used and the music was much better.

Last Sunday morning Dr. J. D. Bruner lectured in Charlottesville, on the wisdom literature of the Bible. Prof. Bruner's lectures on the Bible are becoming more popular all the while as is shown by the fact that in addition to calls from various parts of this State, invitations are now coming from abroad.

Exchanges.

"She's stuck on me", the youth declared, And thought he was in luck. He married her—and now he finds That he's the one that's stuck.
 A student at Wabash college inscribed the following heartrending lines in his Psychology:
 If there should be another flood, For refuge hither fly;
 If all the world should be submerged, This book would still be dry.
 "You say his wife's a brunette? I thought he married a blond."
 A dirty, dusky little darkey, too young to know the moon changes, stopped in a Chapel Hill store to warm and, on being asked his name unostensibly replied: "Alexander to the Great."
 We would like to suggest to the business managers of some of our exchanges that they kindly remind those who fold their papers that the papers were printed to be read.
 Parson, [visiting prison]—Why are you here, my misguided friend? Prisoner—I'm the victim of the unlucky number 13.
 Parson—Indeed? How's that? Prisoner—Twelve jurors and one judge. —Ex.

BASE BALL CRITICISM.

Coach Curran Talks Plainly About the Candidates for the Varsity.

Coach Jack Curran, after earnest solicitation on the part of the Athletic Editor, has given for publication the following criticism of the playing of the different candidates for positions on the Varsity.

This criticism is given not for the purpose of humiliating or discouraging any player. Far from it. Indeed, exactly the contrary result is anticipated by this sort of criticism. The true purpose of a criticism, as we understand it, is to show the candidates plainly and impartially their weak points and to point out the methods by which, if regarded, they will be enabled to overcome all deficiencies.

"Well, Holt at first, you may say, is still doing good work. He is quick and active and infuses life and ginger into the men on the infield. He is a fairly good base runner, but improvement could be made along this line. He should keep a better eye on the ball and learn to use the stick better.

"Smathers, at second, is going to make a splendid baseman. He plays his position well, keeps his mind on the game and supports his men admirably. At present he is not in practice owing to the fact that his lip was hurt a few days ago, and in his absence John Cheshire has been officiating at the second cushion. Cheshire is almost an equal of Smathers. He understands the game reasonably well, but he should improve in batting and base running.

"Graham, at third, has shown more improvement in every line than any player on the team. He is without doubt the hardest worker we have, and this one fact will have considerable influence in allowing him to preside at third. He bats well and keeps his eye on the ball. On foul flies I do not believe he has an equal. He obeys instructions and is always willing to learn something new about the game.

"Carr at short is not playing as well as he is capable of doing. I want to see him do better work and cannot assign any reason for his lifeless spirit. He certainly can do better.

"As regards Captain Donnelly I have little to say. He is playing his position in a perfect manner, not having made an error this year. He is, as everybody can see, proficient with the willow. He runs bases fairly well. He knows the game, but he should talk more to his men. No one can imagine how much good this does. To hear the captain talking in pleasing, yet emphatic tones, encourages every man and fills him with hope.

"Oldham in center field is holding his position nicely and makes it a point to support his men. He has developed into a safe batter. The only serious difficulty I find with Oldham is that he is a little anxious in running bases. A few more days of good training, however, I think, will overcome the difficulty.

"The candidates for right field have made no favorable impression, and unless greater and decided improvements are made, the place will be filled with a pitcher until Giles or Murray Allen arrives. I regret exceedingly that such is the case, but it just can't be helped.

"The candidates for the receiving end, Cox, Noble, and Wilcox, are running a neck and neck race, and it is impossible to say who will win out. Cox, although seriously hurt a few days ago, has not retired permanently from the race and will be out again soon. You may say this much: the best man will win out.

"Hart, Green and Oldham, as twirlers of the leather, have shown themselves to better advantage than any others. It is a pretty race and it is hard to tell who will secure first honor."

Concluding, Coach Curran said, "I want to see more men come out and play. We can't develop a team unless we have material, that is certain. So I wish you would say for me that the team is not yet made, that there is no "ring" in base ball and every man will be given a fair chance to make the team. Another thing, before I finish, the students should come out in larger numbers to watch the practice games. Their presence gives hope and courage to the players. They should not only go to practice games but it is their duty, it seems to me, to support the team financially.

Coach Curran is right. It is the duty of every student in college, if the circumstances will permit, to attend every game this season. The University base ball team is your team. Its success is your success; its defeats your defeats. Therefore stand solidly behind it and give it your warm support.

Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society held the 149th meeting Tuesday night, in Person Hall. Dr. W. C. Coker, Dr. J. E. Mills and Prof. J. W. Gore addressed the Society.

Dr. Coker, aided by Mr. Allard's chart illustrations, gave an interesting discussion on "Some Plants Known of the Chapel Hill Region." He made known, perhaps for the first time, several rare plants of the Thallophyta division, and one of the Angiospermae.

The first plant mentioned found by Mr. C. A. Shore, is one commonly known as Earth-star. This plant was discovered on the side of a tree and has since been noticed in several places. It is a tiny, unobscured little plant, hardly larger than a pea and is a beautiful example of plant adaptation to certain conditions.

Dr. Coker next showed a species of stink-horn found by Mr. Fred Hanes. This consists of a fragile stalk, issuing from a cup-like base, and is an excellent specimen of a plant living on a dead insect.

Other plants illustrated and described are the result of Dr. Coker's research. Among those shown are several very rare and interesting types of the Phycomyces class.

It is of interest to note that several of these plants have not been recorded in North Carolina and the information proves that our ideal geological surrounding is also a great field for botanical research.

Dr. J. E. Mills followed Dr. Coker with a brief account of the rapid progress of the Electro-Chemical industry—an industry of which many of us know comparatively little. To show something of the great strides along this line, the speaker said that the value of products for the last year alone were upward of a hundred million dollars, utilizing an enormous horse-power. This he showed to be wonderful indeed as the first mention of Electro-Chemical application, the decomposition of zinc oxide, was in 1872.

Many papers and numerous text books are alive to-day with discussions of the industry and its various applications. The great feature of Electro-Chemical possibilities lie in the utilization of a great degree of temperature, thereby greatly decreasing the price of the raw material. Aluminum, sodium, nitric acid, etc., have been lowered to a third their price by other processes.

This is truly a growing industry and promises many startling improvements in the Chemical world. The Chemist is no longer sitting in his laboratory cooking so much soup but is working with a definite aim, and not only knows why many actions take place but is finding out how to actually make those reactions take place.

Prof. Gore came before the Society to make a few statements on a new use of the Bubble-tube. He then illustrated how this tube was to be applied, in connection with the spark jet, in wireless telegraphy. It is hoped with this tube to make wireless telegraphy more certain.

Shakespeare Club.

The March meeting of the Shakespeare Club, held in Gerrard Hall Thursday night, was largely attended. Dr. Hume, the president, said the greatest feature of the Club was to stimulate the social side of literature, for literature deals with humanity—and through eighteen years the members of this organization have ever kept alive that great principal.

Mr. Fred Archer read a pleasing criticism on "The Lyrical Elements in the Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet." This play, he asserted, is the greatest love tragedy of the world, and one enriched by some of the most exquisite lyrical elements of language.

In connection with the same play, another complimentary reading was given by Mr. H. R. McFadyen. The question he raised was "Did Shakespeare Properly End Romeo and Juliet as a Tragedy." The conclusion he reached, and a just one it was, gave evidence that, with the characters Shakspeare used and the environment in which they acted, the play could not have been logical and ended in any way save—tragedical.

Next Dr. Hume happily presented Dr. C. Alphonso Smith who gave a most instructive and entertaining lecture on the "Shakspeare-Bacon Question." After a brief discussion of the origin and history of this controversy. Dr. Smith proceeded to take up the several arguments advanced by the Baconians in support of their belief, and to refute them one by one. His discussion was fair, forcible and convincing.

He said there are two schools of those who hold the Baconian theory: first, the secret school, or those who base their belief upon the cryptogram; and those who urge that a great scholar wrote the plays, claiming that Shakspeare was not a great scholar. The speaker then showed the inconsistency of the arguments of both schools. He proved beyond a doubt the Shaksperian authorship and with equally strong proof showed the impossibility of the Baconian authorship.

We are glad to note that the Record has been issued. It is a very attractive copy.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

At last we are able to announce that the University and the literary societies have succeeded in getting Mr. Sidney Lee to lecture before the student body this spring. Mr. Lee has accepted so many invitations from colleges, universities and learned societies that his time will be almost entirely taken up from now until the close of the college year. He will appear in Gerrard Hall on the evening of May 7.

We are giving our readers in this issue Coach Curran's criticism of the individual candidates for the Varsity. This criticism is made candidly and frankly, and is intended for the good of the players themselves as well as for the benefit of the students and others who wish to know what our men are doing. It is devoid of both flattery and harshness, and it is hoped that it will serve the purpose for which it has been written.

It gives us much pleasure to announce to the students and to the public generally, that Dr. Bruner, who is scheduled for the next faculty address, will lecture in Gerrard Hall next Thursday evening on "Literary Attractions of the Bible." Dr. Bruner's lectures on Biblical literature have been attracting considerable attention of late and we may be sure he will entertain us for the hour in an interesting and instructive manner. All the students and people of the town are cordially invited to come out and enjoy a pleasant evening.

Our first game of the season will be played on our diamond with the Bingham boys this afternoon. If you want to see how the Varsity has improved, come out and see this game. Don't regard this as a game of no importance and stay away, on that account, but remember our team will be helped by your presence. You haven't had an opportunity to root any since last fall, and no doubt you are out of practice. Come out and begin practice this afternoon. Let's show our men in the very start that we are behind them. As a consequence they will play much better and no doubt it will do you good to exercise your lungs.

After the concert last week Dr. Venable very generously presented the Musical Club with a check of twenty-five dollars. The President has not failed to recognize the good work of Mr. Woollen and his associates, and as evidence of his appreciation he has voluntarily made this donation.

Mr. Woollen has indeed wrought a wonderful change in the Musical Club since his connection with the University, and we cannot speak in too highly of the earnest labor he has put forth in this direction and of the splendid results which have crowned his efforts.

On the evening of the 20th inst. our musicians will give a concert at the State Normal College in Greensboro. We can promise the young ladies of our sister institution that there is a rare treat in store for them.

Instead of presenting its Alma Mater with some piece of classic statuary as has been the custom of several former classes, the present Senior class has decided to offer her, as its token of esteem and affection, a chandelier for the library. This is to cost one hundred and fifty dollars, and is to be given on condition that the library shall be kept open a short while each night.

This seems to us a wise move and one that should meet the approval of students and faculty alike.

Medley.

"She was bread in old Kentucky"
"In the good old summer time," and was returning from "Aunt Dina's quilting party" with "Bill Bailey" "just as the sun went down." "On a Sunday afternoon accompanied by "Mr. Doolie" they sailed down the "Sewanee river" with the "Stars and Stripes" over head to attend the "Georgia camp meeting," at the wedding of "Reuben and the maid" from "Hindoostan" "on the banks of the Wabash" far away. "Just one girl" "My little Georgia Rose," "the girl I left behind" was having "a hot time in the old town that night." She went to the phone and said, "Hello central give me heaven" for if you don't I will have "to telegraph my baby" "in sunny Tennessee." The operator said "If there are any more at home like you" "I'd like to change your name" "So just break the news to mother" and be my "Lady Lou." She hung up the receiver and made those "Goo Goo eyes" at a "coon, coon, coon" who "had laid away the suit of gray to don the union blue." About this time "Mr. Johnson" who had a good excuse, "Turned loose" and broke up the congregation of the "Georgia camp meeting" when he cried "I'm going to live anyhow until I die" the congregation shouted "I don't care if you never come back" and the band played "the world is upside down." Then "Georgia Rose" accompanied by "Whistling Rufus" the operator left the "baggage coach ahead" via "Dixie land" on their "Honey moon to see "The old folks at home."

Locals.

You can't have too many of Giles' shirts.

Will Harris, '06, who was stunned by a base ball is improving very rapidly.

Murray Allen returned to the Hill yesterday. He will continue his course in law.

Prof. Cobb bought three of Giles' shirts. Go thou and do likewise.

W. P. Hoffman who has been sick with typhoid fever for several weeks is out again.

Mr. L. R. Wilson, the Librarian, is in the Infirmary with the appendicitis. He is improving according to the latest accounts.

Frank Caldwell, '06, went to his home in Charlotte last Saturday suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

Quite a number of students went to Durham Wednesday night to see "Hello Bill." They report a good time.

Prof. Howell's new drug store will be open in a few days. He trusts everybody. Why pay cash when your credit is good?

Paul Fogle, '05, returned from Winston Monday.

The Y. M. C. A. delegates have returned from the convention in Winston.

The waiting room of the Southern Railway Station at Chapel Hill has again been thrown open to the public after extensive improvement.

The Philogloical Club of the University was reorganized last Thursday afternoon and will hold regular monthly meetings hereafter. Dr. Thomas Hume is President and Prof. Walter D. Toy, Secretary and Treasurer. Advanced students as well as Professors will present special work at these meetings and this opportunity for training and culture should awaken interest in all.

Robins, '04, spent Sunday in Durham.

Charlie Harris has returned to the Hill to resume his studies.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith has been invited to deliver the literary address at Commencement at Auburn, Ala.

Z. V. Cauble, '03, has accepted a position with the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co., of Birmingham, Ala. He will leave college next week to begin work.

The Fresh-Soph debate will probably come off about Easter.

Dr. Hume has been reelected a member of the State executive committee of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Maddy spent last Saturday in Raleigh.

Horner Winston, '04, who has been North for two weeks having his ear treated, has returned to the Hill.

Cash, the local sprinter is out for a dash!

Mr. N. M. Singletary, of Clarkton, spent Tuesday night with his brother, Mr. G. C. Singletary. Mr. Singletary played tackle on the Varsity foot ball eleven in '99.

Will Carr and Jake Morehead spent Tuesday night in Durham.

Giles is having fine luck with his shirts. About one hundred orders have been taken by him so far. He has been so pushed lately by would-be buyers that he has been compelled to have office hours.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The State Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association met at Winston-Salem last Saturday and adjourned Tuesday. One hundred and six students were present from the colleges of North Carolina. Of this number, the University sent nine. The Convention was the most successful ever held. Several men promised in the State work and also in the National work of the Association were present.

To curtail expense in office work, etc., the Associations of this State and South Carolina were combined with headquarters at Charlotte. The combination has really been in effect for years but there have been separate headquarters for each State. The next State Convention will probably be held in South Carolina.

Encouraging reports were received from all Colleges in increased interest in Bible Study. Better courses are being given by the Associations and these opportunities are being taken up more than ever before.

Gymnasium Exhibition.

Preparations are being made for a gymnasium exhibition on Saturday, March 21 at 4 p. m. Much hard practice is being done for this event and it is hoped a good crowd will turn out for it. The exhibition will be held in the gymnasium [Memorial Hall]. Every one is invited to come out and bring his friends with him. No admission will be charged. The program will consist of drills, pyramids, elephant work, horse, parallel bars, mat work, tumbling, etc. Keep the date in mind.

Track Team.

Track squad will begin out-door work March 23. All candidates should do regular work in the gymnasium until then. Regularity in the work is asked of all men expecting to try for a place.

Death of Captain Whitfield of the Class of 1860.

According to THE WEEKLY MAIL of Kingstree, S. C., Capt. Cicero Whitfield died at Salters on Thursday, February 26, in his 66th year. Capt. Whitfield was born in Lenior County, N. C. in 1838 and graduated from this University with first honor in the Class of 1860.

He was offered the professorship of Latin and Greek but refused to accept the honor in order to join the Confederate army. After the war, in which he did gallant service, he settled in Williamsburg County, S. C., where he engaged in the turpentine business. In 1877 he took up his abode at Salters Depot where he resided until his death.

BINGHAM vs. CAROLINA.

The First Game of the Season Easily Won by Carolina. Score 6 to 0.

The outcome of our game with the William Bingham School of Mebane last Saturday, although we won, as indeed was confidently expected by all, is not at all encouraging and not a little dissatisfaction has been plainly expressed by the supporters of the white and blue. The prevalent opinion is, it seems, that Carolina should have worsted the visitors something like 10 or 15 to 0. And in our judgement this is not an extravagant estimate. We do not wish to be understood however as advocating the principle that we expect impossibilities of our team, and it is trusted that this impression will not be created and given credence; but every one knows, and will not contend for one moment, that Carolina played the ball that she was capable of doing. It is true that the visitors had a fairly good team and played splendid ball, but when it is remembered that they are not in our class and that two of our runs were made by costly errors, the reasonableness of our criticism, harsh though it may seem, is clearly justified. If we are to sustain our former base ball records we must play better and ball, of this there can be no doubt.

The reason for our failure to run up a large score against Bingham is, not that our boys failed to do neat fielding, for as it is known the infield work, especially that of Holt at first and Graham at third, was simply made to order, but because they had not been accustomed to batting left hand pitchers and consequently they could not get their eye on the ball. There is no doubting the fact that the Bingham twirler, though of mediocre ability, struck Carolina like a "steam engine in trousers."

The rooting at the game, including the sonorous voices of Jack Roundtree and Ham Irwin, is deserving of the greatest praise possible. During the whole game, we believe, only three yells were given and then with no life and enthusiasm. We must awake to the realization of our position. College spirit must not be dormant. We have a game to play that must be won and if we don't have the proper spirit behind our team, defeat, rather than victory, will surely be ours.

The game in detail was as follows:

Weatherly for Bingham hits the sphere hard to Cheshire who throws him out at first. Crawford makes a beautiful drive which seems good for a single but the earthly tabernacle of "Billy" Carr moved high in the air and Crawford sighs. Van Esten hit three times at the curves dispensed by Green and when the last strike had been made Noble had the ball. Graham was presented with four balls but was out trying to steal second. Oldham fans. Donnelly walks. Holt laces out the leathers to deep left, which would have been a hit, had the fielder been in his proper place.

Chandler could not for some reason make connection with Green's curves and Stovall could not reach the initial cushion. Chandler, R. was easy. Carr is out from pitcher to first and Cheshire fans and Noble decides to do likewise.

Jenkins is out from pitcher to first and Breggs and Nisser failed to see the ball. Faison hits the ball to right fielder who fumbles and plays ping pong with it. George Green singled in center and went to second, but Faison was out at third. Graham lined out a beautiful single in right field and Green scored. Oldham is out from second base to first and Graham goes to third on passed ball, by a good slide, added one more for Carolina. Donnelly is out from second to first.

In this inning the visitors had their only chance to score but this was spoiled by lack of head work. Weatherly singled in right and went to second on a drive by Crawford to short stop who fumbles. Crawford steals second, and Weatherly who was on third tries to come home as Noble throws to cut Crawford off, but—Billy Carr catches the ball and the Bingham lad dies fluttering around the home plate. Van Esten hit to Graham who fumbled but caught Crawford napping at third. Van Esten was out trying to steal second.

Holt leads off with a beautiful two bagger. Carr hit to short stop who fumbled and every body is safe. Cheshire bites the air. Noble hits to short stop and Holt is out at home.

Chandler, J., Stovall and Chandler, R. were easy numbers. Green thinks walking is better than running. Graham makes a wonderful bunt but is out, Green advanced to third. Oldham welted the hide for two cushions and Green scored. Donnelly makes a hot drive to short who knows it is hot and everybody is safe. Earle Holt took the wilow and smashed out a two bagger and Oldham and Donnelly scored. Carr, Cheshire and Noble retire in fast order.

Jenkins, Breggs and Nissen could not find Green and of course Green couldn't help it. Faison, Green and Graham do not promote the spirit of run getting.

Weatherly, Van Esten and Chandler do not reach first. Oldham bunts to third and is safe at first on error and steals second. Donnelly flies out to Jenkins, and Holt and Carr are out from second to first.

Stovall is out from third to first and Chandler, R. and Jenkins look in vain for sight of the ball. Noble finally shows it to them. Cheshire is out on a deep drive to left field. Noble keeps a good eye and is presented with four balls and steals second. Faison had some trouble in locating the leather. Green singled in center but was out trying to steal second, but Noble scored.

Briggs hit to right field in a bucket and Nisser and Weatherly are troubled exceedingly at their inability to see Green.

Resolutions of Respect.

By request we publish the following resolutions of respect, drawn up by the teachers of Davie County in memory of Miss Elva May Abernethy whose death was announced in The Tar Heel some weeks ago:

Be it resolved:

1st. That we, the teachers of Davie County, North Carolina, do hereby express our heartfelt sympathy for the bereaved family and friends of our deceased friend and co-worker in the schools of our county, Miss Elva May Abernethy, of Chapel Hill, N. C.

2nd. That in Miss Abernethy's untimely end we lose one of our best teachers and most interested and energetic workers for the cause of education in our county. She was not only a worker in her own school but took an active part in our Teachers' Association, shirking no duty and using her best influence for the advancement of the profession she had given her life to.

3rd. During her short stay among us, Miss Abernethy has left a lasting impression upon all who knew her, as a lady of excellent ability and exemplary Christian character.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon a page of the Minutes of our Teacher's Association. That they be published in our county papers and the "Chapel Hill News." Finally: That a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

OAK RIDGE vs. CAROLINA.

Second Game of the Season. Won Easily by Carolina. Score 13 to 3.

The second game played by Carolina this season took place on the University diamond Wednesday afternoon, the visitors this time coming from Oak Ridge. The game was interesting from start to finish, and was enjoyed by a large crowd.

First Inning: Warren hits to Cheshire and is out at first. Bennett hits to Carr fumbles and the batter reaches first. Cook repeats the performance. Ross hits to pitcher who retires Bennett at third. Markham gets his base on balls. Matthews retires the side on a pop fly to short.

Graham strikes out. Oldham hits to second and reaches first on second's error. Donnelly hits to left field for three bases scoring Oldham. Holt hits fly to pitcher. Carr is out on a pop-fly to short stop.

Second Inning: Holhouser out on a pop-fly to pitcher. Holt hits safe to center. Lyon strikes out and Noble throws Holhouser out at first on the same play.

Green hits a slow one to second and beats it out. Cheshire sacrifices. Noble hits to left for two bases and scores Green. Hart is out on a pop-fly to second. Graham gets hit by pitched ball and takes his base. Noble scores and Graham goes to second on Oldham's hit to left which is handled slowly. Donnelly hits to second who fumbles, and Graham scores and Oldham goes to third. Holt is out on a fly to catcher.

Third Inning: Warren hits to third who throws wild and the runner is safe. Bennett sacrifices him to second. Cook hits safely to center. Warren scores on Noble's wild throw to third and Cook goes to third. Ross hits to left for two bases scoring Cook. Markham hits to second and is thrown out at first. Ross goes to third on the same play. Matthews is out on fly to center.

Carr is out on a fly to center. Green hits safe to right and Cheshire hits safe over third placing Green on second. Noble reaches first on on second's error filling all the bases. Hart hits through short stop, scoring Green and Cheshire. Hart steals second. Graham on fielder's choice reaches first but Noble dies at the home plate. Oldham hits safely scoring Hart and Graham goes to third. Oldham goes to second on a passed ball. Donnelly hits heavily for three bases scoring Graham and Oldham. Hart hits to short stop who throws him out at first.

Fourth Inning: Holhouser hits to Cheshire who covers his ground fast and throws the runner out at first. Holt strikes out, Noble fumbles the ball but throws him out at first.

Just at present, there is much doubt as to whether we shall have a Yackety Yack published this year. Owing to a misunderstanding between the editor-in-chief and the representatives on the editorial board from the literary societies, the business managers have notified Stone and Co., of Roanoke, Va., to stop the publication of the book until further instructions. This rupture comes at a most inopportune season and will doubtless be productive of results which will prove more serious than a superficial view of the situation would seem to indicate.

The present conditions impartially stated are as follows: the two literary societies and the fraternities have cooperated to publish the annual—two-thirds of the expense of publication to be borne jointly by the literary societies, and one-third by the fraternities. According to the stipulations drawn up by the societies and fraternities, the editor-in-chief comes from the fraternities and the two business managers come from the societies. The stipulations also say that the editor-in-chief and the business managers shall constitute a managing board. Now the editors from the societies have instructed their business managers to learn what material has been accepted, or in other words they simply wish to know what is going into the book. The editor-in-chief has refused to let them know; consequently, the business managers, not wishing to become responsible for the financial part of the book without knowing what is to be published, have stopped its publication until this question is settled.

It is to be hoped that this matter may be satisfactorily adjusted at the earliest possible date. So far the work has been progressing finely and it may be truly said that the Yackety Yack of this year gave promise of being the best annual ever gotten out by the University. Much of the material has already gone to the publishers, the remainder is ready, and, according to contract, should reach them by next Wednesday.

The editor-in-chief should call a meeting of the board so as to determine as soon as possible what is to be done. Let us hope for an adjustment that shall be satisfactory to all.

At last the time and place for holding the Johns Hopkins debate have been decided upon. This contest will take place at Chapel Hill May 1st. This is the time the Baltimoreans have suggested, and tho' it is not exactly satisfactory to our debaters, yet, out of courtesy to the visitors, they have agreed to it. The place, we think, is the proper one. Many, it is true, wish to have the debate in Raleigh, but we have nothing whatever to gain by going there. Besides, the proper place to entertain one's guest is at home, however humble that home may be.

When our representatives returned last year they spoke in the highest terms of the hospitality accorded them in the Monumental City. Now, remembering that North Carolinians have never been outdone in hospitality, let us prepare in time to receive the Hopkins debaters in royal style and greet them with a glad smile of kindly welcome. In the meantime Messrs. Everett and Robins, we may rest assured, are going to prepare to meet them at Philippi.

We are indeed sorry to have to give up from our editorial board a man who has stood by us so faithfully since our connection with THE TAR HEEL. Mr. R. M. Harper, our Local Editor, has been obliged to resign on account of weak eyes. We take this opportunity of expressing to Mr. Harper our appreciation of his labors and of thanking him for the service he has rendered.

As Mr. Harper's successor the board has chosen Mr. J. K. Wilson, of the class of '05. The high stand Mr. Wilson has taken in college, his popularity, and way of doing things lead us to believe the choice has fallen on the man for the place. We gladly welcome him to our editorial board and bid him partake freely of all the joys and labors pertaining thereto.

Resolutions of Sympathy by the Alpha Theta Phi Society.

At its first meeting this year the Alpha Theta Phi Society adopted the following set of resolutions:

Whereas, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom and foresight has seen fit to remove so soon from our midst our honored fellow-member, Henry Farrar Linscott; be it

Resolved: First, that while bowing with unquestioning submission to the divine will, and while our hearts are saddened, we are grateful that the memory of him will still be with us.

Second, that we recognize the fact that in him we have had an exemplification of ripe manhood, honor, and devotion to duty and we deeply deplore his death.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be tendered to the family of the deceased with tenderest sympathy of each and every member of the Society and that copies be furnished the University Magazine and Tar Heel with a request to publish.

McRae, who was a member of the past Legislature, has returned to college to resume his study of law.

The Sophomores have elected Otho Ross manager of their base ball team. They are practicing every afternoon now and as soon as enough players get together a captain will be elected by them. Their battery is composed of Phillips and Singletary.

The view agents and the book agents have begun paying hotel bills now and are prepared to show summer gold mines to the student who will but take advantage of the opportunity to sell their wares.

Harris, of Raleigh, who was in the Law class last fall, has returned to the Hill to resume his law studies. Since the holidays Mr. Harris has been acting as reporter for the News and Observer.

Buy Giles' shirts from the factory and save middleman's profits.

About fifty cart loads of cinders have just been put on the track around the Mary Ann Smith building to make it better for our track team this spring.

An interesting meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the Chapel Tuesday night. Three of the delegates who attended the State convention at Winston-Salem last week, Messrs. Chas. Ross, Judd and Harper, gave five-minute accounts of the convention from the intellectual, social and spiritual view-points, respectively. About a hundred men were present. The whole meeting was but half an hour long and yet it was one of the most helpful and definite held this year.

This year ought to witness the best class teams the University has had in several years, for probably next year most of our old players, who are now Seniors, will not return. Those in good practice this year will have a fine chance to make the Varsity next year. The scrub team and class nines, it is hardly necessary to state, are the places to get in this good trim.

Will Graham has resigned as captain of the Junior base ball team, and is now catching for the Senior nine. Graham was a Junior before Christmas but he will graduate with the class of 1903.

Dr. Bruner will lecture at West End Sunday morning.

Dr. Battle on last Saturday night delivered a lecture before St. Mary's School, by invitation of Rev. Dr. Bratton, on the connection between North Carolina and English history. The institution is flourishing. Dr. Battle reports the young ladies as excellent listeners and enthusiastic "clappers."

The U. N. C. Musical Association left for Greensboro yesterday. They gave a concert at the State Normal College last night.

Lecture by Dr. Bruner.

The regular faculty lecture for this week was delivered in the Chapel Thursday evening before an appreciative audience by Dr. Bruner on "The Literary Attractions of the Bible." For one hour Dr. Bruner handled this subject in an interesting and instructive manner. After discussing briefly some of the serious faults of the early translators "who chopped up those wonderful pieces of literature into chapters and verses which did not belong to the original," the speaker proceeded to discuss the peculiar literary charms of the Bible, showing its unity of purpose thro' all its masterpieces, its universal interest, application and influence, and illustrated his points by happily chosen "passages of greatest beauty and stately grandeur."

Then after a brief discussion of Bible history and biography he took up the subject of oratory and showed that "inspired eloquence is well represented throughout the entire Bible."

The poetry of the Bible was next treated and in this discussion the lecturer said that one-third of the Bible has been given us in poetic form. And this was only natural, for "from the earliest times, music and poetry were cultivated among the Hebrews" and the spirit which fostered these arts permeated their whole life and history. Lyric epic, and dramatic elements are all found, though their form and metrical arrangement are different from those of modern literature.

"The wisdom literature of the Bible," he continued, "corresponds in the main, to the philosophy and science of other literature." Under this division come the proverb, the maxim, the essay, the epigram, and the sonnet, all of which were aptly illustrated by characteristic passages.

An adequate and fitting account of this lecture would require more space than is at our disposal, and therefore, we have had to give a brief, running account of it, touching here and there on the more striking points presented. Suffice it to say that it was scholarly, instructive and highly enjoyed.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith has been asked to become a contributor to "Christendom," a weekly magazine of the general type of The Outlook and Independent, which will be published in Chicago. Dr. Shailer Mathews, of the University of Chicago, its editor, promises that "it shall be in every way the peer of anything now published." It will make its first appearance in April.

CAROLINA WINS.

In an Exciting and Hotly Contested Game Tuesday, 24th, the Tar Heels win from Lafayette by a Score of 3 to 2.

In spite of a wet diamond, the first game with Lafayette was interesting throughout. It was evident at the start that Carolina had met a team worthy of her mettle, and at no time did the result seem sure. Each side played snappy ball but Carolina won by a score of 3 to 2.

The game by innings was as follows:

First inning: Hubley, for Lafayette, knocks the ball to Graham, who throws him out at first. Stitzer hits to left field and steals second. Irvin puts the ball in the same place and Stitzer goes to third. Ernst is caught out by Oldham but Stitzer scores. Reader fails to reach first.

Graham and Oldham knock out to first. Donnelly walks. Holt hits to short stop who misses and Donnelly goes to third. Holt is thrown out at third but Donnelly goes home.

Second inning: Launt walk Johnston bunts but is out at first. Launt goes to second. Newberry hits to shortstop and reaches second on a wild throw, Launt going to third. Wack and Hubley are out from pitcher to first.

Carr hits to Reader and is out at first. Green fans and Cheshire knocks a fly to third.

Third inning: Stitzer knocks to Graham who throws him out at first. Irvin knocks to Cheshire and is out. Ernst gets four balls. Reader fails to reach first.

Noble is hit by pitched ball and takes first base. Hart bunts out but advances Noble to second. Graham is out on a pop-fly to second. Oldham is put out.

Fourth inning: Launt has a "bad eye" for Hart's strikes. Johnston is put out at first. Newberry hits and goes to first but Noble throws him out at second.

Donnelly hits to right field and steals second. Holt fails to reach first. Carr flies out to right field but Donnelly makes another run. Green knocks to pitcher who throws him out at first.

Fifth inning: Wack flies out to Oldham. Hubley is out from Cheshire to Holt. Stitzer flies out to Donnelly.

Cheshire puts a hit in center. Noble is out on a fly to second. Hart and Graham strike out.

Sixth inning: Irvin flies to Green. Ernst puts a hit in center. Reader hits to left field and reaches second but Ernst is put out at home. Launt knocks to short stop who throws wild to Holt, and Reader scores. Johnston is put out at first.

Oldham singles a hit in center. Donnelly bunts, missing first, but advances Oldham to second. Holt is out from short stop to first.

Carr strikes out.

Seventh inning: Newberry is out from second to first. Wack knocks a foul fly to Holt. Hubley goes to first. Irvin is hit by ball and Hubley advances to second. Ernst is hit by ball and fills the bases. Reader is caught out by Bill Carr.

Green and Cheshire are put out at first. Noble hits to center. Hart puts another in right field and Noble goes to third. Graham hits and Noble scores. Oldham knocks to short stop and Graham is thrown out at second.

Eighth inning: Launt, Johnston and Wack fail to reach first.

Donnelly, Holt and Carr do the same.

Ninth inning: Hubley flies to Holt. Stitzer walks. Irvin hits and Stitzer goes to third. Irvin is put out at first. Ernst flies out to Graham.

Historical Society.

The Historical Society held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night in Gerrard Hall. An interesting paper, by Mr. G. V. Roberts, on the "Klu-Klux-Klan," was presented to the society. The origin and growth of the order was thoroughly treated, with a vivid insight into its workings. Dr. Battle, with his always helping hand, added some amusing and interesting points in connection with the Klu-Klux as applied around Chapel Hill.

"The Eve of the Revolution" was the title of a brief offered by Dr. C. L. Raper. The abstract was taken from Dr. Raper's new book, which is now under final preparation for the press. A clear idea of the pre-Revolutionary feeling of the Carolina colonists could be gathered from the Doctor's short talk. We look forward with pleasant anticipation to the research work of Dr. Raper and wish him a neat recompense.

Owing to a "short circuit" the society adjourned on account of darkness.

LAFAYETTE VICTORIOUS.

Wednesday's Game With Lafayette Won by the Visitors by the Score of 5 to 3.

The series of games with Lafayette proved no exception to the rule that Carolina divides honors with her visitors.

First inning: Stitzer gets a free pass to first. Hubley hits safe and goes to second. Irvin hits safe, scoring Stitzer and Hubley. Ernst hits to third, who throws runner out at first, Irvin going to second. Reader singles to left putting Irvin on third. Launt flies out to Oldham, Irvin scoring after ball is caught. Newberry strikes out. Graham strikes out. Oldham gets base on balls. Donnelly is out on fly to center. Oldham is put out while stealing second.

Second inning: Hawk hits to Cheshire and is out at first. Johnston hits to Graham and is out at first. Stitzer is out on high fly to Holt.

Holt hits safe to center. Carr, by a sacrifice hit, advances Holt to second. Holt steals third. Green strikes out. Cheshire hits to short who retires runner at first.

Third inning: Hubley hits to Green and is out at first. Ervin pops up to Carr. Ernst hits to Graham and is safe on Holt's error, but is retired while trying to steal second.

Noble hits to pitcher and is out at first. Hart flies out to left. Graham hits grounder to first and is out.

Fourth inning: Reader hits to Carr and is out at first. Launt hits to Carr and is out at first. Newberry strikes out.

Oldham hits to short stop, who fumbles and runner is safe. Donnelly pops up to third. Holt pops up to first. Oldham steals second. Carr hits to center for two bases, scoring Oldham. Green hits to second and is out at first.

Fifth inning: Hawk hits to pitcher and is out at first. Johnston is out on foul fly to left. Stitzer strikes out.

With the Societies.

In the Phi. Society the query for last Saturday was, "Resolved, That local taxation should be enforced for the benefit of the rural school districts of North Carolina." The negative won and Mr. B. F. Huske was best debater.

The question in the Di. Society was, "Resolved, That the national government should have the power to compel, and should compel, the settlement of all labor troubles of national importance through a board of arbitration." The committee decided in favor of the affirmative and reported Mr. C. Ross as best speaker.

The following men from the Pharmacy Class have applied for license before the State Board this week: LeGwyn, Bullock, Bateman, Austin, Hollowell, Bass, Davenport, Stribling, Byrd, Snuggs, Kluttz, Hood, Webb, Tugnell, Pemberton and Gorham.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

It will be of interest to all friends of the Yackety Yack to know that the misunderstanding which occurred last week has been settled and that the publication of the annual is now going on.

The trouble arose from a misinterpretation of the third clause of the stipulations which read: "The editor-in-chief and the two business managers shall constitute a managing board." The editors from the literary societies maintained that this meant these three should act as a committee to decide upon what should go into the annual, whereas the editor-in-chief claimed no such interpretation was to be understood. And so the hitch came.

When the business managers, on the part of the societies, requested the editor-in-chief to show them the book in its final form he refused to do so, he claims, because he thought they demanded him to turn over the book to them after he had edited it and have nothing more to do with it. He also says that he did not object to letting any one of the editors see the book at any time. Evidently Mr. Woollen misunderstood the request of the society editors and, according to his own statement they misunderstood him. But the matter has been settled, and it was done by substituting for the above named clause the following: "It shall be the duty of the editor-in-chief to edit all material for the annual and submit the book in its final form to the entire board for approval." This amendment fortunately met with the approval of the whole board. It not only relieves the business managers of the duty and responsibility, which, according to one interpretation devolved upon them but it also secures to both sides the rights which the theirs.

The only game that will be played on our diamond between now and April 20 will occur next Friday when Carolina will cross bats with Gettysburg. All who avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing this game may be sure of seeing a good one. It may be of interest to know that Plank, a brother of the famous Philadelphia pitcher of last year, will pitch the game for the visiting team. It is said that his speed and curves are almost equal to those of his more famous brother.

We take pleasure in announcing that the next faculty lecture will be delivered in Gerrard Hall next Thursday evening by Dr. Chas. Baskerville. Dr. Baskerville will speak on "One of Life's Problems." This is the last lecture scheduled in the faculty series for this season. Let no student fail to hear it. We may be sure the speaker will give us something worth hearing.

Dr. Lewis on "Air."

Dr. R. H. Lewis, of Raleigh, delivered a most pleasing and practical lecture here Thursday evening on "Air." He treated his subject first in its relation to and action upon the internal body organ and then as a prerequisite to good health.

It was the latter point to which he directed special attention, and upon which he placed great emphasis. He drew many happy illustrations from his ready reading and his wide personal experience, and made entirely practical applications. He advocates air, fresh and plenty of it, as a medicine in itself, and the greatest necessity for a healthy vigorous body and a clear mind.

In speaking to the students directly, he appealed to them to take a great deal of exercise; and begged them to indulge in some out-of-door sport—one in which the mind and body work together.

The speaker's advice on correct ventilation for school-rooms has more weight than words and should make us all more attentive and ought to be applied in the dormitory, at home and abroad. If more pains were taken in securing a liberal supply of fresh air, consumption, as the Doctor said, would be greatly reduced everywhere.

Dr. Lewis' address abounded in good humor and his speech gave expression to a genuine sincerity of purpose.

Dr. Kemp P. Battle in his recent lecture at St. Mary's on the connection between North Carolina and English history, gave the origin of the phrase, "You might as well go to hell as to Halifax." Halifax is a thriving town in Yorkshire, England. Away back in the middle ages a priest fell in love with a beautiful maiden of spotless character. She refused to marry him. He murdered her and, cutting off her head, hid it in a tree. The head mouldered away but the hair grew into the bark. This was, of course, regarded as a miracle and pilgrimages were yearly made to the spot, called in Saxon, Hali, holy, and fox-hair. A town grew up around it and, on account of its sanctity, was granted special privileges. Its laws were very severe. Any one stealing over twelve pence had his head cut off by a machine long ante-dating the guillotine. There is a dangerous river not far off, called Hull. Hence arose the mock prayer:

From Hull, hell and Halifax,
Good Lord, deliver us!

THE BROWN-CAROLINA GAME.

The Rhode Island Boys Defeat Carolina in an Interesting Game —By a Score of 4 to 1.

It was an ideal day for the national game yesterday. The Brown boys from Providence, although a long way from home, put up one of the best games seen on Carolina's diamond this year. The game was full of exciting crises. The big fellow Lynch proved himself a puzzle which the Tar Heels were unable to solve. Four to one tells the story, woeful as it is.

After an exchange of yells by Carolina's rooters and the Brown men, Carolina took the field with "Peck" Hart in the box.

Pattee flies out to Green. Gray hits to Carr and is out at first. Clark out to Cheshire for first.

Graham strikes out. Oldham does likewise. Donnelly gets a base on balls. Holt up. Donnelly steals second, Holt put out by Short to first.

Second inning: Gray hits pop fly to Holt. Clark walks. Metcalf hit by pitched ball. Barry hits foul fly to left field, Donnelly making long running catch. Abbott beats the wind in vain.

Noble strikes the air three times in vain. Hart plays his own game, finding for the first time the big pitcher for a single to right field. Graham hits to pitcher. Hart caught at second. Oldham fans again.

Third inning: Metcalf is out from second to first. Barry flies out to Green. Abbott hits safely over second. Penly up. Abbott steals second. Penly out, Short to first.

Carr strikes out. Lynch seems to be a marvel. Green hits to third and is out at first.

Fourth inning: Belding out to Holt. Lynch, the big pitcher, up. He disappoints the spectators, being a victim to Hart's curves. Pattee hits to Graham and of course is out at first.

Donnelly out from second to first. Holt does likewise. The game is a pitcher's battle royal.

Fifth inning: Penlev hits fly to right center. Oldham makes a phenomenal run, saving a two-bagger. Belding hits a single over first, but Holt is equal to the occasion and robs him of it. Lynch hits safe down third base line. Pattee flies out to Green.

Green fans. Cheshire fans. Noble fans. This was a fanning inning.

Sixth inning: Gray gets first on bunt. Clark bunts a sacrifice out at first. Hart has wild pitch. Gray going to third. Metcalf singles, scoring Gray. Barr singles. Abbott bunts and is out at first. Penley out, Hart to Holt. The game is intensely interesting.

Hart fans, Graham fans. Oldham singles. Oldham steals second. Donnelly hits for two bags, scoring Oldham. Holt out short to first. Score, 1 to 1.

Seventh inning: Belding out to Holt. Lynch hits two-bagger, and tries to stretch into three but is thrown out at third. Pattee bunts and gets first on Hart's error. Pattee runs over second and is out between second and third.

Carr is out, second to first.

Green hits to third and is safe on Penley's error. Green out trying to steal second. Cheshire out, second to first.

Eighth inning: Gray gets first on Cheshire's error. Clark fans. Metcalf singles. Barry flies out to Donnelly. Abbott hits what seems to be an easy chance, but the ball makes an ugly bound over Carr's head, scoring Gray. Penley hits to Graham, who attempts to throw Abbott out at second, and Metcalf scores. Belding hits to Graham and is safe on bad throw. Abbott scores. Lynch out to Holt.

Noble is out from pitcher to first. Hart fans. Graham gets a base hit. Oldham fans.

Ninth inning: Pattee flies out to Green. Gray singles over second. Clark walks. Metcalf flies out. Barry flies out to Green.

Donnelly is out from second to first. Holt is out from third to first. Carr is out from pitcher to first.

The Atlantic Educational Journal, of Richmond, Va., for March has reprinted Dr. Thomas Hume's article of four years ago on "The Literary Study of the Bible," and made it introductory to a special series on improved methods of dealing with the great Book in Church and School. We have from every side tributes to the value and influence of the plan of our University course in the Literary Study of the Bible.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, president of the western division of the Modern Language Association, who is widely known as one of the most delightful lecturers in the South, has accepted Miss McClintock's invitation to deliver the address before the graduating class in June. For several years he was professor of English at Louisiana State University, and when he recently left Louisiana to go to the University of Carolina his loss was much regretted. Last summer he lectured on Shakespeare and Tennyson at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, and there his popularity was unprecedented. Altogether we feel that we are most fortunate in securing one so able and distinguished as is Dr. Smith.—Columbia [S. C.] Daily State, Correspondence from Presbyterian College for Women.

CAROLINA AGAINST BROWN.

In the Second Game with Brown University Carolina Comes Off Conquerer.

In the game between Carolina and Brown University, played at Greensboro last Saturday, Carolina more than made good her losses of the day before. The score by innings was as follows:

First inning: Patti goes out from Cheshire to Holt. Gray thrown out at first by Green. Clark killed at same bag by Carr.

Graham gets hit and goes to first. Oldham singles and Graham goes to second. Graham by fumble of third baseman makes third and Oldham steals second. Donnelly gets base on balls and fills bags. All three score on Holt's beautiful two-bagger to right center. Carr flies out to second baseman. Holt goes to third on wild pitch and scores on Giles' out at first base. Cheshire hits two-bagger by third baseman and was thrown out in attempting to steal third. Score 4 to 0 in favor of Carolina.

Second inning: Metcalf gets two-bagger over second base, and goes to third on passed ball. Barry strikes out. Abbott flies out to left field and Metcalf scores. Penley gets a hit over third and steals second. Belding goes out on an easy fly to Cheshire.

Noble gets a hit between first and second but is thrown out at first by fast fielding. Green lines out to short stop. Graham gets a hit over second but dies at first as Oldham gets out from Gray to Belding.

Third inning. Graham makes a beautiful stop of Welsh's hot grounder but throws wild to first. Patti hits to Green, who throws Welsh out at second. Gray goes out from Green to Holt, Patti going to second. Clark singles to center scoring Patti. Metcalf is out at first by Cheshire. Donnelly gets hit and goes to second on Holt's base on balls. Both advance a bag on a passed ball. Carr strikes out. Giles gets base on balls, filling the bags. Cheshire hits stiff grounder to Penley, who lets it pass and Donnelly scores. With the bases full Noble gets hit and Holt walks home. Green hits through second baseman, and Giles scores. Graham strikes out. Oldham's ball to short is missed and also fumbled by left fielder, allowing Cheshire and Noble to score. Green is thrown out trying to reach third. Score, Carolina, 9, Brown 2.

Fourth inning: Whiting takes Welsh's place. Barry hits liner to Green and is safe at first, steals second and goes to third on passed ball. Abbott flies out to Carr. Penley gets two-bagger over Cheshire's head but is thrown out at third, Barry scoring. Belding goes out on foul fly to Holt. Donnelly goes out from short to first. Holt gets base on balls but is thrown out trying to steal second. Carr goes out on grounder to Belding. Score, Carolina 9, Brown 3.

Fifth inning: Whiting hits for two sacks in right field and steals third. Patti goes to second on Carr's error. He and Whiting score on Gray's hit over short. Gray is thrown out at second. Clark gets a hit over short and steals second. Metcalf flies out to center field, and Barry does the same to right field.

After two heavy strikes at the ball, Giles succeeds in putting the ball over the right field fence, and makes a tour of the diamond amidst much applause. Cheshire singles and goes to second on Baney's error. Noble strikes out. Green hits to short-stop, who throws out Cheshire at third. Graham pops out an easy one to short. Score, Carolina 10, Brown 5.

Sixth inning: Abbot gets hit by pitched ball, out trying to steal second. Penley gets safe at first by Green's fumble of his grounder and scores on Belding's two base hit to right field. Whiting lines out to Oldham, who catches Belding off second.

Oldham hits to pitcher, who finds it too hot to handle and Oldham is safe at first and steals second. Donnelly is thrown out at first. Holt reaches first. Oldham making third on Patti's error. Holt steals second. Carr gets a two-base hit over center-fielder's head, scoring Oldham, and sends Holt to third. Giles is thrown out at first, Holt scoring. Cheshire is thrown out at first by Gray. Score, Carolina 12, Brown 6.

Seventh inning: Patti flies out to Holt. Gray reaches first on error and goes to second on passed ball. Clark goes by grounder to first. Metcalf gets two-bagger in left center and Gray scores. Green throws Barry out at first. Noble strikes out. Green fans. Graham punches the air three times in a vain effort to reach Hatch's speedy curves. Score, Carolina 12, Brown 7.

Eighth inning: Abbot knocks easy grounder to Holt. Green throws out Henley at first. Holt fumbles Belding's grounder, but Hatch retires side with liner to Donnelly.

Oldham flies out to center field. Donnelly strikes out. Holt gets a two-bagger in center field but is put out for cutting bases. Score, Carolina 12, Brown 7.

Ninth inning: Patti flies out to Oldham. Gray is thrown out at first. Clark hits between first and second and Metcalf finishes the game by striking out. Score, Carolina 12, Brown 7.

Struck out: Green, 2; Hatch, 4; Welsh, 2. Two-base hits: Metcalf 2, Penley, Whiting and Belding, 1 each, Holt 2, Carr and Cheshire, 1 each. Bases on balls, Welsh 3, Whiting, 1. Hits by pitched ball, Green 1, Welsh, 2. Home run by Giles. Hits, Carolina 9, Brown 11. Errors, Carolina 5, Brown 7. Umpire, Snuggs, of Oak Ridge.

"ONE OF LIFE'S PROBLEMS."

An Illustrated Lecture on Water by Dr. Chas. Baskerville.

A crowded hall greeted Dr. Baskerville on Thursday evening in his address on "Water," and those who heard him enjoyed a popular presentation from a scientific view.

He said in brief:

"The fundamentals of man's comfort and happiness are health and moral well-being. Human welfare is affected by four important factors: air, food, drink, and protection from the weather."

It was to one phase of the third hygienic item, namely—water, that he asked attention.

Continuing he said, "Water is absolutely necessary for the world's existence and continuance as a habitable globe. Three quarters of animal and plant bodies are composed of water. It forms a part of the structure of life's engine; it serves as a porter for those delicate machines and conveys away the exhausted fuel. * * *

"Your indulgent thought is invited to water from a sanitary point of view, the sources, of the contamination, the ill resulting from its contamination, and its scientific principles involved and their practicable application, whereby such ill is removed entirely or minimized in effect."

"Disease results from the derangement of vital functions. While this disruption may be brought about in many ways, it is recognized that agencies introduced into the system by drinking water, as poisonous water for example, are fruitful causes of embarrassment in the performance of life's processes."

The speaker here quoted from the President of the National Health Society of England, who states that "Cholera is a filthy disease, carried by a filthy people to filthy places; it only develops where it finds dirty places, and the dirty habit of drinking polluted water and living on polluted soil. * * In India, for instance, where the people deposit all ordure on the surface of the ground, not having, in most cases, even the pretence of a pit or cesspool; and where the people drink the water in which they have just bathed, cholera is never absent. And yet in this same India the people, who adopt new modes of living with their change of religion, through the influence of Christian missionaries, escape the Cholera as completely as if there were no such disease."

At this point the lights were turned out and the lantern operators began their work. As the lecturer continued his points were fittingly illustrated with a series of varied and interesting canvas views.

"What is it that causes water to be injurious?" was one of the first questions asked. A question the speaker answered giving the causes for contamination of water and a description of bacteria in water as a consequence of contamination. He urged especial attention to the responsibility of the physician in looking out for the sanitary betterment and hence general welfare of the people of his city or community, asserting that it was the duty of the physician and even instruction, to teach the people to regard a strict observance of sanitary laws."

The purification of water, from nature's natural systems to man's model methods, was treated in word and picture. Statistics from unquestionable authorities were often used to show the remarkable decrease in sickness and in loss of life on account, of improved sanitary conditions and proper drinking water.

In conclusion, by the way, the speaker announced that the University looked forward to having soon a nicely equipped gymnasium, with an expert in Hygiene at its head. When such a long needed and valuable addition to the college is made, a course in hygiene will be offered and required in every course scheduled.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

At last, after a delay of over two weeks, the March number of our Magazine has made its appearance. This delay, however, has not been due to non-performance of duty on the part of the editors, but to the tardiness of the engravers in furnishing a cut for the frontispiece. The issue as a whole is good. It contains some good fiction and a goodly amount of thoughtful solid matter. A review of the Magazine will be found in another column.

A new feature at the game yesterday afternoon was the music by the University Brass Band. Ten of the University's talented musicians have organized a brass band under the leadership of Mr. Chas. T. Woollen. These men have purchased four hundred dollars worth of instruments and now meet regularly for practice. Perhaps we should say, though not by way of apology, that the band, having been organized only about one week, has had very little practice up to the present time. But judging from the music rendered yesterday afternoon one would suppose that its members had been practicing for weeks or months.

A brass band at a ball game, though common elsewhere, is a sort of novelty at the University—all because the University has never had a brass band of her own, at least not in the memory of the present generation of students. It is our duty as students of the University, one and all, to encourage these young men, not only for the sake of encouraging the development of musical talent within the University, but for the sake of the team as well. "Music hath charms" for ball players as well as for spectators, and if a chorus of college yells will inspire players to greater effort, what is likely to be the effect of college yells seconded by a brass band? If music such as we had yesterday, can be had at all games we may reasonably expect that the attendance upon the games will be increased, and increased attendance means increased support for the home team.

Review of the Magazine.

Perhaps the editors and contributors, if no one else, will be interested in the impression which a rather hasty perusal of the March number of the Magazine leaves upon a friendly eye.

The opening article, a sketch by Mr. Dameron on the life of William Rufus King, is timely and interesting. Upon this centennial of Mr. King's graduation, many other sons of his Alma Mater go out in life to discharge their duties as faithfully as did he. We regret that the article does not give a little more detail, but the quotations at the close serve for an estimate of Mr. King's popularity and as a side-light upon his character.

In the department of fiction there are two stories that we think are better than the ordinary. The first of these, "Sandy's Stroke of Policy," we read with interest. The mountain "moon-shiner" with whom the story deals is a character whose wits have been so long whetted by necessity that he has become a marvel of shrewdness. We think the author brings out Sandy's character very creditably. The other story that we like is "In Extremis." We think this is as good a plot, as interesting a crisis, and as skilful a solution, as we have seen in any college story. What a relief when we found the climax was not going to be either a quarrel or a wedding! We confess we did not get greatly interested in "The Wait of Aphrodite." We could not get enthusiastic over the Sophomore's soliloquies, even though they were adorned with "cuss" words. Maybe it was our fault, but we were not much agitated either when "Aphrodite" so poetically yielded herself to lover's embrace, or when she so tragically withdrew. Of course, it is said that this old, old story is always interesting, but we doubt if one can afford to write a love story, especially with an engagement as a climax—unless, indeed, that one be a genius; if he is, of course, he can do anything.

Dr. Hume's contribution on "The French Huguenots and Some of Their Family Connections," while it is an article of general interest, will, we doubt not, find an especially responsive chord in the sentiments of those who trace their lineage to "this bright, facile, yet earnest race."

In "Goodnight" we think we think we can feel the pulse of genuine poetry. We say "genuine poetry." Of course we make no pretense of being able to define what that is. We are even so skeptical as to believe no one else can. But whatever it is, we don't find it very often in college magazines. We have only one specimen in this number.

Mr. Stewart's speech on the Tariff, will be of interest both in itself and because of the occasion and result of its delivery.

We like the "Sketches." When we strike a good one it doesn't take long to get it, and when we strike a poor one it doesn't take long to get through with it. We should like to see this department considerably enlarged. Comparatively few students can write long stories that are worth their space, but there are a great number who could easily contribute readable sketches.

The editor-in-chief delivers a very serious sort of lecture to his fellow editors of other college magazines upon the folly of their attempting to discuss such weighty subjects as "The Income Tax," and "The President's Southern Policy," and then happily harmonizing practice with precept, proceeds to give them an object lesson by writing a learned editorial upon "Peg-top Trousers and Narrow Neck-ties."

We are glad to see the Exchange Department reappear. We hope this will not be made too lengthy, but that it will be confined strictly to those exchanges that contain articles of some especial worth.

We are glad to see such persistent efforts on the part of the editors to improve the Magazine.

CAROLINA VS. GETTYSBURG.

Yesterday's Game Characterized by General Listlessness. Players Opposed by Strong Wind.

Yesterday's game was characterized by errors, wild throws, kicking and no rooting.

Hart, for Carolina, pitched a magnificent game, allowing only three hits. His support was ragged at times, and worse than ragged at other times. In the first inning Gettysburg crossed the plate twice when not a single hit had been made off Hart. They scored two more in the second with one dinky hit to their credit.

The wind was blowing a full-fledged gale, and to play ball at all was a difficult problem.

There was absolutely no rooting until Carolina had practically won the game. This fact shows a sad lack of spirit. The bleachers and the grand stand were as silent as "Uncle Ben's Gray Mule," until they were requested by the team through Ham Irwin to do some rooting. The rooter's business is to cheer under adverse circumstances.

The band played at intervals during the game. The music was enjoyed and appreciated by players and spectators alike. The following is a report of the game by innings:

First inning: Carolina takes the field. Rowe goes to first on Smathers' error. White bunts and goes to first on Holt's wild throw. Rowe goes to third. White steals second. Floto hits to Donnelly who throws home too late to catch Rowe. Rinard hits to Cheshire who fumbles. White scores, but Rinard is out. Seiber fans.

Giles out second to first. Oldham beats the air in vain. Donnelly cannot connect with the leather. Score, Gettysburg, 2; Carolina, 0. Second inning: Plank goes to first on Carr's wild throw. Plank steals second. Bingaman hits to centre field. James hits to short stop who throws to Smathers, who muffs and Plank scores. James is out at second. Fisher bunts and Bingaman scores. Rowe fans out. White hits to right field but is thrown out at first.

Holt is out third to first. Carr hits between right and centre. Cheshire hits between second and first. Smathers hits to left field, scoring Carr, and Cheshire goes to third base. Smathers steals the second station. Noble cannot find the spheroid. Hart bunts and Cheshire is caught at home. Score, Gettysburg, 4; Carolina, 1.

Third inning: Floto out third to first. Rinard takes same route. Seiber fans.

Giles flies out to centre. Oldham finds Plank for a hit. Oldham caught trying to steal second. Donnelly flies out to left field. Score, Gettysburg, 4; Carolina, 1.

Fourth inning: Plank out Hart to Holt. Bingaman out second to first. James out short to first.

Holt hits between short and third. Carr hits to second, who catches Holt. Cheshire hits to second, who fails to catch anyone. Carr caught off second. Smathers flies out to second. Score, Gettysburg, 4; Carolina, 1.

Fifth inning: Fisher out third to first. Rowe bunts but is thrown out. White out pitcher to first.

Noble out second to first. Hart fans. Giles fans.

Sixth inning: Floto hits over second. Floto steals second. Rinard flies out to Carr. Seiber hits to second and is out at first. Floto goes to third. Plank goes to first on Cheshire's rotten error. Floto scores. Bingaman out Hart to Holt.

Oldham hits to center. Donnelly sacrifices to third. Holt hits to short and ball makes a bid bound, scoring Oldham. Holt goes to second. Carr hits pop fly to second. Cheshire flies out to center. Score, Gettysburg, 5; Carolina, 2.

Seventh inning: James flies out to Hart. Fisher hits over second. Rowe hits to third who throws to second, Cheshire muffs and everybody safe. White out Hart to Holt. Floto hits to short and is out at first.

Smathers hits to right field for two bases. Noble walks. Hart hits safe to right field. Three men on bases and Giles comes to the bat. Giles is equal to the occasion and hits a hot one to left field, scoring Smathers. Oldham flies out to left. Donnelly hits to short who throws wild to first base, scoring Noble. Holt hits to short and Giles is caught between third and home. Donnelly scores on wild throw from catcher to third. Holt goes to third. Carr fans. Score, Gettysburg, 5; Carolina, 6.

Eighth inning: Rinard hits hot to Carr and is safe at first. He is out trying to steal second. Lieber strikes out Plank, the frog-formed pitcher, hits pop-foul to Noble.

Cheshire hits to left-field fence for three bases. Smathers bunts down first base line and Cheshire scores. Noble out on pop-fly. Hart hits to right field. Giles flies out to second.

Ninth inning: Bingaman fans. James hits foul fly over third base. Donnelly making a beautiful running catch. Fisher flies out to Giles.

The teams lined up as follows:

Carolina.	Gettysburg.
Giles, rf.	Rowe, lf.
Oldham, cf.	White, c.
Donnelly, lf.	Floto,
Holt, 1b.	Rinard, ss.
Carr, ss.	Seiber, 3b.
Cheshire, 2b.	Plank, p.
Smathers, 3b.	Bingaman, rf.
Noble, c.	James, 2b.
Hart, p.	Fisher, 3b.

Score by innings:

THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

CAROLINA DEFEATS CORNELL.

Game Close and Spirited—An Enthusiastic Crowd Cheers the University Team.

It was Carolina's day in Raleigh at the ball park yesterday.

For a while it did not seem so, but finally the Tar Heels overcame Cornell's lead and the blue and white fluttered in victory.

There was a splendid gathering at the Fair grounds to see the contest with bat and ball between the teams from the State University and Cornell University. Over 800 people were out.

The game was full of interest. The ground was in poor shape and this caused some errors. The two teams were pretty evenly matched, though Cornell showed up as a heavier looking set of ball players. Carolina began the game with some nervousness visible but it soon wore off, and despite the lead of Cornell it pulled steadily to the front.

THE GAME IN DETAIL.

It was with the University at the bat that the game began. Oldham was up. With a strike called, one struck at and a ball, he presented a nice fly to short, who gobbled it up. Carr drove to Costello at third, who fumbled but got it to first in time. Donnelly made a clean hit past second into centre, but Holt died from pitcher to first. In Cornell's opening half Bigler batted an easy one towards third, which Pitcher Green tried to handle. He fell down on the ball and Bigler was glued to the initial sack. Brewster struck out. Lewis batted to short, who with Carr's help, retired Bigler at second. Braman was an easy victim from third to first.

Giles began Carolina's second inning by a clean hit over second into center, but he was retired at second when Cheshire batted to Costello at third. Smathers was up, but the ball he whacked went first to Pitcher Chase, next to second, and then to first, the double retiring the side. Ferguson, for Cornell, hit a clean and hard one in left. He was advanced by Drake's sacrifice bunt handled by Green, and reached third on a passed ball. It looked like a run, as only one hand was down, but Costello lifted a fly in left which Giles took in after a hard run, and Welsh could not find the ball with his bat.

In the third the Tar Heels did nothing. Noble fled to left, while both Green and Oldham were retired from pitcher to first. Then good luck and Carolina errors gave Cornell its only three runs. Chase struck out. Bigler batted to Carr off second, but Holt at first dropped the ball and Bigler was safe. Brewster gave Green an easy one, but the Carolina pitcher lost a double by throwing too low to second, both men being safe. Chase reached third on a passed ball. Lewis put a single between first and second, which Carr did not reach and Giles in right field let it get away, allowing both Bigler and Brewster to score. Braman lifted a fly in right which Giles captured, but Lewis scored on the throw in. Ferguson retired the side with a fly to left field, but Cornell had three runs and Carolina had none.

Carr began Carolina's fourth half by waiking to first. Donnelly batted to third and Costello sent it to second for a double, but Braman was too far from base to get the ball, and both men were safe. Carr keeping on to third. In a wild return of the ball from the field to the pitcher he scored. Holt hit clear in left, Donnelly reaching second. Giles batted to second and was out at first, but the runners advanced. With men on second and third and none out, Cheshire died from pitcher to first and Smathers met the same fate when he batted to Ferguson off first, that sack being covered by the pitcher. In Cornell's half there was nothing doing, as Drake went out from short to first. Costello fled in center and Welch was retired from short to first. The score was now three to one in Cornell's favor.

Carolina's fifth began with Noble striking out, followed by Green giving a fly to Ferguson at first. Oldham batted near first, and that baseman got the ball, but the pitcher, who was covering first, dropped it and as it rolled away Oldham sprinted to second. Carr lifted a high fly to center which Bigler ran for, but the wind drove it back and it fell near short. As the ball rose in the air Oldham started for home from second and got there. Donnelly passed in his checks and retired the side with fly to left. In Cornell's half Chase drove a ball past second, who fumbled and let Chase reach first. Bigler bunted to Green but Holt at first dropped it. Chase went to second, but in trying for third he was caught. Brewster fanned. Lewis hit in right and on the throw to third to stop Bigler went to second. Braman retired the side with a fly to center. The score was now 3 to 2 in Cornell's favor and Carolina was creeping up.

In the sixth Carolina increased its lead with the run that won the game. Holt banged a grass-cutter in left; but Giles presented and easy one to short, who, with second and first, executed a double. With two down Cheshire hit in right. Smathers was in luck, as Cornell's left fielder dropped the fly, while Carr made third on dead run. Smathers stole second and on Noble's hit to center Carr and Smathers scored. The ball came back from center wild to pitcher and Noble went to second, where with Green up he was caught off base, pitcher to second. In Cornell's half Ferguson and Drake were out on foul flies to the catcher, while Costello retired by the pitcher to first route. This left Carolina in the lead, the score being 4 to 3 in its favor.

In the seventh for Carolina, Green was out short to first, Oldham flew in left, Carr walked and Donnelly fled out to deep center. For Cornell, Welch fanned. Chase made a clean hit in left and advanced on Bigler's hit past second. Brewster fled out to center, with Lewis up Chase stole third, but Lewis died on a fly in left near the foul flag, which Donnelly captured in splendid form.

There was no change in the eighth. For Carolina, Holt struck out, Giles fled to short, Cheshire reached first, as Ferguson dropped the ball thrown him by Braman, but Smathers was out, pitcher to first. In Cornell's half Braman was out, pitcher to first, Ferguson hit a good one in right field, Drake walked and the side was retired on a double when Costello batted to Chase at the slab, second and first finishing the play.

The ninth was easy. Noble struck out, Green batted to second who fumbled, allowing Green to go safe. Oldham batted to short, who threw Green out at second, and Carr ended Carolina's game by getting thrown out at first when he batted to third. It was Cornell's last chance now, but it did no good. Welch was out from second to first, Chase flew in left and Bigler ended the agony by batting to Cheshire, who quickly shot the ball to Holt at first and the game was over with Carolina the victor by four to three.

Prize Essay Contest.

The New York Alumni Association of the Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity wishes to announce that Ex-President Grover Cleveland, President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California, and Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews of the University of Nebraska, have consented to act as judges of the essays submitted for the prize of $50.00, which is to be given for the best essay on "The Effect of the Fraternity on American College Life."

Any student working for a recognized degree in any American college or university may compete. No essay shall contain more than 3,000 words. Each contestant shall on or before the first day of May, 1903, mail to the chairman of the committee three typewritten copies of the competitive essay, signed in a pseudonym. He shall also, at the same time, send to the chairman of the committee a sealed envelope containing his name and address, with his pseudonym on the outside.

Arrangements have been made whereby the essay successful in this contest may be submitted in competition for a prize of $150.00, to be given by the College Essay Publishing Company, of Boston, Mass.

Athletics.

The time for our track meet with Virginia is drawing near and but few men have, as yet, come out for the various events. The meet comes off May 19 at Charlottesville. This gives us a little over five weeks for actual training. We will carry about fifteen men.

While only a few have been out for work those few have been coming up in good shape. There is a general lack of form in most of the events and the starting is a little slow, due perhaps, to the condition of the track.

For the various events, Irvin is the fastest on the 100 and 220, while Newton and Wilson in the 220 and 240 bid fair to be speedy and strong. Altho Oldham is tangled up in base ball it is hoped he will make fast time in the 440 and some of the other runs. Mangum, Cash, Calder and Reynolds are the mainstay for the mile and Mangum and frost for the half. But four men are out for the hurdles. Chief of these are Wilson, who did good work last season, Haynes, Smith and Oldham. Cox will be in these if his knee will permit.

In the field events we are especially weak. No one has as yet come out for the running broad leap. Wilson and Newton are up on the high jump and bid fair to do five feet and a half or more. Mann and Crawford are the best matured in the pole vault, with the possibility of Newton working it up. The weight men are Newton, Seagle, Oldham and Jones.

It is urged upon every man that is athletically inclined to come out and work for the glory of his Alma Mater and help us "do" Virginia. There is a place for every man who comes out. The reward goes to the faithful. We need more men—won't you come out for the honor of Carolina?

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

One of the attractive things about the Yackety Yack now in press is its dedication to Mr. George Stephens, of Charlotte. Mr. Stephens was born in Guilford county in 1873. He was prepared for college at Oak Ridge Institute and entered the University in '92 where he graduated four years later.

As a student of the University, Mr. Stephens was active in every phase of college life. He sought and obtained that many sided development which made him the successful man of affairs that he is today. He carried his Christian principles and his activity into his college work, as a result of which he was frequently honored by his fellow students. He served as president of the Young Men's Christian Association, president of the Athletic Association and was the under-graduate member of the Advisory Committee. He was easily a star on the foot ball team, and on the base ball team he was an ideal pitcher. No student in his day was more popular than he.

Since his graduation in '96, Mr. Stephens has been located in Charlotte, where he has been engaged in the real estate and insurance business. In 1900 he effected the organization of the Piedmont Realty Company of which he was elected vice-president and director. In 1902 he was elected president of the Southern States Trust Company—a banking institution—and now devotes most of his time to the performance of the duties of that office.

As a business man, Mr. Stephens is thoroughly practical, succeeding in all that he undertakes. As an alumnus of the University he has shown his devotion to his Alma Mater in many ways, and well deserves the recognition shown him by the Yackety Yack editors. In recognition of his usefulness to the University and the State, the last Legislature appointed Mr. Stephens a Trustee of the University.

We are glad to know that a favorable reply has been received from the University of Georgia in regard to a series of three annual debates, to begin with next year.

We only regret that there was some "hitch" in the arrangements that prevented the Georgia-Carolina Debate this year.

Our system of inter-collegiate debates is one of the best features of our University life, and it is important that we have just as many of these debates as possible without lowering the standard. The greatest weakness of our system has been the element of uncertainty about our engagements. This year we began in the fall with the expectation of three debates and now are to have but one. We are glad to see this move to make arrangements ahead, so that when the men come back in the fall they may know just what debate to enter for.

Heretofore Georgia has proved a worthy foe. All our debates and arrangements have been characterized by great good feeling. She is the most promising institution south of us that is within our reach. For all of these reasons we are glad to engage our Southern Sister for another series of forensic battles.

We are glad indeed to learn of the united action on the part of the two Literary Societies in arranging for a banquet Monday evening of Commencement week. This side of the life of our societies, we are sorry to say, has been neglected; and the movement to add this social feature has been prompted by the force of circumstances which show the step to be both fitting and necessary. The societies owe the pleasure that such a function will afford, not only to the old members of the respective societies, who come here each year to be present during the closing exercises, but also to themselves; and while we will all enjoy the occasion, many of us will get an experience that will be indispensable in after life. THE TAR HEEL heartily indorses this course, and insists that every student who is interested use his influence in perfecting the plan necessary to accomplish this end.

Exchanges.

The first of the three debates arranged to take place between the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Virginia, was held at Philadelphia on Friday, [April 3rd] and Virginia came off victorious. College Topics.

R. M. Harper went to Philadelphia last Saturday to have his eyes treated.

Brent S. Drane, '02, now in the U. S. Geological Survey, was on the Hill Sunday.

The University is considering establishing a Dental Department in connection with the Medical School at Raleigh. This department is much needed and doubtless would be a success.

Dr. Henry T. Bahnson, of Winston-Salem, has been chosen to deliver the commencement address before the Medical School in May. Dr. Bahnson is one of the leading physicians in the State.

James S. Manning, Esq., has offered to present the portrait of his venerable father, Hon. John Manning, to the Law School, of which he was so long at the head, and of which he may be said to have been the founder.

On Thursday evening, the 16th of April, at 8 o'clock, Hon. H. A. Foushee, of Durham, will make the presentation speech, and Major H. A. London, of Pittsboro, will accept the portrait on behalf of the Law School. The ceremonies take place in the lecture room of the Law Department. All are invited to be present.

Dr. Smith lectured last night in Hartsville, S. C., in a star lecture course at that place.

Rev. Mr. Hagan, of Mecklenburg County, preached in the Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Wade Oldham was ill with tonsillitis a few days this week. He was able to play in the Cornell game on Thursday.

R. C. Morrow who has had facial neuralgia is convalescing.

Dr. Smith has accepted invitations to deliver the commencement addresses at Charleston College, Charleston, S. C. and Presbyterian College, Columbia, S. C. Both of these addresses will be delivered the first week in June.

Our base ball team left the Hill for their Easter trip Thursday morning. They played Cornell in Raleigh Thursday and South Carolina College at Columbia, S. C. yesterday. They will play Wofford at Spartanburg to-day and Davidson at Winston-Salem on Monday.

Boone, '05, left the Hill yesterday to spend Easter at home.

William R. Smith, '06, has recently been appointed by Senator Simmons to a cadetship at Annapolis. We congratulate Mr. Smith and extend to him our best wishes for his success.

Mr. J. H. Meyerburg, '06, is one of the three alternates.

G. G. Christy.

The sketch and verses, which we are here publishing, we believe will be of interest to all lovers of Southern literature. They are taken from the Harvard Class Album of 1839. The sketch was written about 1879. Mr. Christy graduated from Harvard in 1839.

GEORGIUS GUILIELMUS CHRISTY.

Lives in New Orleans

(A diligent cultivator of the Belles-Lettres and of all good arts. There are [those] who say he gave the hints from which the poem of "Hiawatha" was born. He was on the staff of Stonewall Jackson through the war; nor will any of us forget the services of tenderness he was able to render fallen friends, who were enemies only in war. Among friends it is fair to cite a scrap of an invitation to one of the class:)

April 12, 1876.

I have gone through our Literary Swamp in the rear of the city in a hasty manner, with shotgun and drag-net, and have succeeded in capturing two Alligators, an active, wiry Coon, a good-sized Frog, a sickly Tadpole, and a gorgeous Cardinal Red Bird. I hope you will be able to make a square meal off of the captured game.

The Alligators are tough-hided but filled and fat with Louisiana lore. They can stand any amount of squeezing without being reduced in size.

The Coon, you will find to be, in all things, a "live coon," posted up to date, and wide-awake even to "Yankee Notions;" he is filled with the proverbial wisdom of his race.

The Frog croaks well, and has volunteered to do his own croaking.

The Tadpole is sickly, and can't stand much, but he has a graceful way of finding his proper level at the bottom of most any Literary Tub into which he may be thrown.

The Cardinal Red Bird has but to be seen to be admired; and if her notes be not as varied as those of the mocker, they are strong, clear, and true.

(Here is Christy's description of the lovely State of his home:)

Land of the mocking bird, sunlight and beauty.

Land where the willow bends over the stream!

Land where the odor of sweet-scented flowers enraptures the senses and nurtures a dream!

Land where the cypress, majestic and solemn, enfolds in its shadow a silvery gloom!

Land where the prairies are fretted with lilies, and yellow-leaved jasmims are always in bloom!

Land of the cane-brake, the bittern, the bay-on!

Land where the crocodile watches his prey!

Land where the grandeur of solitude strikes us!

When under huge oaks or magnolias we stray!

Land where the sunlight with shadow is blending,

And beauty is varied wherever we gaze!

Land where the flowers are drinking in brightness

While noon in the woods has a twilighted haze!

I love thee as only a poet may love.

Who feels the full spell of thy beauty and love,

And loving I weep as a poet should weep,

Who never can paint thee, but only adore!

I would strike the wild lyre and startle thy birds

Who slumber to dream of some far distant shore,

And bid them sing thee and thy beautiful legends,

Or slumber in silence and shame evermore!

Land of the mocking bird, sunlight and beauty!

Land where the willow bends over the stream!

Land where the odor of sweet-scented flowers enraptures the senses and nurtures a dream!

Land of my boyhood, my manhood, my prime!

Land of my soul's love and land of my birth,

Let me sleep where the arm of thy cypress is waving

And gray-colored mosses are trailing the earth!

Freshmen 9. Meds 0.

The second inter-class game of the season was played Thursday by the Freshmen and Medical students. From the first, the game was interesting. Both sides played good ball, with no one scoring until the sixth inning. In this and the eighth inning errors by the Meds. and bunched hits by the Freshmen gave the game to the latter. The good work of the Freshman infield was especially commendable. Crawford, their pitcher, is easily one of the best class team pitchers in college. Only four hits were made on him, against eleven on Engle. He was well backed by Jones at short stop and Calder at third. The playing of the Medical team, though good at times, was for the most part ragged. Their best work was done by Mann as catcher and Sheep at first base.

This is the second victory for the Freshmen, and shows that they have a strong team. This is a good sign of a successful Varsity for the future. The Varsity gets its men from the class teams; and its success depends upon theirs. A class with a strong team in its first year, when it has time for improvement, must certainly be well represented on the Varsity of its other years in college. We would say to the class of '06, "Continue your good playing and you will wear an N. C. later."

The score by innings was as follows:

Struck out by Crawford, 5; by Engle 7. Base on balls, by Crawford 2; by Engle 4.

With the Societies.

On last Saturday night the Dialectic society discussed the query; "Resolved, That a congress of nations would be beneficial to the world." The affirmative won. Mr. Love made the best speech.

In the Philanthropic society the meeting was given over to the Carolina-Hopkins debaters. Speeches were made by them and the scrubs, after which some of the members replied to their argument. The Dialectic society will have a similar discussion to-night. Members of the faculty will be present to criticize the speakers.

A SPIRITED CONTEST.

Last Saturday's Game With Wofford Results in a Victory For Carolina by the Score of 2 to 0.

In a pitcher's battle in which honors were about equally shared, North Carolina won a fast, snappy game from the Wofford sluggers yesterday afternoon by a score of two to nothing. For seven innings the tar heel team, who two days ago took the game from the Cornell boys by the score of four to three, tried in vain to solve the mysterious benders that were being served up to the plate by Wofford's star pitcher, Durant.

The feature of the game which blazed forth brighter than all others was the timely four-bagger of Donnelly's in the eighth inning, when he pushed Carr from first across the plate, and scored himself, winning the game for his team.

It was not until the third inning that Wofford succeeded in getting in the game, when, after Cantey had flied out to first, Durant took a gift to first on balls and was followed by Brabman, K., with a hit to center. So fast was the fielding of Oldham at center that Durant was cut off at second, but Green got a hot grounder past short and landed safely on first, advancing Brabham from second to third. With a man on first and one on third Burnett retires the side on a short grounder from third to first and Wofford lost her first chance of scoring.

For Carolina, Green went out on a hot liner to Burnett and Oldham made it the second one on a short ball to the pitcher, who threw him out at first. With two hands down and two strikes on Carr at the bat, Durant gives him four balls and a pass to first. Donnelly hit to pitcher who tried to catch Carr at second, but is too late and both men are safe, Holt lines one to Burnett, who fumbles it, allowing the runner to reach first and the bases are full. Cheshire hit an easy one to third and Oldham was retired at the plate.

Neither team had any chance of scoring until the latter half of the sixth inning when, after one man had been taken care of, Holt drove a long liner to left field fence for two bags, and was followed by Cheshire with a hit over short, but by the fast field work of Brabham, W., Holt was caught at third by Brabham, K. and put out, although the runner knocked the baseman down. Graham retired the side on a grounder to first.

There was nothing doing in the seventh inning for either team. It was in inning No. 8 that Wofford had the chance to score, which was brought about in this wise: Cantey went out at first on a grounder to pitcher and Durant struck out. Brabham, K., is hit by a pitched ball and walks, which is followed by Glaze with a hit through second. Again North Carolina's pitcher loses his control and Burnett is hit by the ball and walks, advancing both Brabham and Glaze and the bases are full. Next man up was Wofford's heavy sticker, Isom, and the fans expected much, and were sorely disappointed when he hit a high fly to first, retiring the side without a score. So good did the Carolina boys feel at getting out of this tight place that they marched in a body to the players' bench and gave their college yell.

All the scoring of the game was done in the latter half of the eighth inning. Durant gave Carr his base on balls and Donnelly followed with a home run to the centerfield fence. The next three men were retired in order.

This ended the run getting of the game, for in the ninth inning Glaze went out on a grounder to third. Brabham, W. placed one in the same place, but the baseman was slow in fielding it and the runner made good. On an error of Holt's Wiggins lands safely on first. Cantey went out on fly to right. Durant retired the side with a hot liner to second.

Captain Brabham, of the Wofford team, was in the game from the first and he and Durant did star work for Wofford.

THE CAROLINA GAME.

The First Game with South Carolina College Results in a Tie. Score 9-9.

For the sake of decency we omit the cussed tommy-rot published in The Columbia (S. C.) State of April 11th in regard to the "unsportsmanlike behavior" of the two Carolina teams in the game at Columbia last week, and publish only the detailed report taken from that paper. We can truly say with The State, "Mr. Meetze made some unfortunate decisions," and but for the apologetic tone that the reporter assumed toward the umpire, he would have said rotten decisions, and instead of accusing the two teams of unsportsmanlike behavior, he would have placed the blame where it belonged—upon Mr. Meetze and not upon the players. They were right in objecting to such foolish childlike decisions as that crank made. Fortunate for the State of South Carolina that she has few such umpires and reporters as figured in this game.

Though the rooters yelled and the drum carolled forth its sonorous song, Carolina was unable to score on the first inning. The Tar Heels took the stick and, though Oldham died an easy death, Carr sent the leather lying out into left field and finished his pace at the third sack. Donnelly's hot hit burnt the man who caught it and he dropped it, and Carr paced in. Before the inning closed Donnelly had scored. South Carolina was quite as fortunate in the next spasm. Wilcox and Martin crossed the rubber through errors on the part of their opponents and the rooters swelled almost to bursting.

The first visitor from the neighboring State who came to bat in the second inning sent up a faint fly which perished, and two more men were caught in a beautiful double play by Shortstop Gilland, Aiken and Gunter.

The locals played in luck in the third, for through hard hitting and some unfortunate moments for the visitors, five dots were placed on their side of the book. North Carolina's half of the inning was the time when one of the disagreeable incidents occurred. Carr was called out at third base, and the umpire gave him 10 minutes to leave the sack, before he would be put out of the game. The tar heels took the 10 minutes and kicked, while the grand-stand waited. One runner crossed the home plate.

The spectators waxed sarcastic over the delay in the next inning, while 18 men and the umpire discussed the question of whether Gunter had stuck his head in the way of the ball or not. In this same inning the visitors filled the bases twice, and Gilland forced one run by yielding a base.

South Carolina went out 1, 2, 3, but her opponents were enthusiastic over the fact that they lacked but three of tying the score. Smathers placed a neat hit just between Aiken and Martin and two men came in. Hart hit to Wilcox, who swallowed the ball, but Smathers scored after the leather was caught. The score was now tied, and the Chapel Hill boys gave their yell to let the grand-stand know it. The silence from the South Carolina rooters was deathlike.

Carolina sent one man in the next inning. Donnelly's catch of a long fly made the fans clap loudly. Carr out, Donnelly out, Holt out, was the story for North Carolina.

Both Carolinas scored once in the seventh. There was a kick but the fans were used to them by this time.

The garnet and black saw its finish in a rush in the first half of the eighth inning. North Carolina had a full house twice in her half, and put herself one run to the good. There was the usual kick coming, and after a weary interval the fans were informed that the game had been called at the tie score of 9 to 9.

The score in detail follows:

The Message of Spring.

BY K. T.

The sun in merry mood has kissed
 The valley and the dale,
 And promised them security
 From winter's chilly gale.

The valley and the dale in turn
 Have blushed in sweet reply
 And sent the gentle tidings on
 To land and sea and sky—

Till every bird and bee and flower
 Has each the message caught;
 And they in turn have sent it on
 With song and sweetness fraught.

And so the annual message goes
 The entire line along
 Till every voice in nature blends
 In one responsive song.

"Fall in!" thundered the captain, as they were crossing the bridge.
 "Not me, Cap!" faltered the Dublin recruit. "Oi can't swim."

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

Though a word to the students with regard to staying on the Hill until Commencement is over may seem a little premature, yet we believe such a word should be spoken and be spoken in time. We believe the fact ought to be emphasized that the students owe it as a duty to the University and to themselves to remain here during the Commencement period. The tendency on the part of the students to leave as soon as they finish their examinations is one which seems to be becoming stronger every year, and it seems to us high time some action be taken to check it.

The catalogue for 1902-3 is just from the press, and on the whole, we believe it is one of the best ever gotten out by the University. Professor Toy is to be complimented for the excellent manner in which he has conducted its publication.

It is gratifying to note the increased growth of the University for the past year both in the academic and professional departments of the institution. The total number of students, exclusive of the Summer School for teachers, is 608, representing 17 States and one foreign country. The faculty now numbers 66, and a large number of courses are offered for both undergraduate and graduate students. All North Carolinians, and especially the alumni of this institution, should be proud of the fact that it is not longer necessary for the young men of the State to go beyond her borders for thorough training in the academic branches, in graduate work, or in Law, Medicine, or Pharmacy. Every University student and every friend of the institution in the State should provide himself with a copy of the catalogue and inform himself, and be able to inform others, of the great work the University is doing for the upbuilding of our State.

Dr. Chas. Baskerville has returned from New York, where he lectured before the Chemists' Club, April 8th, on "The Rare Earth Crusade: What It Portends Scientifically and Technically." Something of the history of those, as yet, little understood chemical elements was treated and a summary given of his seven years' work with them.

In appreciation of the work already accomplished and to aid further in its prosecution the Welsbach Light Co., has presented Dr. Baskerville with something over five thousand dollars worth of the rare earths and offered assistance by placing a part of their factory at his disposal, to carry out the work on a larger scale.

As a further appreciation of this work, Tiffany & Co., of New York, one of the largest jewelry establishments in America, has asked Dr. Baskerville to investigate certain new phosphorescent and radio-active minerals, as well as to carry on extended investigations of their gem collection. This work they desire him to do during the vacation months, but he has not yet decided to undertake it.

This gift and offer mean no little for the Chemical Department and the University.

Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

The Scientific Society held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday night, April 14. Papers were presented by Prof. Cain on the "Imaginary Root of a Conic," by Prof. Raper on "The Prices of Anthracite Coal since 1850, and by Mr. Ivey Lewison "The Habits of Chapel Hill Wood-peckers."

The first paper by Maj. Cain, showed some new points in the plotting of conics whose equations involve an imaginary quantity. The paper was of great interest to the students of mathematics.

Dr. Raper showed by means of tables of statistics how the price of anthracite coal has fluctuated since 1850. The average price was something over three dollars per ton, f. o. b. New York. The war price was more than nine dollars, and the panic price in the seventies was considerably above the normal. The strike price rose to sixteen dollars in December, 1902. Comparison of prices showed the alternation of rise and decline, which is characteristic of the prices of all products. The introduction of new machinery has not affected the price of coal to any great extent, the methods of mixing being very primitive. Spirited discussion was called forth by the paper, which was of peculiar interest on account of the recent strike in the coal fields.

The last paper was by Mr. Lewis. The remarkable adaptation of woodpeckers to their surroundings was mentioned, and certain anatomical peculiarities of the order were described. The heavy head and bill, the feet with two toes in front and two toes behind, and the stiff, pointed tail feathers, all fit the woodpeckers for life on trees. The flicker on the yellowhammer was mentioned to show an interesting reversion from arboreal to terrestrial habits.

Sam Peace, ex-'04, spent Easter on the Hill.

A large number of students spent the Easter holidays at their homes.

Dr. Gibbs, the presiding elder of this district, preached in the Methodist church Sunday.

The Senior-Soph game, and the game of the Law team with Orange Grove were both called off on Monday on account of rain.

The Fresh-Soph debate will be held in the Dialectic Hall on Wednesday night. Question for debate is "Resolved; That the national government should have the power to compel and should compel, the settlement of all labor questions of national importance, through a board of arbitration." The Dialectic society has the affirmative and the Philanthropic the negative.

The Medical team won its game with the Juniors last Saturday by a score of 12 to 4. They showed considerable improvement over their game with the Freshmen. They did good batting, bunching hits in the first and second innings especially well. Their best fielding was done by Rose. The Juniors showed lack of practice. Sifford and Swink played good ball for them.

Thigpen spent Easter in Winston-Salem.

Several students heard the debate at Trinity on Monday night.

Harper, '04, returned Tuesday from Philadelphia, where he has been for eye treatment. We are glad to note that he is much improved.

Dr. Bruner delivered his lecture on "The Literary Attractions of the Bible," last night, before the Educational and Missionary Convention at Burlington. This lecture of Dr. Bruner's is very popular, as is shown by the frequent invitations he receives to deliver it.

Dr. Howard Rondthaler, of Winston-Salem, will preach the University sermon for April, to-morrow night in the Chapel. Sunday morning Dr. Rondthaler will preach at the Episcopal Church.

Ben Bell has returned to college.

Harris, '06, who was hurt some time ago, while playing ball, has returned to college.

On Wednesday of last week Dr. Alexander lectured before the students of the Bingham School in Asheville.

Dr. Venable spoke in Tarboro on Thursday night of last week on "The Educational Outlook in the State." On Friday he spoke at Crisp in Edgecombe county on "Education as an Investment." He is to speak in Richmond on the 24th at the Convention of the Southern Educational Board on "The Work of the University in the South." And on May 19 he is to deliver the commencement address before the Department of Medicine at the University of Maryland.

On Friday night of last week Dr. Smith delivered an address before the Welshneck High School in South Carolina, and on Saturday he spoke at the College of Charleston.

Presentation of Dr. Manning's Portrait.

Many sincere friends, devoted companions and loving admirers of the late Dr. John Manning, so long, so faithfully and so efficiently Dean of the Law School, gathered in Gerrard Hall Thursday night and looked again, silently, upon all the skill of the artist could reproduce of the man—the gentleman—so worthy of every veneration.

Judge McRae, Dean of the Law School, presided and introduced the speakers with his usual dignity and ease.

The portrait is the gift of Hon. Jas. Manning of the Durham Bar and son of the distinguished and honored Dr. Manning.

Mr. H. A. Foushee, of Durham, made the presentation address, and Hon. H. A. London the address of acceptance.

Mr. Foushee said: "To tell you how grateful we are for this gift may be painted in a way in words, but to tell you how much we loved and admired the man, is too beyond, too deep for expression."

The speaker gave a brief sketch of Dr. Manning's life and some measure of his great success, closing with a splendid tribute to his public and private life.

Mr. H. A. London followed and after a fitting quotation from Judge Shepherd on the model, the ideal lawyer, said, "I can but hold him up to you as he was to me, a man for your example, worthy of your emulation, a man true to every trust and faithful in all things."

May loving hands hang gently his portrait on our college wall, where fond friends and loving heart ever cherishing his deeds and honoring his memory, may watch over his noble countenance and face serene!

Meeting of the Philological Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the Philological Club was held in No. 7 Alumni Building at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was attended by an appreciate and gratifying audience who enjoyed the interesting papers presented and the discussions they called forth. The first paper was presented by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith on "Differences in Syntax between the King James Version of the Bible (1611) and the American Revision (1901)."

Dr. Smith's paper may be summarized as follows:

1. When persons are referred to, "who" and "that" are used instead of "which."

2. In indicative clauses "are" is used instead of "be."

3. The possessive "its" is used instead of "his" and "her" when the noun or pronoun referred to is neuter.

4. Instead of "for" and the infinitive the simple infinitive is employed to express purpose.

5. The indicative mood is used instead of the subjunctive in many dependent clauses introduced by "if," "though," "whether," and "before."

6. Compound subjects are followed by plural predicates.

7. The word "people," instead of being followed by a singular predicate in the same sentence, is followed by two plural predicates.

8. A great many syntactical oversights have been corrected, such as: "If the witness be a false witness and hath testified falsely" (Deut. 19:18). The American Revision employs "be" and "have" in this sentence.

9. The American Revision may be said to be a far better piece of work than the English Revision of 1885 which employed almost the same syntax as that of the 1611 Version. The English Revision represents four years of work (1881-'85); the American Revision represents twenty years of work (1881-1901).

The second paper was presented by Dr. Thos. Hume on the "Life of Shakespeare's England as Reflected in his Hamlet."

Are Shakspeare and his England in "Hamlet?" A brief introduction discussed the easy method of discerning sublime egoists like Milton and Byron in their works but suggested also the caution with which we should estimate the biographic element in such cases as those of Goethe and Robert Greene in determining their position in literature or the worth of their theories of life. The difficulty of detecting a dramatist amongst his various creations is evident, but the question recurs whether certain plays of Shakspeare are not saturated with his personal experience and the spirit of his age. We cannot accept without serious question Mr. Dowden's elaborate unveiling of Shakspeare's mind and heart in plays and poems, but we do not believe that he could have been deaf and blind to the life that glowed in those spacious times of great Elizabeth. Note his environment at the period of the composition of Hamlet, just after his middle period, the fresh traditions of Mary, Queen of Scots, of him who was dreamer and warrior in one, so brilliant, so sadly checked in mid-career, Philip Sidney, of the younger Essex with his voluptuous mother and her great lover, Leicester, this young Earl's ill-fated conspiracy against the queen with Shakspeare's patron, Southampton involved in it, Lord and Bacon's treacherous relation to them and his hunt for civil preferment. Could he who spoke of the drama as "the age and body of the time his (its) form and pressure" fail to use his dramatic instinct and make not a portrait of one man or one woman, but a composite picture of of court and society in which the rottenness in Denmark plainly reflected the moral and social decline which was evident in England as Elizabeth was passing away and the pedant king coming to the throne? Selections from "Hamlet" suggest his method of using his materials.

Hamlet's education with Horatio at Luther's University, Wittenberg with religious reform and speculation in the air round about it, fitly precedes the soliloquies on life, death and the eternal future.

The manners and customs of the day, the open drinking and revelry, the fear of the demoralizing influence of foreign travel and habits, the conversational extravagances of Polonius and Osric which are absurd echoes of the euphuistic fad of that day, the suggestion of the decay of the chivalric standard of honor and loyalty in a typical young gallant, son of the prime minister, the ever recurring note of want of confidence in the stability if not the purity of representative women, are they not significant of England?

"Hamlet" is of all dramas the most universal, the most modern, with its lesson for all time; but it has the personal note and is touched throughout with local color and in this combination we see the artist, the true dramatist.

GAME OF THE CAROLINAS.

The Rain Saves the South Carolina College Men from a Severe Defeat--9 to 0.

To the regret of the rooters, the students and the entire team a heavy downpour of rain at the beginning of the fifth inning saved the base ball team of South Carolina College from what would have been a crushing and disastrous defeat. We had earnestly determined, since the publication of certain "facts," not merely to win a victory over the South Carolinians, but to give them a sound and thorough drubbing, and if we are not greatly mistaken such would have been the result had the game been played to a finish.

In the short time played Varsity succeeded without difficulty in piling up a score of nine runs, and prevented the Palmetto boys from scoring the second base being as far as they were allowed to travel.

George Green, who has developed into a splendid twirler, was in great form and allowed the visitors only one hit, while the Palmetto lad was hit, pounded, and knocked on top of the fence, against the fence under the fence and in every conceivable place within the fence.

The features of the game were the pitching of Green, the proficient stick work of Carr, Holt, Donnelly, Smathers, Graham and Noble and the errors of the visitors.

The game in detail is as follows:

First inning: Graham hits grounder to Belser and is thrown out at first. Carr hits ball for two bases and goes to third on Gilland's error. Donnelly hits safe and Carr scores. Donnelly steals second. Holt sacrifices and is thrown out by Smith to Gunter, advancing Donnelly to third. Donnelly scores on a wild pitch. Giles secures base on balls but is unable to advance, since Cheshire, the next man up, is thrown out by Aiken to Gunter.

Aiken hits to Green, who throws him out at first. Gunter hits to short and is safe on Holt's error. Smith hits safe in center but by beautiful throw Graham nabs Gunter at third. Belser out at first on short ball from Noble to first.

Second inning: Smathers hits to short and is out at first. Noble goes out from second to first. Green is hit by pitched ball. Graham hits safe. Green goes to third and thus allows Graham to go to second at the same time. Carr is out from pitcher to first.

Wilcox starts South Carolina's half of the second inning by striking out. Gilland barely connects and is thrown out by Noble to Holt. Malloy imitates Gilland and retires the side.

Score: N. C. 2, S. C. 0.

Third inning Donnelly again hits safe and steals second. Holt hits high fly to left field and is out. Giles sacrifices and Donnelly goes to third. Cheshire is put out from Belser to Gunter, retiring the side.

Davis hits fly to right field and is out. Martin hits to short and is out at first. Aiken flies out to Carr.

Score: N. C. 2, S. C. 0.

Fourth inning: Smathers gets a hit through short and steals second. Noble flies out to Davis, and Green sacrifices, Smathers going to third. Graham hits safely and Smathers scores. Carr makes two-base hit, Graham scoring. Donnelly hits long fly to center field and is out.

Gunter hits to second but is safe at first on Cheshire's wild throw. Smith hits a hot one to Carr, who makes a beautiful stop and cuts off Gunter at second, but barely fails to get Smith at first. Smith attempts to steal second, but is thrown out by Noble. Belser retires the side, being thrown out by Cheshire to Holt.

Score: N. C. 4; S. C. 0.

Clouds appear and a drizzle of rain begins.

Fifth inning: Holt gets a hit in center field, continuing to third on Nalloy's error. Giles hits safely by pitcher and Holt scores. Cheshire hits to short, who catches Giles at second. Smathers hits safely and Cheshire scores. Smathers goes to second on Gunter's error. Noble hits safe, advancing Smathers to third. Smathers scores on Martin's error. Green hits safe to right field, Noble going to third. Green steals second. Graham gets hit by pitched ball, filling the bases. Carr flies out to center. Donnelly hits safe to right field, scoring Noble and Green, while Graham goes to second.

At this point the game was called on account of rain which descended in torrents.

Inasmuch as five full innings had not been played the game does not count.

Final score N. C. 9; S. C. 0. Hits, N. C. 13; S. C. 1. Errors, N. C. 2; S. C. 4.

SOUTH CAROLINA BEATEN.

The Palmetto Boys Become Victims to "Peck's" Curves. A Large Crowd Was Present.

On last Saturday in Durham at the George Lyon Park before a large number of spectators Carolina, in a fast and snappy game, wrested victory from South Carolina College by the narrow margin of four to three. The contest was intensely interesting and full of crises. Both teams, on account of the recent score at Columbia, S. C., were confident of victory and entered the game without fear and trembling. The Tar Heels, however, by superb team work succeeded in placing the "Rice Eaters" into a "crystal maze."

The features of the game were the batting of Cheshire for Carolina who welted the leather for two doubles and a single and the clever stick work of Smith for the visitors.

The game in detail is as follows: Graham hits a beautiful drive over short stop and is safe at first. Carr hits to short and reaches first, but Graham is thrown out at second. Donnelly is out at first, while Carr reaches second. Holt flies out to center.

Aiken by a beautiful throw of Smathers is out at first. Gunter hits safe over short. Smith hits to third and both Gunter and Smith are safe. Belser hits a hot one over second and Gunter scores. Martin fails to see the ball and is out. Wilcox flies out to right field.

Second Inning.

Giles is thrown out from second to first. Cheshire hits safe by short reaching first. Smathers hits to short and is safe, but Cheshire dies at second. Noble fans.

Davis flies out to pitcher. Gilland is out from short to first. Gilland, P. flies out to third.

Third Inning.

Hart walks. Graham dies at home plate. Carr secures his base and Hart advances to second. Donnelly hits safe to right field and Hart scores. Holt hits safe to center and Carr scores. Donnelly is put out while attempting to reach home. Giles is out from pitcher to first.

Aiken hits fly to short but is safe. Gunter bunts to third but is thrown out at first. Aiken by error of Holt reaches home. Smith is thrown out from second to first. Belser strikes out.

Fourth Inning.

Cheshire hits safe for two bases, Smathers walks. Noble sacrifices, while Cheshire and Smathers advance to third and second. Hart is out from short to first. Graham fans.

Martin flies out to center. Wilcox is out from second to first. Davis hits safe to center and steals second. Gilland is out from third to first.

Fifth Inning.

Carr fans. Donnelly hits to center for two bases. Holt follows with a long drive to right and Donnelly scores. Giles hits a long one to center for two bases and Holt scores. Cheshire flies out to second. Smathers fans.

Gilland fans. Aiken hits safe over second and steals second. Gunter reaches first. Smith flies out to center. Belser hits safe to right and Aiken scores. Hart by a phenomenal catch throws Gunter out at third.

Sixth Inning.

Noble gets base on balls. Hart hits to short and Noble is out at second. Graham hits to first and Hart is thrown out at second. Carr is out from third to first.

Wilcox is out from pitcher to first. Davis walks. Gilland sacrifices. Gilland, P. fans.

Seventh Inning.

Donnelly fans. Holt is out at first. Giles drives a long one to center but is out.

Aiken fans. Gunter and Smith are out on flies.

Neither side scored during the eight or ninth innings. The game closed with a victory for North Carolina by a score of 4 to 3.

SINGLE COPIES, 5 CENTS.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

The editors of THE TAR HEEL have decided to hold back two issues of the paper until after Commencement, and on June 6, publish a double number containing an account of the commencement exercises; consequently, but one more issue will appear before the final examination period.

We shall try to make this double issue interesting to every student, especially to those who will not be here at our closing exercises. But to carry out our plans will incur extra expense, and in order to defray this we are going to ask every student who is not a subscriber to give the business manager his name for at least one copy, and those who are subscribers to give him theirs for a few extra copies for their friends. It will be necessary for the students who will have left the Hill at that time, to give the business manager their address so that he may know where to send the paper.

The Johns Hopkins debate is upon us, and as this is our last issue before that contest comes off we are going to say just a few words in regard to it.

The debate will take place in Gerrard Hall next Friday evening, and it is hoped that every student in the University will be present on that occasion. We firmly believe Carolina is going to win. She will be represented by a strong team, in which we have confidence. And this means no little to the debaters. Yet our confidence is not all we can give them; we can and must give them encouragement and any other support in our power. They have our best wishes, both as individuals and as representatives of our Alma Mater, for their success is our success, and their defeat is our defeat.

And while we are preparing to receive our guests let us not forget the hospitality accorded our representatives last year in Baltimore.

We take pleasure in publishing in this issue a program of the Memorial exercises which has been sent us by Mrs J. C. MacRae, It will be readily seen that this is a program of unusual interest, and we are sure it will be carried out effectively.

We believe there is no more beautiful custom observed by the American people than this one which, at the return of each spring-time, causes them to assemble "where sleep the brave" to do honor to those who fell in civil strife and to cherish their memory by processions, orations, and floral decorations.

We should like to urge all the students, who possibly can, to attend these exercises. We feel sure they will be amply repaid.

Fresh-Soph Debate.

The Fresh-Soph debate was held in the Di Hall Wednesday night and was won by the representatives from the Di society. The question discussed was "Resolved, that the national government should have power to compel and should compel the settlement of all labor troubles of national importance by a board of arbitration." Messrs. Sam Klutz, '06, and J. B. Robertson, '05, of the Di, upheld the affirmative, and Messrs. J. K. Wilson, '05, and J. A. Parker, '06, of the Phi, debated the negative.

With the Societies.

In the Philanthropic society last Saturday night the following query was debated: "Resolved, That the bill compelling each race to support its own school system is unjust." The committee to decide the debate decided in favor of the affirmative and reported Mr. Howard as the best debater.

There was no meeting of the Di society owing to the declaimer's contest on Friday night.

Royal, '05, has returned to the Hill after a brief illness.

Mr. H. R. McFadyen has been elected by the Senior class to present the class gift at commencement.

McCauley, '06, won the declaimer's prize in the Di. society on Friday night.

Graham Andrews has been elected toast master of the society banquet at commencement.

Dr. Howard Rondthaler, of Salem, University preacher, preached in the Chapel on Sunday night. His subject was the constraining influence of Christ's love. Dr. Rondthaler is an earnest talker and knows how to reach his hearers.

On last Saturday the Med team won their first game of the season. This time they met the Sophomores and won from them by a score of 10 to 6. Several men on both teams were away, and their places had to be filled by men who had not played on the teams before. On account of this the game was slow and uninteresting. Berkeley, for the Meds, played the star game of the day. Six hits were made by each side. The errors were, Meds 5, Sops 6.

Dr. Bruner will speak at the West End Chapel Sunday morning. Next week he will deliver a literary address before the teachers and pupils of the Burlington graded schools.

At the thirteenth regular meeting of the Chicago Section of the American Mathematical Society, held in Armour Institute, Chicago, April 11, Dr. Archibald Henderson read two papers both of which are soon to be published in the mathematical journals of the North. These are entitled "On the construction of a double-six" and "On the graphic representation of the straight lines upon the the twenty-one different types of the cubic surface." Dr. Henderson has published a number of articles in the mathematical journals since he has been at the University of Chicago. It is indeed a pleasure to his Alma Mater and to us all to know that his ability has received due recognition in the North. May continued success be his.

Meeting of Historical Society.

On last Monday evening, Dr. Battle called to order the North Carolina Historical Society. This was undoubtedly the best meeting they have had this year, and the papers showed long and careful study, as well as much thought.

The first paper was by Mr. A. W. Herring on "The Proprietary Judiciary." It is needless to say that this paper was of great interest to the society, for Mr. Herring always prepares an excellent paper.

Dr. C. L. Raper made an excellent elaboration of Mr. Herring's paper in his pleasant and happy style. He said: "The system of courts of which Mr. Herring has spoken, continued on down through the royal period without fundamental modification. The changes which were made looked to a more definite organization and hence to greater efficiency. Under the crown administration of North Carolina, justice as well as the finances was a most important factor. It was upon these two subjects that the great struggle between the colonists and the crown occurred. Both the crown and the colonists, through their representatives in the lower house, were desirous of exercising the greatest possible influence over the courts and judges. That conflicts should arise under these circumstances and that these should become so bitter and strong as to lead to a revolution was most natural." This was an extemporaneous talk.

The next paper was by Mr. R. O. Everett, on "Andrew Johnson." The paper was intensely interesting, as well as instructive. It showed how the dark cloud of poverty lingered over Johnson's head, while he was a youth, and in what a noble way he threw off the shackles of poverty by ambition, perseverance and pluck, until he upon the topmost pinnacle of success.

Dr. Battle closed the meeting by reading an interesting account of "A Daring Attack" of the civil war.

The Davie Poplar Injured.

Again the old monarch of our campus, the Davie Poplar, has suffered great injury. In the wind storm last Monday night one of its largest limbs was torn off and now there remain only a part of the decaying body and and two limbs on the south side.

It is with a feeling akin to pain that we see this old giant standing helpless at the mercy of the elements, being deprived of its members one by one. Its history is coeval with that of this institution, and she tradition connected with it is too well known to need repetition here. From its appearance now it looks as if the class of 1903 shall be the last to gather around this old sentinel of the Hill and smoke the pipe of peace.

"Goodness! we'll be late to the opera," she said impatiently. We've been waiting a good many minutes on that mother of mine."

"Hours, I should say, he replied somewhat testily.

"Ours?" she cried rapturously. O, George, this is so sudden." And she fell on his neck."—Ex.

CAROLINA FOREVER A WEEK OF VICTORIES

The White and Blue Again Triumphs Over Hopkins.

In the Second Annual Debate Between Johns Hopkins University and the University of North Carolina Messrs. Blum and Plaggemeyer, of Hopkins, After a Splendid Effort, Lose to the Tar Heels, Messrs. Robins and Everett.

It was indeed an inspiring scene that greeted the Carolina-Hopkins debaters Saturday evening. Gerard Hall was strikingly arrayed in the colors of the two Universities—the white and blue of Carolina stretching in graceful folds down the right side, and the black and blue of Hopkins on the left—the four colors meeting and entwining in a friendly bow above the speakers. Thirty minutes before the debate every seat in the Hall had been taken, and many eager boys were standing where space afforded.

A few minutes before the appointed hour the orchestra played softly "La Fiesta", and Governor Aycock, the judges and speakers entered and took their seats amid vigorous hand-clapping, drowned only by yell after yell for Carolina and Hopkins.

Gov. Aycock, the President, made the opening announcement as to the purpose of the meeting and the rules of the debate, instructing the judges at the request of the four speakers, to render their decision with consideration for the arguments and delivery of the speakers and without regard to the merits of the question.

Mr. C. P. Russell, Secretary, then read the query: "Resolved. That our government should not subsidize our merchant marine." The affirmative was supported by Hopkins and the negative by Carolina. Each speaker was allowed thirty minutes to be used at his discretion.

Mr. Solomon Blum, of Hopkins, the first speaker of the evening, held the close and undivided attention of the audience for fifteen minutes, his choice on the first round, and produced some interesting facts in presenting a strong, forcible argument.

Mr. Blum said, in brief:

It is a self-evident fact that an industry which does not need protection or subsidies should not be protected or subsidized. In systems of transportation, in raw materials, in inventive genius we surpass all nations; during the past decade the number of ship-building plants has increased fifty per cent., the yearly output has increased from 12½ to 50 million tons. Does this suggest that American shipping interests need subsidies? Cramps competed with France, Germany and England, and yet were able to secure the contracts for Japanese and Russian battleships. Our coastwise trade furnishes ample facilities for colliers and transports in time of war. The way to increase our naval strength is not to tin over merchantmen but to build battleships. There are other methods of encouraging our merchant marine. We should repeal that part of our navigation laws which forbid to foreign-built ships an American registry, exempt our ships from taxation and our merchant marine will be greatly increased.

Subsidies have not been successful in other countries. In Germany subsidies are but an incident in a great system of paternalism, repugnant to American ideals, and yet German trade and German shipping has decreased in proportion to her wealth and the number of her inhabitants. In France ships sail without cargoes in order to earn the government bounty. The French people pay $18000 in order that a ship may declare a dividend of $9000 for her owners. If we would build up the merchant marine to endure for all time, we must build it in the typical American manner; by shrewdness, by energy, and by solid effort. This is the method we are

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We owe our subscribers and friends an apology for holding back this issue of The Tar Heel, but we trust a word or two will suffice to explain its tardiness and to justify us in this act. As this will be our last issue before commencement we deemed it advisable to hold the paper over until this week in order to publish an account of the Johns Hopkins-Carolina debate and also an account of the Georgetown game.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to an article in this issue relative to the prospective Y. M. C. A. Building, and to endorse the earnest efforts put forth by the present management towards supplying this long-felt need of more room and better equipment for Y. M. C. A. purposes. These young men are deserving of great praise for their earnestness and untiring labor in this matter and they have the best wishes of us all for the success of this noble project.

We may add here that, by request, The Tar Heel editors have willingly consented to turn the paper over to the Y. M. C. A., after our commencement issue, and let them print a special Y. M. C. A. edition, giving an account of the great work the Y. M. C. A. is doing at the University and setting forth their needs, plans, etc. This special edition will appear about June 13.

As we announced sometime ago, Mr. Sidney Lee, of England, will lecture in Gerrard Hall this evening on "Shakspeare's Life Work." Mr. Lee is best known, perhaps, as editor of the Dictionary of National Biography. He is also known to students by his Life of William Shakspeare, by his recent authorized Life of Queen Victoria, and by other writings. Since he has been in this country he has lectured at the great universities in the North and West. His visit here, however, is his only southern engagement. Let no lover of English literature, no admirer of the world's greatest dramatist fail to hear this famous scholar who is the world's recognized authority on Shakspeare.

Let us urge you again not to forget that a double issue of The Tar Heel will appear on June 6th giving a full account of our commencement exercises, etc. In addition to this it will contain brief reviews of this year's work in athletics and in the several departments of the University, and of the year's work in general. We firmly believe this has been the most successful year in the history of this institution and we shall produce the facts to prove it.

You had better see the business manager before you leave the Hill and order a few extra copies of The Tar Heel to be sent to your friends.

pursuing and the results we are obtaining justify our faith.

The next speaker was Mr. S. S. Robins, of North Carolina. Mr. Robins made telling use of his opening five minutes by a splendid rebuttal of the argument of his preceding opponent. Then he seemed to lose himself in the fray and began a propounding of the question that was consistent in every detail, logical in entire. It was indeed the genuine speech of a gifted debater.

A synopsis of Mr. Robins' speech is given below:

The modern conception of society is that it is not an aggregation of loose and independent units but an organism and government is the exponent of this organism. It stands for the people as a unit and consequently any general interest of the people must be an object of care to it. Although refusing to run this idea into socialism we have consistently carried it out. Public schools, government ownership, tariff and trust legislation etc. bear witness to this.

Among other things in carrying out this conception, our government has taken an active interest in our industrial life, encouraging a symmetrical development of its three divisions, agriculture, manufacturing or transportation. It has encouraged agriculture by establishing agricultural colleges and experiment stations; manufacturing by protection; on the side of transportation our railways by enormous direct subsidies, our domestic shipping by giving it monopoly rights and our merchant marine by protective duties in its early history. In every case we have been repaid a hundred-fold.

From our merchant marine the aid was withdrawn; changing conditions destroyed it and today it is practically dead. At the same time the demand for a marine of our own is infinitely greater than ever before. We are becoming a commercial people and must build up our marine for the sake of having our commerce under our own control, for the sake of business relations with the world's markets and for the sake of best and cheapest service when our marine is once established. We must have a marine in the second place because a nation with world-interests to protect and sustain must be a maritime nation, and a marine is the first element of maritime power.

Our marine being then distinctly a national interest, and being in its present condition the logical application of the American idea and of a policy tested and tried demands that our government perform its part setting the merchant marine upon its feet again. Private enterprise has shown itself helpless. We cannot afford in the face of such a necessity to substitute an inactive for an active policy, and since the only means of carrying out the American idea of government is subsidy, we must subsidize. If our policy has been successful and our aid repaid a hundred-fold in the past we have every reason to believe the same will hold for the future.

Following Mr. Robins the concluding speech for the affirmative was made by Mr. H. W. Plaggenmeyer, of Hopkins. Though his speech, on the first round, covered only ten minutes it was a great effort. This speech, with his fifteen minutes rejoinder, won him the judges' decision for the best speech of the debate.

We give a brief outline of his argument:

We can know the results of subsidies only by recalling our past experience. The Collins Line was subsidized and recklessness, prodigality and corruption resulted. Government aid paralyzes individual thrift. The friends of subsidies have argued that commerce will be increased by granting subsidies. But during the Pacific mail and the Brazilian subsidies the commerce with the countries to which these lines ran actually diminished. Commerce does not follow the flag but follows self-interest. Foreigners will buy from us if we are able to produce cheaper than others and not because we pay millions to ship owners.

The American shipping industry is one of the greatest in this country. It employs thousands of men, American shipyards now have contracts aggregating $150,000,000. It is true that the American laborer receives more wages, but it is because he is more efficient. Mr. Cramp has asserted that the difference in wages is more than overcome by the economic superiority of the American mechanic.

The granting of subsidies is the signal for corruption. When the Pacific Mail Company asked for an increase in subsidy it was discovered that part of the original subsidy had been spent to secure the additional subsidy. Corruption had stalked abroad in the halls of Congress. What happened once may happen again. Eighty per cent. of the world's trade is carried in English tramp steamers which have never received one cent of subsidy. Subsidies are a good thing for ship-builders, but not for the people. With abiding faith in the shrewdness, the foresight, and the commercial sagacity of the American people we rest our cause, confident that the assertion we have made can neither be denied nor controverted.

The closing speech was made by Mr. R. O. Everett. Like Mr. Robins, Mr. Everett proved himself apt in rejoinder and made very effective use of his opening minutes in direct rebuttal. He followed this up with a fine speech, delivered with ease and force—one leaving a deep impression of the earnestness of his words and revealing a diligent study of the practical side of the question. It was a twin brother to Mr. Robins' speech in every way.

Mr. Everett said in part: Although the American people constitute but 18 per cent. of the human race, yet they produce 25 per cent. of the raw material and 33 per cent. of all the manufactured goods. Or in other words one-third of our annual production must be disposed of in foreign markets. This condition makes the world's markets of vital importance to our future development.

The marine now as the great agent for facilitating foreign trade, becomes an absolute necessity. Yet we have no marine, 92 per cent. of our $2,500,000,000 foreign trade must be carried in vessels owned and operated by our foreign competitors. At a time when our demands for a marine are greater, by reason of our great surplus, the marine is actually in a more decrepit condition than ever before.

As a result of these discordant conditions, the American people are subjected to cost and dangers, which national prudence and economy should forbid.

First, $300,000,000 is paid out annually in freights. Second, three nations carry 80 per cent. of our commerce, and in case of conflict among these powers American commerce would be a prey to the navies of either side.

Our development in foreign nations is checked by the greater cost and longer time of transit, to which our products are subjected.

Fourth, Political insecurity in case of war. No nation can be a strong naval power unless it has as a basis of this strength a vigorous merchant marine, to furnish ships and men in time of war.

These four conditions create an immediate demand for a marine, and as my colleague has shown that it is the policy and function of the government to supply the national needs, it becomes here the duty of the government to aid the marine.

Now there are only two ways for the government to aid. First, by discriminative duties, but this is impracticable by reason of the existence of 33 treaties; and secondly, subsidies. This last method is the logical form of governmental aid, and the only one, by which the foreign advantages can be effectively overcome, and thus place the American citizen on equality with the world. This is all that is necessary to be done, as we have every other requisite for being a great maritime power, the capital, the material and the demand.

If the government subsidizes the marine, we will have a symmetrical development of our economic forces. The American people will not produce the material, manufacture the material, transport the finished product to the sea-board, and then trust to competitors to place the goods on the markets of the world, but the mechanism will be complete.

L. T. Johnson, '01, was on the Hill Sunday.

An excursion train from Durham brought a large crowd here to see the Virginia game.

Dr. Cranford, Professor of Philosophy in Trinity College, preached in the Methodist church Sunday morning and night.

Nearly two hundred students went to Greensboro Thursday to see the game. There were about thirty Virginia rooters there from Charlottesville. It goes without saying that the air was kept full of yells.

The University Band deserves great praise for its good music at our ball games. The band forms a valuable addition to the yells of our rooters and does much to push our team on to success.

Last week's Biblical Recorder has a cut of Dr. Hume, and justly credits him as one who has done so much for the Baptist cause and for Christian education in North Carolina.

A. R. Berkeley, '01, spent Saturday and Sunday of last week in College.

Rev. S. P. Verner, who lectured in the chapel Monday night of last week, preached at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and night. At the night services he told of his missionary experiences in central Africa.

Dr. K. P. Battle addressed the school of Mr. Wm. P. Jacocks at White Cross on Friday last on the "Advantages of Education, Physical, Mental and Moral." There was a good attendance of the neighborhood, delightful music by three expert violinists and the school choir. We are glad to learn that Mr. Jacocks, who was on our winning Foot Ball team when we beat Virginia, has given great satisfaction and been offered special inducements to remain. He declined in order to reenter the University and get his diploma. The closing exercises of the school were held at night.

Rev. L. B. Ridgely, of Winchang, China, lectured on missions in the Episcopal church Tuesday night.

R. M. Harper was called home last week by the death of his sister. The Tar Heel extends condolence to Mr. Harper in his bereavement.

We are glad to note that Mr. L. R. Wilson, who has undergone an operation for appendicitis, has returned to college much improved.

The Philanthropic Society has elected Mr. N. W. Walker as editor-in-chief of the University Magazine for next year. Messrs. E. S. W. Dameron, R. M. Harper and Frank McLean were elected sub-editors.

The 1903 Yackety Yacks have come. The book is larger than last year's and is neat and well gotten up. The cover is very attractive, having the N. C. monogram in white, and the words "Yackety Yack 1903" in gold letters, on a blue background. The inside does great credit to the editors and to the University. The book is, in every way, a representative annual.

Jacocks, ex-'04, was on the Hill last week.

Mr. Julian Blanchard, of Trinity, visited friends in college Sunday.

Prof. Collier Cobb made the commencement address at the Mangum School, a rural graded school in Durham county, presided over by L. T. Johnson, '01, on Friday. He will give the address at the Salemberg School next week.

Alf. Haywood, ex-'03, was here Wednesday to see the game.

Class Championship.

The class of '03 holds the championship. This class has made an excellent record in athletics. In their Freshman year the Seniors won the championship in both foot ball and base ball, and will graduate without losing it but once. That was in foot ball in 1901. Their game with the Freshmen, which resulted in a score of 10 to 0, was a complete walk-over after the third inning. Both sides went into the contest with determination, and for three innings it looked as if the score would be a tie at zero. After this, however, the Seniors made repeated hits and, with the aid of the Freshmen's errors, netted a total of ten runs. The features of the game were Berkeley's hitting and Gordon's work at second.

Saturday's game with the Meds was another walk-over for the Seniors. The score was 13 to 3. For seven innings the Meds were shut out, but in the eighth and ninth, by bunching hits, they reached home three times. Mann, for the Meds, and Willcox J., for the Seniors, did the best batting.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We owe our subscribers and friends an apology for holding back this issue of The Tar Heel, but we trust a word or two will suffice to explain its tardiness and to justify us in this act. As this will be our last issue before commencement we deemed it advisable to hold the paper over until this week in order to publish an account of the Johns Hopkins-Carolina debate and also an account of the Georgetown game.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to an article in this issue relative to the prospective Y. M. C. A. Building, and to endorse the earnest efforts put forth by the present management towards supplying this long-felt need of more room and better equipment for Y. M. C. A. purposes. These young men are deserving of great praise for their earnestness and untiring labor in this matter and they have the best wishes of us all for the success of this noble project.

We may add here that, by request, The Tar Heel editors have willingly consented to turn the paper over to the Y. M. C. A., after our commencement issue, and let them print a special Y. M. C. A. edition, giving an account of the great work the Y. M. C. A. is doing at the University and setting forth their needs, plans, etc. This special edition will appear about June 13.

As we announced sometime ago, Mr. Sidney Lee, of England, will lecture in Gerrard Hall this evening on "Shakespeare's Life Work." Mr. Lee is best known, perhaps, as editor of the Dictionary of National Biography. He is also known to students by his Life of William Shakespeare, by his recent authorized Life of Queen Victoria, and by other writings. Since he has been in this country he has lectured at the greatest universities in the North and West. His visit here, however, is his only southern engagement. Let no lover of English literature, no admirer of the world's greatest dramatist fail to hear this famous scholar who is the world's recognized authority on Shakespeare.

Let us urge you again not to forget that a double issue of The Tar Heel will appear on June 6th giving a full account of our commencement exercises, etc. In addition to this it will contain brief reviews of this year's work in athletics and in the several departments of the University, and of the year's work in general. We firmly believe this has been the most successful year in the history of this institution and we shall produce the facts to prove it.

You had better see the business manager before you leave the Hill and order a few extra copies of The Tar Heel to be sent to your friends.

pursuing and the results we are obtaining justify our faith.

The next speaker was Mr. S. S. Robins, of North Carolina. Mr. Robins made telling use of his opening five minutes by a splendid rebuttal of the argument of his preceding opponent. Then he seemed to lose himself in the fray and began a propounding of the question that was consistent in every detail, logical in entire. It was indeed the genuine speech of a gifted debater.

A synopsis of Mr. Robins' speech is given below:

The modern conception of society is that it is not an aggregation of loose and independent units but an organism and government is the exponent of this organism. It stands for the people as a unit and consequently a general interest of the people must be an object of care to it. Although refusing to run this idea into socialism we have consistently carried it out. Public schools, government ownership, tariff and trust legislation etc. bear witness to this.

Among other things in carrying out this conception, our government has taken an active interest in our industrial life, encouraging a symmetrical development of its three divisions, agriculture, manufacturing or transportation. It has encouraged agriculture by establishing agricultural colleges and experiment stations; manufacturing by protection; on the side of transportation our railways by enormous direct subsidies, our domestic shipping by giving it monopoly rights and our merchant marine by protective duties in its early history. In every case we have been repaid a hundred-fold.

From our merchant marine the aid was withdrawn; changing conditions destroyed it and today it is practically dead. At the same time the demand for a marine of our own is infinitely greater than ever before. We are becoming a commercial people and must build up our marine for the sake of having our commerce under our own control, for the sake of business relations with the world's markets and for the sake of best and cheapest service when our marine is once established. We must have a marine in the second place because a nation with world-interests to protect and sustain must be a maritime nation, and a marine is the first element of maritime power.

Our marine being then distinctly a national interest, and being in its present condition the logical application of the American idea and of a policy tested and tried demand that our government perform part setting the merchant upon its feet again. Private enterprise has shown itself to be unable to do this. We cannot afford in the face of a necessity to substitute an inferior means of carrying out the American idea of government subsidy, we must subsidize our policy has been successful our aid repaid a hundred-fold past we have every reason to believe the same will hold for the future.

Following Mr. Robins' concluding speech for the affirmative was made by Mr. H. W. H. Meyer, of Hopkins. Though speech, on the first round, only ten minutes it was a great effort. This speech, with a few minutes rejoinder, was a complete rejoinder, and the judges' decision for the speech of the debate.

We give a brief outline of argument:

We can know the results of subsidies only by recalling our past experience. The Collins Line subsidized and reckless, gaily and corruption for Government aid paralyzed and thrift. The friends of such have argued that commerce increased by granting subsidy. But during the Pacific war a Brazilian subsidy the commerce with the countries to which lines ran actually diminished. Commerce does not follow the aid follows self-interest. Foreign will buy from us if we are produce cheaper than other countries.

The American shipping industry is one of the greatest in the world. It employs thousands of American shipyarders not has tracts aggregating $30,000,000. It is true that the American receives more wages, but because he is more efficient. Cramp has asserted that the increase in wages is more than offset by the economic superiority of the American mechanic.

The granting of subsidies signal for corruption. When the Pacific Mail Company asked for an increase in subsidy it was denied that part of the original subsidy had been spent to secure the national subsidy. Corruption stalked abroad in the halls of Congress. What happened once happened again. Eighty per cent of the world's trade is carried in British tramp steamers which have received one cent of subsidy, but not for the people's abiding faith in the shrewd foresight, and the commercial ability of the American people. Our cause, confident that this denial nor controverted.

The closing speech was made by Mr. R. O. Everett. In his rejoinder, Mr. Everett proved him in rejoinder and made very effective use of his opening minutes in direct rebuttal. He followed this up with a fine speech, delivered with ease and force—one leaving a deep impression of the earnestness of his words and revealing a diligent study of the practical side of the question. It was a twin brother to Mr. Robins' speech in every way.

Mr. Everett said in part: Although the American people constitute but 18 per cent of the human race, yet they produce 25 per cent. of the raw material and 33 per cent. of all the manufactured goods. Or in other words, one-third of our annual production must be disposed of in foreign markets. This condition makes the world's markets of vital importance to our future development.

The marine now as the great agent for facilitating foreign trade, becomes an absolute necessity.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE TAR HEEL.

The University to Have a Young Men's Christian Association Building.

To the alumni and friends of the University we are glad to announce that a crowning effort is now going to be made to give the students of the University of North Carolina a building for their Young Men's Christian Association. Those who know best the inner life of the institution are cognizant of the fact that Christianity has always had its place here. But one of the greatest hindrances to the most effective work of the Christian young men has been their inability to get their work prominently before so large a body of students. For many years past much good has been accomplished through the Young Men's Christian Association.

It now holds two religious meetings each week, conducts four regular systematic courses in the study of the Bible, one mission study class, and one course in "God's method of training personal workers."

Hitherto, the Association has had no regular place for carrying on its extended system of work; and for some time it has been recognized that the success of the Association has been greatly impeded by this sad lack. Acting on this knowledge, the officers of the Association several years ago drew a plan for a $20,000 building and secured subscriptions to the amount of $10,000. The remainder has not yet been given.

Arrangements are now being made whereby the plans formerly drawn shall be carried out. During the ensuing vacation Messrs. R. M. Harper, President Association, C. P. Russell, Secretary, and Z. V. Judd, retiring Vice-President will make a tour of the State, giving the friends of this movement an opportunity to have a hand in its execution.

Later, a special issue of THE TAR HEEL will set forth more fully the plans in hand.

Foot-ball Prospects for 1903.

It is too early to give an accurate estimate of the team which will represent Carolina on the gridiron next fall; however, it is not improper to say a few words concerning our prospects for a team. Just now it looks as if we were going to have the strongest team in the history of the University.

When Captain Jones issues the call for candidates next fall, all of last year's strong team will report for practice save the two guards, and it has been learned that Hester, our star guard for 1901, will be on hand to fill one of those places. Also there is to be an unusual amount of new material.

With this old material to build upon, it cannot be doubted that Coach Olcott will give us a winning team. It is very gratifying to the members of the old team and to the entire student body to know that Mr. Olcott is to be here again. Though he was with us but a short time, still we learned to love him. We have absolute confidence in his ability to coach our team, and the members of the team would do anything for him. We heard one of the team say after Coach talked to them before the Virginia game "I would play harder to win for his sake than for any other living man." Coach Olcott will receive a very hearty welcome back here next fall or any time he may choose to come.

Manager Smith has already completed his schedule which appears below. Mr. Smith is to be congratulated both on his excellent schedule and on completing it so early. A glance at the cities where we will play will assure you that money will be made at every game.

ed, as they produce, as they manufacture, so will they transport the material to the foreign consumer.

As for the rejoinders we can but voice words of praise for all. Every speaker conducted himself with ease and grace and won the applause and admiration of the audience. As for Carolina, Robins and Everett were at their best, attacking and answering with ability and force the arguments of their strong opponents. As for Hopkins we render that deserved praise which their stubborn fight merited. Mr. Plaggemeyer's rejoinder was the best speech of the occasion—truly an eloquent appeal from a talented debater.

The following is the substance of Mr. Blum's rejoinder:

In the days of wooden ships we carried the commerce of the world. The change from wood to iron gave Great Britain the advantage because of the superior development of her iron industry. But conditions have changed. Steel plates can now be bought cheaper in this country than in England. Sir Christopher Furness visited American ship yards a little over a year ago and placed an order for twelve ships to cost $4,000,000. These ships are to be sailed under the British flag. Surely this proves conclusively that Americans can build as cheaply as they can be built in England.

Subsidies are an opening wedge for corruption. Our financial legislation is particularly open to corrupt influences. We subsidized the Pacific Railroads, and it cost the country more than it would have built and equipped these roads. The only difference is that the promoters became millionaires and the people paid heavier taxes. Government aid would be more effective if it took the form of preferential duties. If preferential duties are granted to goods imported in American ships, there will be a certain demand for our ships, the goods imported will be sold cheaply, and the consumer will reap the benefit.

The substance of Mr. Plaggemeyer's rejoinder was as follows:

All industries should be encouraged, but there is no more reason for subsidizing our merchant marine than for subsidizing our steel industry. If transportation is an insuperable barrier to cheap production, then we had better not transport our products. We condemn any scheme which will place a perpetual burden upon the American people.

The Minnesota, recently launched, is to be used by the Great Northern Railway to carry its traffic on the Pacific. All of our great trunk lines are making agreements which will enable them to control their traffic to its destination beyond the oceans. The great trusts own ships which carry their products. Subsidies mean, then, money paid by the people to enrich the railroads and trusts. It has been argued that we should grant subsidies because the American laborer receives more wages. Our laborers receive more wages because they are more alert, more intelligent, and better able to meet emergencies. We realized first of all the world the economy of high wages.

Subsidies feed upon subsidies and if once they are granted they must be continually increased. The war of subsidies has already begun abroad and France is experiencing yearly deficits and Germans are groaning under excessive taxation.

Subsidies should not be granted because ships can be built here as cheaply as elsewhere, because subsidies have been failures in this country, because corruption will follow the granting of subsidies, because either free ships, tax exemption, or preferential duties offer a better method of increasing our merchant marine.

The judges were Hon. Jas. H. Pou, Prof. Edwin Mims and Hon. John E. Woodard.

GEORGETOWN DEFEATED.

No Match for Carolina---Outplayed at Every Point by Our Team.

After defeating all rivals in the South, the sons of North Carolina came to Georgetown Saturday, and what their ball players did to the local collegians is a tale of sadness to the Blue and Gray. After dragging the Georgetown colors on the ground for two hours or more, they hoisted their own blue and white flag on the staff, while they were declared the victors by the score of 13 to 4.

Not for six years have the Washington boys been beaten so decisively. There is no excuse Georgetown can make. The visitors played ball; Georgetown did not. That tells the story.

Carolina played one of the finest games seen on Georgetown Field for many a day. The men kept their eye on the sphere all the time, and when it came to swatting the leather they were there with the triple-plated articles and delivered the goods. Their fielding was sensational. Oldham, in center, eating up a couple of the most difficult chances imaginable. Giles, in right, covered as much territory as two ordinary fielders would and pulled in a couple of cracks that were making their way to the famous "gully." Cheshire, at second, took care of his nine chances without a miscue. Holt, at first, was there with the fielding goods. He also banded one of Fay's curves to the outer lot for three bases.

Green, the visitors' twirler, looked easy when he first took his place in the box, the local boys soon finding the same to be true. They banded the leather to all parts of the lot, but the fleet-footed fielders would make hair-raising catches and soul-stirring stops and boost the twirlers stock. With the same support afforded him yesterday Green could pitch on forever and be victorious. He worked in three bingles with his willow, two homers over the right field embankment, while the third was a single to left.

For Georgetown, they all played more or less miserable ball, the pitchers specially being at fault. Georgetown led off in the first, Dorman going down and out at first. Morgan was given a base on balls. Apperious was safe on an infield crack, Hart getting a single to left with a man on each bag. McGettigan flew out to Oldham, Morgan scoring on the out. Burns went out, from Cheshire to Holt.

Oldham was presented with a base by Seitz, in their half, Carr fanned, while Donnelly was safe on McGettigan's error, Oldham going to third. Donnelly attempted to steal second, Apperious throwing to catch him, no one covering the base. Oldham and Donnelly scored while Drake was making an error on the ball in center field. Holt was given a base on balls, while Giles was also given a souvenir by the courteous Mr. Seitz. Cheshire hit to Dorman, who forced Giles at second. Noble was given a base by Seitz, while Smathers lifted the first hit to center, scoring Holt and Cheshire, Noble, who also tried to score on the same, was put out by Apperious. The second, third, and fourth rounds were blanks for Georgetown. Seitz was sent to the bench and Johnnie Fay was trotted out of the stable.

Green, the first to face his former school-mate, hit it on the ear for a single to left. Burns, the left guardsmen, made a fluke, the ball rolling out to the batting net, Green making the circuit. The next three were easy outs. The "Tar Heels" added a pair of runs in the third. Holt fanned; Giles singled to left, Cheshire landing one in the right garden. Fay made a wild pitch, scoring Giles, while Cheshire went to third. Noble hit one to left, scoring Cheshire. Smathers hit a high fly to Dorman, who returned it to Dowling, doubling Noble at first.

Dorman, the first man up in the fifth, lifted one over the right field embankment, making the circuit of the bases. Morgan went out to Oldham, Apperious at first. Hart singled and died, McGettigan going out to Giles. Green, in the fifth, lifted one over the embankment for a homer. Oldham fouled to Morgan. Carr was given a base on balls, while Donnelly forced him at second. Holt straightened one out for three bags, scoring Donnelly.

In the sixth North Carolina made two more. Oldham singled, Carr and Donnelly went out in order. Holt singled to right, Hart afterwards erring, which allowed Oldham to score, the hitter going to third. Giles singled, scoring Holt. Morgan errored on Cheshire's hit to him, while Noble fanned.

The local boys made one in the seventh. Dorman was given a base and stole second while Green was holding the ball. Morgan went out at first. Apperious singled, Hart went out from Cheshire to Holt, Dorman scoring. In their half the visitors added two more. Smathers hit for one, while Green followed it up by his second drive over the right field embankment for four cushions.

The Blue and Gray added their last run in the ninth, Capt. Apperious smashing the sphere over the track in center field for a home run. As luck happened, there was no one on bases at the time.

—The Crimson-White,

THE TIE GAME.

Score was 15 to 15—A High Wind Prevented Fast Playing—Heavy Hitting.

Three hours and five minutes! This ought to do for a ball game, and satisfy the most exacting, so far at least, as being "entertained" is concerned. This was the exact time required to play the game between North Carolina and Virginia at Cone Athletic Park in this city yesterday afternoon. And the score! It was only 15 to 15! The tie was not played off on account of the late hour, the teams having to catch an evening train.

It was an awful game, yet strange to say it was interesting from start to finish—interesting because of the evenness of the score. First one side and then the other led and it was a hard fought battle.

The Record has an excuse for the game and it is valid. The wind was high all the time and the dirt and dust that filled the eyes of the players, and especially the pitchers, would start a brick yard to work.

The result was that the man at the bat had a cinch and he just knocked the ball anywhere and everywhere. Only six men were struck out on both sides during the entire game. Oh, says some one this had nothing to do with it; other teams don't do such work wind or no wind. But they do. High winds prevailed over most of the country yesterday, and the big league teams show scores from ten to fourteen. Wind is bad enough, but dirt and dust just put the pitcher at the mercy of the batter. On the diamond here it was made worse, for the pitcher faced the south-west, from which point of the compass the wind came, and he got all that was coming to him and a great deal more, while the batter had his back to the breeze, and caught all the dirt down the back of his neck.

At no stage of the game was it possible to determine the outcome, so well were the teams matched. A conservative estimate places the attendance at 2,000, though the management said there were only 1,700 paid admissions.

Track Team.

On Thursday next, May 7th, is the preliminary meet of the track team to determine who shall go to Charlottesville on the 15th. Prizes will be given in each event to those who come next to the ones making the team, but no one who is selected to go to Virginia will receive anything. The object is to offer inducement to all competitors and get as large a number out as possible. Fifteen men will be taken but it is the present intention to include anyone who may show up to the required form even after the Thursday meet. Two men one from each University will enter each event. No third places will be counted, first and second being 5 and 3 respectively. Coach Von den Stein expresses himself as hopeful although not as many men as should, have been out and the unusual amount of rain this spring has broken up a good deal of the practice. It should be remembered, however, that our track is rather soft and gives too much beneath the weight of the runners, so our records will show up better than they seem. The base ball men will have some training by the meet and some good material may be forthcoming.

Some of the men entering the various events will be for the 100-yards-dash, Irwin who needs no mention and McNeill whose feat of doing the dash in 10½ recently on his first appearance excited some little comment; 220 yards McNeill, Irwin, Wilson and Newton. All these men are fast and will probably reduce the 23¼ in which they are now running.

440: Wilson, Mears, Newton, Perry and Oldham.

880: Berkely, Frost, Harris, and Smathers.

Mile: Cash, Calder R., Sifford, Bridgers. Calder M. and Thorpe who ran so well a year or two ago are not out.

High hurdle: Wilson, Yelverton, Oldham.

Low hurdle: Same men. Both events will be fast.

High jump: Wilson, Newton, McNeill. Best so far has been 5 ft. 4 in.

Broad jump: same men but not so good as the High jump.

Pole Vault: Crawford has it all to himself but is not in the same form Council and Linville used to show by a good deal.

The hammer and shot as yet are weak but may improve when Donnelly and Oldham come out.

The relay team will be selected Thursday. There are a good many fast dash men and so its chances are good.

The team as a whole has shown up well in the track work, the sprints, hurdles, etc., but is not what it should be with the weights. Several good men are to come out from the base ball squad: Oldham, Donnelly, Smathers and Harris among them. Wilson, Newton, Irwin, and McNeill look now as if they will be the greatest point winners. The team will have to work hard to win, and have some good men against them, Council and Bass, but the odds are by no means so unfavorable as when four men brought back 41 points and the championship of the South in the meet at New Orleans two years ago.

Washington and Lee Game.

In Roanoke, Virginia, last Friday afternoon before a large number of spectators and about two hundred sick and disappointed Washington and Lee students, the base ball team that now holds, for the first time in six years, the Championship of the South, defeated Washington and Lee University by the overwhelming score of 13 to 1. The "Tar Heels" had heard much of the ability of the base ball players composing the Washington and Lee team and fully expected to run up against the real article, but as the score indicates there was no comparison between the two teams.

For over four innings the Virginians held the Tar Heels down remarkably well, not allowing them to score, but in the fifth Giles, Donnelly, Holt, Cheshire, in fact, the entire team, jumped on the Washington and Lee pitcher and laced out seven hits netting a grand total of seven runs. After this inning Carolina scored almost at will.

Hart, for Carolina, pitched a brilliant game allowing only two hits to the Virginians.

Death of Lee Bruner.

On Wednesday morning the Angel of Death visited the home of one of our faculty, and removed from it one of its loved ones. Lee Moulton, three year old son of Dr. J. D. Bruner, after a few days illness, was taken from his parents by the Hand that gave him. He was yet too young to know of the struggles and the evil of the world about him. He was taken in his innocence to the Land where struggles and evils are unknown. He still lives without the knowledge of them. While we sympathize with the bereaved family in their loss we would point them to the Great Physician, who does all things well and who heals grief as well as pain.

With the Societies.

In the Phi. society, on last Saturday night, the question for debate was "Resolved: That it is not the educated man that takes the lead in American life." The negative won. Mr. McNider made the best speech.

The query in the Di. Society the same night was "Resolved: That the United States should accept Cuban reciprocity." The committee reported in favor of the affirmative, and reported Mr. Chas. Ross as best debater.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

The One Hundred and Eighth Annual Commencement.

LARGEST GRADUATING CLASS SINCE THE WAR.

Commencement Address by Wm. J. Holland, LL.D., of Pennsylvania—Sermon by Rt. Rev. Alfred Magill Randolph, D.D., of Virginia—Alumni Address by John Sprunt Hill—Address by Chief Justice Walter Clark—Number of Visiting Alumni.

At eleven o'clock Sunday morning the graduating class lined up in double file at the Old South Building and marched to Gerrard Hall where, after a strong prayer by Bishop Cheshire of Raleigh, N. C., the Baccalaureate Sermon was delivered by Right Reverend Alfred Magill Randolph, D. D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Virginia, from the Epistle to the Romans, Chapter 8, verse 3, "For what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh that we might become the righteousness of God in Him."

It was a masterly presentation of the strength, the restraining influence and the disciplinary effect on character and life of law, with reference to the further aim of living, that this majestic force is after all weak and it cannot transform the heart out of which are the issues of life. The great Roman civilization was based on the perfect outward administration of the most remarkable code of laws, and the civilization becoming rotten to the core had no saving virtue in itself. The most learned and accomplished jurist of his age, one of the intellectual wonders of the world, Lord Bacon, in his last prayer bewailed the fact that he himself who had studied and "practised" the law so thoroughly had violated grossly its spirit and its precepts and could cast himself only on the forgiving grace of Him who is the Source and Creator of all Law. The evidence goes that the proclamation of law and its execution cannot regenerate the affections and vitalize the soul. The weak "flesh," the sinful "self," needs the transforming touch of divine grace and love, the re-creative power which Christ alone can impart. It is well that the University education gained here gives more for the appeal to the conscience by way of the heart, for vain would all your culture be if you did not with a full sense of your sin bring your guilty nature to the cleansing blood and the atoning sacrifice.

The Bishop's closing sentences were charged with the tenderest feeling of a father in Israel. His spiritual unction, his stately eloquence, the vigor and depth of his exposition of Scripture and his attractive personality combined to give a deep impression to a noble Gospel Message.

He was the guest of Rev. Dr. Meade, to whose saintly grandfather, Bishop Wm. Meade, he is in spirit and character a true descendant.

Y. M. C. A. SERMON.

A new feature in the program of Commencement this year was the sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association delivered by Rev. Thomas R. English, D.D. of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va. It was an able presentation of a great topic.

The sermon of Dr. English was on the great question, is life worth living?

He contrasts the views of Job in his grief and sorrow; of Solomon in Ecclesiastes with his cry, "Vanity of vanities; all is vanity;" of Paul exulting in the crown of righteousness he shall one day receive. Job's life had been one of peace and prosperity; he had rejoiced in the things of this world and then when adversity came upon him in his bitterness and grief he declares that life is not worth living and curses the day on which he was born. Solomon's life had been one round of pleasure. He had drunk deep of the cup of folly; and then he looks back on his life, the cry of his heart is, "All is vanity and vexation of spirit." So it is with all those who live this life for what there is in it and have no thought beyond the things of the world.

There have been others like Solomon. Byron, Goethe, and many others well known in history, have gone into this life to get the most out of it and the final verdict of all is, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity."

Then against these we have the opinion of Paul. He lived a life of unselfishness and self-denial; he kept his eyes fixed on things above and when his labors were nearly ended he looked back on his life and felt that he had fought a good fight—"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

So we find that life is not an end in itself but only a means to an end. Life is like a scaffold to a great building. It is not a great thing in itself, but as a means to an end, it is great. So we come to the conclusion that life is worth living, not for what we can get out of it but as a means to an end.

INTER-SOCIETY BANQUET.

The annual joint banquet of the Di and Phi literary societies held in Commons Hall Monday evening was a source of much pleasure and entertainment. Thirty minutes before the appointed time the alumni, faculty and active members gathered in front of Commons Hall. Hearty handshakes and cordial greetings were indulged in on every side and the meetings of "old" college boys added genuine liveliness to the scene.

At 8 o'clock the doors were opened. The members marched in, and a sense of joy thrilled them as they looked upon the long tables, couched in roses and shrouded in dainty white linen spreads. The Di men took their seats on the right and the Phi men took theirs on the left. It was a great sight to see a hundred and fifty old college boys, among them many of the State's leading men, indulging in the fond renewal of old acquaintances and the happy greeting of their younger fellow society members. It was more than a great sight—it was a grand sight—to see men who have been out in the world, gray haired men, captains of industry and leaders in the various professions, seated beside the young fellows, telling them rich experiences of the past, cautioning them with advice and lighting their hopes and youthful expectations.

Mr. Graham H. Andrews proved a wise selection as toast master and conducted himself with ease and dignity. An elaborate banquet of a number of courses was served by Mr. Dughi, of Raleigh.

The following toasts offered between courses, were fitting and appropriate:

Address of Welcome, Toastmaster.

Response, Hon. Frederick Phillips.

"The Societies Today," Mr. Chas. Ross.

"The Place of the Societies in the University," Mr. R. W. Herring.

"Literary Value of the Societies," Dr. C. A. Smith.

"Reminiscences," Dr. K. P. Battle.

Address, Judge Walter Clark.

Judge Clark spoke with force and earnestness for the "Greater University."

"The State," said Judge Clark, "has never made a better investment than what she has done here. What she has done for her sons here has been repaid by them a thousand fold in every sphere of activity. But this State has never yet done her duty to this great institution."

The speaker showed himself to be deeply moved and sincere in his statements. He gave statistics showing what other states have done for their great Universities. Beside these appropriations our appropriations are pitifully small.

CLASS DAY.

Tuesday, the day of class exercises, opened fair and bright. The rain clouds that had been hanging overhead were gone. The rains had laid the dust and made the air cool and refreshing. It was an ideal day.

The exercises were begun at 9:30 with a prayer for the graduating class, in the chapel, by Dr. Hume.

After reading suitable passages from the Holy Writ and commenting on them, Dr. Hume talked to the class tenderly and feelingly as a father to his children who are going out into the world to fight life's battles, and every one present was touched by his words. The passage he gave as a motto he wished to be written on every heart is found in the 31st verse of the 40th chapter of Isaiah: "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint."

Before an audience consisting of our most honored alumni and the first citizens of the state, the class day exercises of the class of 1903, were held in Gerrard Hall. The hall was tastefully decorated in the University colors with two large United States flags in the back of the room. Excellent orchestral music was furnished during the exercises.

At 10:30 the Senior Class, in caps and gowns, marched into the hall, lead by the Chief Marshal. Their president, Mr. R. S. Stewart, made the address of welcome to the audience and alumni. Mr. Stewart's address was full of affection for his Alma Mater and of gratitude

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

With this issue of the Tar Heel the duties and obligations of the present board of editors are ended. Since the management of the Tar Heel has been in our hands we have made an earnest effort to give our readers the best paper possible with the limited amount of time we have had to devote to the work.

We take this opportunity of offering our sincere thanks to the students and members of the faculty who have from time to time so generously aided us by contributions and advice. Especially are we grateful to Messrs. J. K. Wilson and N. R. Graham who have so greatly aided us in getting out this issue.

There is one fault—a greivous one—in connection with our commencement and one the students may remedy with a little sacrifice. It is, and has been, a noticeable fact that very few professional and undergraduate students stay over for commencement. Of course many of us have to leave, but can we not all undergo a little sacrifice to add to the pleasure of our commencement? Certainly we can, for there are boys that stay who are just as much at a sacrifice as you would be, boys who are just as poor and others just as rich. You, whoever you are, owe it to your college—you know your college spirit prompts it—and the University calls for your final support.

Those who remained this year were repaid a hundred fold. It is all over now, but next year let more students stay, show your interest in your college by giving it a little of your vacation. You will form acquaintances here that you will never regret and make friends that will be of untold help to you in after life. We are not criticising but asking for your support.

Dr. W. J. Holland's splendid address to the graduating class, a brief report of which we publish, is worthy of more than special mention. It was a powerful appeal to the young graduates; a word of kindly advice,—of wisdom—fitly spoken. It made a profound impression, and left the decided opinion that there was a man behind the speech who believed what he said and who lives it in his daily life.

Some of our State papers have erroneously stated that Dr. Howe, who has been elected to the chair of Latin in the University, is the son of a distinguished South Carolina divine. This is a mistake; he is the son of a prominent physician of our sister State.

ALUMNI ADDRESS.

Delivered by John Sprunt Hill—A Brief Synopsis.

Mr. Hill said: "I have come here today on a mission of love and devotion to the State that gave me birth and to the institution of learning that gave me a thousand times more than I can ever repay. The force of my remarks, therefore, will be directed toward doing something for the good of the University.

What is the University of North Carolina? Is it a creation of a few individuals or of a whole public? Is it a private corporation or is it a public corporation? A clear understanding of these legal questions is not often found among our individuals, and I am satisfied from a personal investigation that the misunderstanding of the exact legal status of the University in the minds of many of the best citizens of our State has militated against its proper support, and narrowed its usefulness.

The Legislature of 1789 in pursuance to the mandate of the first Constitution, providing that 'all useful learning shall be duly encouraged and promoted in one or more Universities,' passed as 'An act to establish a University in this state.' This act made full and complete provisions for the organization of the institution. So forty of her greatest men, representing all sections of the state were declared to be 'a body politic and corporate,' under the name of 'The Trustees of the University of North Carolina' and were granted perpetual succession.

... In 1795 the institution became fully organized and opened its doors to students. It remained for our truly great jurist, Thos. Ruffin, to lay down the full legal principles governing this charter. 'The University,' he said 'is a public institution and body politic and hence subject to legislative control. ... It was founded by the state on public funds and for a general public charity.' Benevolence is, therefore, the mainspring of its existence."

Mr. Hill spoke for a brief period on the early struggles of the University, dwelling strongly upon the hopes of its founders.

"How abundantly," he continued, "the hopes of our fathers in establishing this institution have been fulfilled is a grand and glorious record. Its story brings a thrill of pride to the heart of every loyal son of the 'Old North State.' One has but to look around him today to see the splendid examples of the affective fruitfulness and public service of this institution."

The speaker then spoke, with much consideration, upon the great needs of the University. He showed what a great work the University was doing for the State, but he talked especially of how great a work is to be done. And "with the rising tide of public spirit in North Carolina, and the irresistible movement for educated citizenship we may expect a larger view and a more generous consideration of higher education,—such as the University offers."

In this connection Mr. Hill paid a splendid tribute to the efforts of our beloved and honored President, Dr. F. P. Venable. "The nobility of his efforts, the greatness of his sacrifice, the wonderful fruitfulness of his labors evoke our highest admiration and call for our most earnest and intelligent co-operation."

In speaking of the work of the University he said, "no institution on earth has a more tender hold on the affections of the individual alumnus than this University. The love of the Chapel Hillian for his Alma Mater evokes all the poetry that lies hid in his innermost heart. Locate him where you will, in New York, Chicago, Galveston, his love for this hallowed place follows him on and on. He is like the vase in which roses have been instilled;

'You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, But the scent of the roses will hang around it still.'

The following Magazine editors have been elected for next year: Editor-in-Chief, N. W. Walker, Phi; Business Manager, A. H. Johnston, Di; associate editors, E. S. W. Dameron, R. M. Harper and F. McLean from the Phi, and W. C. Rankin, H. B. Haywood, N. R. Graham, from the Di.

Dr. Venable, Dr. Smith and Prof. Noble will speak at the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly, which meets at Wrightsville next week. Dr. Venable is president of the assembly.

Dr. William J. Holland, the eminent zoölogist, geologist, astronomer, and educator, of the Carnegie Institute, who was our commencement orator, was the guest of Prof. Collier Cobb during the week. He and Prof. Cobb have hunted the festive dinosaur together in the fossil fields of Wyoming.

A writer in a juvenile magazine lately gathered a number of dictionary words as defined by certain people, of which the following seem genuine:

- Dust—Mud with the juice squeezed out.
- Monkey—A very small boy with a tail.
- Pig—A hog's little boy.
- Salt—What makes your potatoes taste bad when you don't put any on.
- Wakefulness—Eyes all the time coming unbuttoned.

for her fostering care of the class of 1903. It was a speech that did honor to the position that he filled.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

"As president of the graduating class, I extend to each of you a welcome to these exercises. As we stand here today our feelings alternate between gladness and sadness. We are glad that our ancestors founded this University, where the flower of the young manhood of the state may be trained. We are grateful for the assistance of loved ones, the mother, the father, the sister, the brother. Mr. President, we extend to you and your faculty our sincerest thanks. We are largely the creatures of your fashioning. Above all else you have made us gentlemen. This class has done much for the University. It has furnished leaders in every phase of college life. It is with sadness, therefore, that we leave these walls. But we realize that the day has come, not gone. Hereafter the University will have no more loyal class on which to lean than the class of 1903."

CLASS HISTORY.

After music by the orchestra, the president introduced Mr. R. W. Herring, the class historian. Mr. Herring's history related the work of the class during its four years in college. When it entered, Dr. Alderman said it was the largest, best prepared, and handsomest class that had ever come to college. As to the first of these statements, the records of the University testify. As to the second, the work done by the class gives ample proof. Regarding the last statement, Mr. Herring said that either Dr. Alderman wished to make the class feel good by flattery, a device of which he was always fond, or else time had wrought a great change in its members. When they entered they underwent all the experiences common to all freshmen. They outlived this, however, and have spent the rest of their college life in comparative ease. They have done well in athletics, holding the class championship for four years, and furnishing more men for the Varsity than any other class. They have had a larger number of Alpha Theta Phi men than any other class, and have furnished men who have represented Carolina with success in our intercollegiate debates.

CLASS PROHECY.

The class prophecy was read by Mr. T. J. Gold. He began by saying that his class had elected him to the exalted position of prophet, really not believing that the veil of the future would be lifted to him. He pictured, however, the figures of Harry Stevens, the hustling manager of the newsy newspaper, whose editor, Marshall Glenn, is a bureau of information within himself; of "Bully" Jones, the clothing dealer; of Morrow and Huske, the air ship builders, who measure with mathematical exactness, the distance to the moon; of Walker, the editor of the Southern Daily; and of the hollow-eyed philosopher whose revolving universe spell, in lurid letters "Giles' Shirts 65c." Before the VIRGINIA WINS FIELD MEET.

Fifty-six Points, Against Forty-five by North Carolina.

Charlottesville, Va., May 15.—In the first annual dual track and field meet between the University of North Carolina and University of Virginia, held here this afternoon, Virginia won on the total number of events, 56 to 45. The track at Lambeth Field, new and of variable hardness, was regarded as perhaps two seconds slow to the quarter, and hence only one Virginia record was smashed, Capt. Shelton clipping off a full second in the quarter mile run. In the recent meet with Johns Hopkins, in Baltimore, Shelton made even better time, 51 1-5 seconds, breaking the Maryland record by two fifths of a second. Bass was in splendid shape, and easily won the 100 and 220 yard dashes by good margins.

In the hurdling events Carolina carried off all the honors, Wilson having superior endurance over both Grant and Boogher. As in the Hopkins meet, the Virginia men proved weak in the mile run, James, who had been picked as a winner, being almost completely exhausted, the Carolina runners winning first and second places. In the pole vault Crawford, of Carolina, had an ugly fall, dislocating his left shoulder and badly spraining a wrist. Council had a walk-over in the hammer throw and putting the shot.

In the mile relay race Virginia had everything her own way, Carolina leading only in the first quarter. Summaries:

100 yard dash—Virginia won with S. P. Bass; Irwin, Carolina, second. Time, 0:10 2-5.

120 yard high hurdle—Carolina won with Wilson; H. C. Grant, Virginia, second. Time, 0:17 2-5.

880-yard run—Virginia won with R. E. McCabe; Cash, Carolina, second. Time, 2:17 1-5.

220-yard dash—Virginia won with Bass; Irwin, Carolina, second. Time 0:22 2-5.

220-yard low hurdle—Carolina won with Wilson; Boogher, Virginia, second. Time, 0:27 2-5.

Pole vault—Virginia won with J. Russell; Crawford, Carolina, second. Distance, 9 feet 5 inches.

Mile run—Carolina won with Calder; Cash second. Time, 5:06 1/2.

440-yard run—Virginia won with J. H. Shelton; A. P. Gray second. Time, 0:52. Wilson, Carolina, also ran.

Running high jump—Newton, Carolina, and Edwin Holladay, Virginia, tied for first and second places. Distance, 5 feet 6 inches.

Hammer throw—Virginia won with W. W. Council, distance, 103 feet 6 inches; Newton, Carolina, second, distance, 86 feet 3 inches.

Broad jump—Carolina won with Berkeley, distance, 20 feet 5 inches; Russell, Virginia, second, distance, 20 feet 1 inch.

Throwing 16-pound shot—Virginia won with Council, distance, 38 feet 3 1-5 inches; Newton, Carolina, second, distance, 34 feet 5 1-2 inches.

One mile relay—Virginia won with Grant; Gray, Shelton and Bass.—Washington Post, May 16.

Death of Mr. Hudson.

Franklin Simms Hudson, '05, died Friday afternoon, May 15th, 1903, of an acute attack of dysentery.

Mr. Hudson was of Cassville, Tenn., but during his two years stay among us, he had become thoroughly identified with our University life. He had wide acquaintance among the student body and was universally regarded as a bright student and a zealous Christian man.

We understand that Mr. Hudson was expecting to devote his life to missionary work, and that he was working his way through college to prepare himself for this work.

The Dialectic Society, of which he was a member, took charge of his remains, and had his body embalmed and sent to his home in Tennessee for interment.

The student body and faculty, together with the great number of country people round about Chapel Hill, where he has done such faithful work in their Sunday schools, all join in the grief of the brother, sister and other relatives and friends, for the seeming untimely end of a life so young and so full of hope and Christian service.

8. A course in modern English: a Grammar for the common schools, now being published by the B. F. Johnson Publishing Co., Richmond, Va., will be completed June 20.

DR. BRUNER.

Dr. Bruner has signed contract with The American Book Co., to prepare for them an edition of Victor Hugo's Hernani, with literary introduction, notes and a vocabulary.

He has just sent to the new journal, Modern Philology, published by The University of Chicago, an article on, "The Fate of Intervocalic Medio-Palatal c before e and i in Popular Latin and old French."

DR. HUME.

Dr. Thomas Hume lectured at Burlington, N. C., May 16th on "Cyrus, the Servant of Jehovah" and May 17th before the Young People's Union, on, "Training for Service." He delivered the commencement discourse at Liberty Normal College on "The Child in the Temple," May 24th, and at night on "An Ancient Saint." May 29th he spoke at Durham on the "Spirit of Missions." Dr. Hume will give a paper before the Southern Educational Association, Asheville, N. C., July 2, on "Literature in Common Schools," and July 3 (before the "Child Study Section") an address on the Child and the Bible School. He has several engagements in Virginia and North Carolina during the Summer for educational and literary addresses.

DR. VENABLE.

Dr. Venable delivered the address before the graduating class in Medicine in the University of Maryland at Baltimore, May 19th.

DR. BATTLE.

Dr. Kemp P. Battle has published, during the last Academic year,

1. History of North Carolina in the year 1802; address delivered at the Centennial Anniversary of Salem Female School, appearing serially in the Wachovia Moravian and Raleigh Morning Post.

2. Raleigh and the old town of Bloomsbury; one of the North Carolina History Leaflet series.

3. James Glassglow and the Supreme Court of North Carolina; one of the North Carolina History leaflet series.

4. Condensed history of North Carolina, published in the Washington, D C., Home Magazine, February and March 1903.

5. Sketches of Nathaniel Macon, John Steele, Wm. Barry Grove, and James Hogg; and also 32 pages of annotations to their letters; published in James Sprunt Historical Monograph No. 3.

6. Review of journal of Philip Fithian; history of the abortive Delphian Society of the University of North Carolina. The obstacles by the State of Tennessee to the location of the escheated Land Warrants, belonging to the University of North Carolina, Historical Society meetings.

7. History of two Caldwell Monuments on the North Carolina University Campus. In University Magazine 1903.

Dr. Battle delivered the following addresses and lectures.

Before the University Summer Law School, on Anecdotes of the North Carolina Bar, August, 1902.

Address on the Constitutional History of the State, delivered before the meeting of the teachers of Caldwell county at Granite Falls, July, 1902.

movements, and furnished illustrations with notes for LeConte's Elements of Geology, Chamberlain and Salisbury's Geology, and several other text-books.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, On May 15th, 1903, Mr. Franklin Simms Hudson was called from our midst by the summons of death; and that in his death we lose a member who has always been faithful and zealous in the discharge of every duty imposed upon him; and that we lose a friend who by his sympathetic interest, by his kindly deeds and by his Christian devotion, has proved himself worthy of our sincerest respect, therefore, be it resolved:

First, That our hearts are saddened by the taking away of this our fellow-member and faithful friend.

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Di Society, that they be printed in the Tar Heel, and that a copy of the same, as a token of our deep sympathy, be sent to the bereaved family.

VIRGINIA DEFEATED.

Carolina Wins the Championship of the South.

Last Saturday May 9 the largest crowd that has yet assembled on the new field saw Virginia lose the title of Champion of the South, which she has so successfully defended since '96.

Carolina won the game on its merits, outfielding and outhitting Virginia. The score fails to show how Virginia hit the ball, as Carolina's brilliant fielding saved Green a hit when it would have counted. Donnelly in left field, Giles in right and Holt and Cheshire in the infield, all distinguished themselves. For Virginia, Pritchard's steadiness and Mason's and Stearns' fielding were features. Stuckey's pluck in sticking to it after he had received a swift one in the ribs during the second inning, in worthy of the little shortstop, since the blow kept him almost doubled with pain during the remaining innings.

The tabulated score follows:

Meeting of Philological Club.

The Philological Club held its regular monthly meeting in Alumni Hall on Tuesday evening, May 5th. The meeting was well attended and interesting. Several very instructive papers were presented which called forth spirited discussions. The topics discussed were:

"The Adjective and Noun in Horace, Odes I." by Dr. Hadzitts.

"The Order of Words as an Explanation of Certain Problems in English Syntax," by Dr. Smith.

"Certain Points of Comparison between Ancient and Modern Greek," by Dr. Alexander.

"Some Notes on the Syntax of the Alexius Legenden," by Mr. Horney.

Commencement of Medical Department. Four Graduates Receive Their Diplomas.

The graduating exercises of the first senior class in the Medical Department were held in Gerrard Hall on the night of May 14th. There were four men to receive their diplomas, M. L. Matthews, Z. M. Caveness, W. D. Gilmore, and Wm. DeB. McNider. There were several members of the Raleigh faculty present. The exercises were begun with a prayer by Rev. N. M. Watson. Dr. Venable then introduced Dr. Henry T. Bahnsen, of Salem, the speaker of the evening.

Dr. Bahnsen spoke of the duties and responsibilities of the medical profession. He told of the many incidents peculiar to a doctor's life and illustrated them with amusing personal experiences. His remarks were well chosen and full of humor. The address was one that both instructed and entertained. It was appreciated by all.

After the address, diplomas were presented to the graduates, and the degree of Doctor of Medicine conferred upon them by Dr. Venable.

Upon the rostrum, besides the speakers, were seated Dr. Royster, the dean of the department at Raleigh, and Dr. Whitehead, dean of the department here. Music was furnished by the University Orchestra.

In speaking of the work done in the school at Raleigh, Dr. Venable said that the school was established as an experiment but had proved a far greater success than its most sanguine friends had hoped.

It has given to young North Carolinians an opportunity to get a full four years' course in medicine within their own State. The work done in the department has been of the highest order. The school has proved a complete success.

Memorial Day Exercises.

On Monday, May 11th, Memorial day was fittingly observed in Gerrard Hall, the exercises being conducted under the auspices of the Leonidas Polk Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy.

The exercises were opened with prayer by Dr. Meade, after which Dr. Venable in a most appropriate speech announced the purpose of the meeting.

Then followed the eloquent speech of Dr. Smith introducing as the orator of the occasion General Julian S. Carr.

For over an hour General Carr, who himself was a Confederate private, held the close attention of students, professors, villagers, and former companions in arms while he told in fitting terms of the fortunes and vicissitudes of the South in that memorable titanic struggle, and especially of the valor and achievements of the Orange county "boys who wore the gray."

After General Carr's address, Judge MacRae made a short speech thanking the ladies of Chapel Hill for the steps they had taken to commemorate the memory and the virtues of those noble sons of the Southland who fell in civil strife.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the University Quartet and Band.

Professor Cobb was at the Wake Forest commencement last week.

MASS MEETING.

Sweaters given to the New Players. Giles Elected Captain.

After a series of athletic victories, such as few colleges ever have, the students of the University gathered in Gerrard Hall on Monday night, May 11th, to express their gratitude to their team and to their coach for the excellent work they had done. Mr. Lewis, the president of the Athletic Association, called the meeting to order and asked Dr. Baskerville to read the names of the new members of the baseball team who had been given the right to wear the N. C. Amid applause from every part of the hall, the names of Noble, Giles, Cheshire, Hart and Green were read.

After short speeches of thanks from these men, their coach, Mr. Jack Curran, was presented with a watch, the gift of an appreciative student body. Mr. Curran thanked the students for the gift and spoke of the excellent work of our scrubs in making the Varsity a success.

George Graham, the manager of the team, announced that Mr. D. F. Giles had been elected captain for next year. The choice could have fallen on no better man.

The next thing on the program was the presentation of prizes to the winners in the field day exercises. The winners of the first and second places in the various events took part in the meet with Virginia.

The next best men received prizes. Dr. Mangum presented them as follows: 100 yard dash, G. A. Farrow, comb and brush; 220 yard dash, G. A. Farrow, shirt; Quarter mile run, B. H. Perry, jersey; Half mile run, H. B. Frost, knife; Low hurdle, P. Yelverton, umbrella; High hurdle, P. Yelverton, tennis racket; Broad jump, P. Yelverton, table; High jump, T. A. McNeil, shirt; Pole vault, G. Sibley, pipe; Putting shot, first prize, G. L. Jones, towels; second prize, N. F. Farlow, Gile's shirt; Hammer throw, first prize, Farlow, umbrella; second prize, Jones, tie; Mile run, E. Sifford, knife.

After speeches from several members of the faculty, the meeting adjourned to the old athletic field, where Captain Donnelly applied the match to a huge bonfire. The entire student body, headed by the University Band, marched around the fire singing the college songs.

Surplus to Commons Boarders.

By a rigid system of economy in all expenses except in the purchase of supplies for the tables, and as a result of the prudent management of the Matron, Commons Hall has been able to save from month to month small sums, the aggregate amount of which has been refunded to the boarders who were in the Hall during the entire session, at least until May 15.

This is the first time that Commons Hall has closed up its annual accounts with a balance to its credit. It returns the surplus in accordance with the purpose for which it was established by Mrs. Baker: to wit, that all its benefits may accrue solely and directly to the students of this University.

The list of boarders entitled to share in the surplus numbers forty-veil falls the prophet sees a vision of the class of '03 striving manfully to bring the world in closer touch with greatness, goodness and beauty.

Commencement Exercises.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT.

Mr. G. L. Jones read the last will and testament of the class. To its Alma Mater the class bequeathed its deepest and most heartfelt love. It is to her that the greatest and most belong. To the successors, the class of 1904, was given all conditions on English and receipts for laboratory fees. Damage fees were given to settle all accounts and as contribution to all purposes whatsoever. Galloway's setter-pup was given as aid to next years trigonometry class. Hawes' dipper was handed down to succeeding generations. As a last injunction to its sons before its death, the class commanded that they should meet five years after its decease, and every five years thereafter at Chapel Hill, for the purpose of honoring its memory and keeping track of each other.

ALUMNI LUNCHEON.

After the close of the class exercises for the morning, Col. Kenan, President of the Alumni Association, introduced as alumni speaker of the occasion, Mr. John Sprunt Hill of the class '89. An account of Mr. Hill's speech will be found in another column.

At 1:30 the Alumni, Trustees, graduating class, and a number of distinguished visitors as invited guests retired to Commons Hall where the Alumni dinner was served.

When the repast was over, Col. Kenan, President of the Association called upon Judge Fred Philips to act as toast master. No happier choice could have been made.

Among those who responded to toasts were Governor Aycock, Col. T. W. Mason, Dr. Wm. J. Holland, Hon. Geo. W. Watts, Hon. Josephus Daniels, Dr. Chas. D. McIver, Col. Killebrew, of Tennessee, Supt. J. Y. Joyner, Judge Francis D. Winston, ex-Speaker Gattis, and Mr. R. S. Stewart, President of the graduating class.

Dr. Venable and Mr. John Sprunt Hill both made short speeches the substance of which, as taken from the News and Observer, here follows:

Dr. Venable made a short talk, which embodied the facts in his report of the present collegiate year. He said that the present graduating class were famous for their loyalty to their Alma Mater; that perfect harmony had always prevailed between the class and the faculty; that it was the consensus of opinion that the present collegiate year just closing was the most successful along every line of any year in the history of the University; that in the last three years the student body had gained in numbers twenty per cent, and that the financial income of the University had increased from fifty thousand to eighty thousand; that many permanent improvements, such as the Alumni building, the Carr building, the heating plant, had been made. All in all, these are bright days in the glorious history of the head of the educational system of North Carolina.

"Mr. John Sprunt Hill, in his address, suggested a plan which no doubt will meet with general approval from all lovers and promoters of the welfare of the Old North State. It was this: For the legislature to enact a law allowing the Alumni Association to elect twenty-six of the seventy-eight members of the Board of Trustees in their own manner, and after their own fashion. This would stimulate enthusiasm among the Alumni and would eventually result in great good for the University."

Immediately after the speeches were over the Board of Trustees met in Alumni Hall for the transaction of regular business. An account of the main proceedings of this meeting will be found under the head of Announcements of the President.

While this meeting was in session the two Literary Societies met in their respective halls. This meeting of the Societies should have been held on Monday night, but was postponed on account of the lateness of the hour at which the joint banquet closed.

MEETING AROUND DAVIE POPLAR.

At 6 P.M. the graduating class formed in double file in front of Memorial Hall and marched to the old Davie Poplar. Here, following the custom and tradition of its predecessors, a circle was formed about the old tree to smoke the pipe of peace and to listen to the reading of the statistics and the awarding of class medals.

STATISTICS.

Mr. Z. V. Judd, the class statistician, then read the report, in substance as follows:

The members of our class who will take up the different professions number as follows: Teachers, 5; Physicians, 10; Lawyers, 10; Chemists, 7; Engineer, 1; Geologist, 1; Ministers, 3; Tobacco business man, 1. The remainder have expressed no wish other than that they be allowed to wear caps and gowns, and be granted the privilege to pay five dollars for a neatly written sheep skin on which are written some Latin sentences which they make no attempt to read.

This class is almost a year younger than its immediate predecessor, the average age of its members being 21 years, 10 months, 28 days. Oldest man is 30, youngest man 18—Mr. B. F. Huske. Average height, 5 feet, 7 11-14 inches. Shortest man in class, Henry Turner, 5 feet 5 inches; tallest man, Weller, 6 feet 6 inches. Average weight of class, 153 pounds 5 ounces. Lightest man, McAden, 125; heaviest man, Weller, 215.

Then came the awarding of the medals voted by the class to its various members.

MEDALS.

Handsome man, Galloway. Greatest ladies' man, Andrews. Greatest bore, Cumming. Ugliest man, Collins. Most intellectual man, Walker. Best all-round man, Stewart. Most popular man, G. L. Jones. Man who thicks himself most popular, Bynum. Best speaker, Stewart. Dead-beat, Weller. Best politician, Gwyn. Faculty pet, Huske.

Best athlete, Holt. Modest man, Gordon. Cheeky man, Morehead. Greatest dude, Hanes. Ideal preacher, Maddy. Hardest student, Herring.

After the awarding of the medals, the class, seated on the ground, in a circle around the Poplar, smoked the pipe of peace. Then they gave the 'Varsity yell, the class yell, cheers for President Venable, and again formed in line to march to Gerrard Hall for the presentation of the class gift.

PRESENTATION OF CLASS GIFT.

From the poplar the class marched to Gerrard Hall, where the class gift, a set of excellent light fixtures, was presented to the Alma Mater by Mr. H. R. McFadyen who said that for four years the class of '03 had been receiving liberal gifts from the University and its faculty. They had been given the opportunities of an education at a small cost. Money and work and interest had been spent that the youth of North Carolina might be educated. The faculty had given their best labors toward the accomplishment of this end. They had worked with the student that he might become a man fitted to fill a man's position.

For these favors and these advantages the class of 1903 feels deeply grateful and wishes to repay them by work and lives that will do credit to their training. But beside this, they wished to make a visible expression of their gratitude. For this purpose they had chosen a gift symbolical of the spirit of the University. Light has ever been the resplendent robe, without which the noblest works of the Creator would be void of beauty. Lux Libertas is the University's motto. It is light and liberty that are synonymous terms in our life. They stand for the spirit of true education. It is therefore fitting that the class of 1903 present to the college the light fixtures in this hall.

Governor Aycock, as president of the board of trustees, then arose and introduced Senator Lee S. Overman, who in a splendid speech accepted the gift on behalf the trustees. Sometimes these gifts were ones of beauty such as statuary, the busts of heroes, whose noble deeds aroused the spirit of emulation in youth. This class has done more than this. It has added utility to beauty and given a gift that is useful and much needed, in electric light fixtures. Electricity has revolutionized the world and brought men together. There are always discoveries and new inventions. This class must go out and make new ones. They must go into the world's work. To do this they must have high ideals, they must learn the spirit of giving, "who lends most is most his country's friend."

This closed the class day exercises for the class of 1903. All of them had been well attended and much enjoyed.

COMMENCEMENT DEBATE.

The fourth annual debate between the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies was held in Gerrard Hall on Tuesday night. The query for debate was "Resolved: That United States Senators should be elected by the direct vote of the people." The Di Society had the affirmative of the question and was represented by Messrs. N. R. Graham and A. H. Johnston. The Phi society, defending the negative, was represented by Messrs. J. H. Winston and E. S. W. Dameron.

Hon. R. H. Battle of Raleigh presided at the debate. The committee was composed of Hons. J. Y. Joyner, W. A. Guthrie and S. M. Gattis.

In this debate two prizes were offered, one, the Bingham Medal, to be given the best speaker on the winning team, and the other, the Society Prize, to be given the other debater on the same side.

The debate was hotly contested and frequently applauded. Both sides presented their argument well, showing the logical development of thought which has given Carolina such success in inter-collegiate debates.

The decision of the committee was not announced until the reading of prizes in the commencement exercises on Wednesday. Then Dr. Venable announced that the Dialectic Society had won, and that the Bingham Medal was awarded to Mr. Johnston.

FACULTY RECEPTION.

After the debate, the audience adjourned to Commons Hall, where an informal reception was held by the president and faculty. There was a large number present all of whom enjoyed the occasion. Refreshments were served to add flavor to the enjoyment. The receiving party consisted of Dr. and Mrs. Venable, Dr. Baskerville, Prof. and Mrs. Toy, Prof. and Mrs. Gore, Dr. Battle, Prof. Cobb, Dr. Hume, Gov. Aycock, Hon. Josephus Daniels and Dr. Wm. L. Holland.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The closing exercises of the one hundred and eight commencement were held in Memorial Hall Wednesday morning. At 10:30 the academic procession consisting of the graduating class, the faculty and the trustees, formed in front of Alumni Hall and marched past the Caldwell monument and South Building to Memorial Hall. The large hall was almost filled with visitors. On the rostrum sat the graduates, the faculty and distinguished alumni.

After music by the orchestra, Dr. Venable arose and requested Rev. Howard E. Rondthaler of Salem, a loyal alumnus of the University, to open the exercises with prayer. Mr. Rondthaler invoked the blessings of the Almighty on this University and on the new class of graduates. He spoke of the century of earnest, successful work done in these halls, and petitioned for its continuance. Mr. Rondthaler has always shown his love for his Alma Mater by his service and work for her upbuilding. It is, therefore, with pleasure that we heard him open our commencement exercises on this glad day.

Dr. Venable then read the subjects of theses by candidates for degrees. In all there were seventy-six graduates this year.

Next on the program came the Senior orations. The first contestant for the Wiley P. Mangum Medal was Mr. T. J. Gold. He spoke on "The Opportunity of the South for Leadership in our Nation's Progress."

Mr. Gold made a fine speech and acquitted himself with ability and grace, displaying remarkable floor ease.

"The Idealism of the Twentieth Century" was the title of Mr. Bartholomew Fuller Huske's oration.

The address of this youth of eighteen years was a model of fine English, and he deserves great praise for his splendid effort.

Following Mr. Huske was Mr. Curtis A. Bynum. Mr. Bynum spoke on "The Mission of the Republic." Like Mr. Gold and Mr. Huske, Mr. Bynum spoke with earnestness. His was a beautiful, thorough, treatment of a popular subject.

Then came the winner of the Medal, Mr. C. E. Maddry.

"The Duty of the South to the County Boy," was his topic. Mr. Maddry is a man of experience and he knew, from practice, whereof he spoke. He showed the State's duty to the country boy and threw his whole soul into his words. Mr. Maddry deserves great credit, for though his was the advantage, he had to win over three very strong men—men of more than ordinary ability and talent.

The committee who decided the contest consisted of Hon. T. W. Mason, Prof. A. J. Holt, and Col. Killebrew.

The commencement address was delivered by Hon. W. J. Holland of Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, Pa.

Dr. Holland said, in part: "It is with feelings of pleasure that I stand before you this morning. My home was in your state in my boyhood, and among your citizens, there are a multitude of those whom I deem it a high honor to claim as the friends of my youth, and for whom I cherish the warmest personal friendship and esteem.

"I have resolved to speak to you concerning the opportunities and duties of educated men in relation to the South of the future.

"As the possession of wealth, political power, social influences, brings opportunities and creates obligations, so also the possession of a cultured mind and the power to think deeply brings with it duties and of necessity begets opportunities. Learning, and trained intellect are gifts for the proper stewardship of which society justly holds men accountable.

"You will not deem it an impertinence if I, one of the children of your dispersion, long resident in the greatest manufacturing centre of the world, turning my face again to the home of my youth, speak to you young men, who are just entering upon the active duties of life, in reference to some of the questions which must inevitably present themselves for your consideration."

Dr. Holland then spoke of the vast mineral resources of the South. "There are magnified opportunities" he continued, "which are waiting for men of brain and enterprise, who will prize the opportunities. Let me persuade you young men from imagining that because you have heard of successes by others in far away places, that it behooves you to forsake your present environment. For more and more in coming years you will discover that capital will look toward your section of the country as furnishing a fruitful field for investment.

"Let me ask you, young men, that you will encourage all right movements, which tend to develop and to preserve the resources of this fair section of our great Union.

"In this connection permit me to plead with you to use your best efforts to second the endeavors of those—some of them identified with the faculty of your own University—who have in recent years been endeavoring to impress upon the national legislature the importance of creating within the heart of the Appalachian region a great forest reservation. This should be done because unless the denudation of our highlands is prevented the flow of water in our great rivers and incidentally our commerce will be materially affected."

The speaker commented in an interesting manner, upon the agricultural possibilities of the South, as yet wholly unrealized. He spoke in detail concerning our coal fields, mines and our general development; and the great opportunities for the young men of the South....

"Once again," said the distinguished speaker in conclusion, "let me plead with you that you will endeavor to secure the education of the masses, intellectually and morally. But we shall fail to do our duty as citizens if, having done all that we can for the bodies and minds of men, we fail to teach men the blessedness of doing each to the other as he would also that others should do unto Him. Young men standing with ardent brow looking forward into the coming years, let me incite you by all the love that you bear to our common land to be strong and courageous, filled with holy purposes of duty actuated by the sentiments of broadest mercy and and highest philanthropy. Yours is the blessed heritage of opportunity. God grant you wisdom and grace to use these opportunities aright, to acquit yourselves like men, and in the broad arena of life so to discharge each task that those who come after you may rise up and call your memory blessed."

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT.

After the address, the president made the following announcements: Dr. Charles Wyche, of St. Louis, Mo., has established the Hunter Lee Harris medal for the best piece of fiction published in the University Magazine. This prize is open to all students.

Through the efforts of Mr. Hayne Davis, of New York, a medal for the best essay bearing upon the Hague tribunal, has been established.

Mr. John Sprunt Hill will give the annual income of $4,000 to support a fellowship in North Carolina History.

The following changes in the faculty have been made for the coming year: W. M. Marriott, was made assistant in chemistry; L. B. Lockhart, assistant in chemistry; L. B. Newell, assistant in anatomy and pathology; J. B. Cranmer, assistant in anatomy; W. J. Gordon assistant in French. Mr. R. O. E. Davis was made full instructor in chemistry; Mr. E. K. Graham was made associate professor of the English Language; Dr. Thos. Ruffin was made full professor of law, Dr. George Howe was elected professor of Latin.

Medals and prizes were awarded as follows:

THE HOLT MEDAL, in Mathematics: T. F. Hickerson.

THE HUME MEDAL, in English composition: N. W. Walker.

THE HILL PRIZE, in History: R. W. Herring.

THE HARRIS PRIZE, in Anatomy: J. F. Patterson.

THE GREEK PRIZE, for sight reading: H. H. Moses.

THE WORTH PRIZE, in Philosophy: C. A. Bynum.

THE LIBRARY PRIZES, for knowledge gained from a systematic course of reading: C. P. Russell, E. S. W. Dameron.

THE MAGAZINE PRIZES, for best fiction and best essay: H. H. Hughes, P. Cummings, Jr.

THE EARLY ENGLISH TEXT SOCIETY PRIZE, for advanced work in Saxon Middle English: N. W. Walker.

THE BRYAN PRIZE, in Political Science: R. W. Herring.

THE BRADHAM PRIZE, in Pharmacy: L. C. Griffin.

THE BINGHAM MEDAL, in debate: A. H. Johnston.

THE MANGUM MEDAL, in oratory: C. E. Maddry.

The following certificates were given:

ECONOMICS: R. W. Herring, G. R. Ward.

ENGLISH: A. L. Moser, J. K. Ross, N. W. Walker, H. Whitehurst.

FRENCH: W. J. Gordon, J. B. Thorpe.

GERMAN: B. F. Huske.

GREEK: J. R. Giles, W. J. Gordon, R. C. Morrow, H. Whitehurst.

HISTORY: R. W. Herring.

LATIN: J. R. Giles, A. L. Moser.

MATHEMATICS: H. B. Frost, T. F. Hickerson.

PEDAGOGY: E. P. Holt, G. L. Jones, J. E. Pearson, R. S. Stewart, J. Tomlinson.

PHARMACY: A. G. Ahrens, L. C. Griffin.

PHYSICS: B. H. Bridgers, R. A. Lichtenthaler.

Rev. H. E. Rondthaler made the speech presenting Bibles to the graduating class. He spoke of the gifts of the University to her sons, and said that it was very fitting that as they went out from her walls, she should give them as their guide the choicest gift of all, the Word of God.

The next thing in order was the presentation of diplomas and the conferring of degrees. This year every degree given in the University was conferred. The graduates, with their degrees, are given below:

BACHELORS OF ARTS.

BACHELORS OF PHILOSOPHY.

Burke Haywood Bridgers, William Frederick Carr, Robert Beatty Collins, Preston Cumming, Gaston Gilbert Galaway, Thomas Jackson Gold, Thomas Lenoir Gwyn, Frederick Moir Hanes, Robert Withington Herring, Earl Pendleton Holt, James Wiley Horner, Zebulon Vance Judd, Charles Edward Maddry, James Lathrop Morehead, Joseph Edmund Pearson, Harry Pelham Stevens, Roach Sidney Stewart, George Robert Ward, George William Wilcox, Jesse Womble Willcox.

BACHELORS OF SCIENCE.

Hugh Hammond Bennett, Edward Beuler Clement, Reuben Oscar Everett, Thomas Bledsoe Foust, Marshall Renfro Glenn, George Washington Graham, Jr., Edmund Alexander Hawes, Jr., Hazel Holland, Joshua John Skinner, James Battle Thorpe, Jackson Tomlinson, Hubert Raymond Weller.

BACHELORS OF LAWS.

Julius Fletcher Duncan, John Christoph Blucher Ehringhaus, James Breeden Gibson, Charles Upchurch Harris, William Frank Smathers.

GRADUATES IN PHARMACY.

David Archie Bulluck, John Edward Koonce, William Morgan Perry, Thomas Floyd Rhodes.

MASTERS OF SCIENCE.

Isaac Foust Harris, Ivey Foreman Lewis.

MASTERS OF ARTS.

John Kirkland Ross, George Phifer Stevens, Reston Stevenson.

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY.

Royall Oscar Eugene Davis.

DOCTORS OF MEDICINE.

Zebulon Marvin Caveness, Willis Dowd Gilmore, William DeBerniere MacNider, Martin Luther Matthews.

After the diplomas were presented the exercises were closed with the benediction by Dr. Rondthaler, and the 108th commencement was over.

Mr. Sidney Lee's Visit to the University.

On the evening of Thursday, May 7, Mr. Sidney Lee, of England, lectured before the students and faculty in Gerrard Hall on "Shakespeare and His Life Work."

Mr. Lee is perhaps the greatest living authority on Shakspeare, and it was a distinctive honor of which the University should justly feel proud, to have this noted foreign scholar pay us the only visit he made in the Southern States.

Death of an Alumnus.

Hon. Alfred Briggs Irion, A. B., 1885. Born February 18, 1833, died on his sugar plantation in Louisiana May 21, '03. He was in the Confederate State Military service; then a prominent lawyer, then Judge of the circuit court of appeals, then a representative in Congress. He published a humorous book called "Boaz," telling of the tribulations of a Southern planter, which met with much success.

Dr. William De B. McNider, who recently graduated from the Medical Department, attended the meeting of the State Medical Association at Hot Springs, last week; and at the same time applied for license before the State Board of Medical Examiners. Dr. McNider has been made assistant in surgery in the Raleigh faculty.

J. K. Ross, A. B., A. M., is the hero of 823 examinations including repeaters.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION BUILDING EDITION.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING. ASSOCIATION WORK.

The University Association to Have Quarters of Its Own.

Strong, Earnest Effort Will be Made During the Summer to Secure the Much-Needed Building for the Y. M. C. A. at the University.

There are two great things that determine character—heredity and environment. A young fellow comes to college with his character already partly formed—what is born in him cannot be rooted out of him. Then the other part of his character will be molded by his environment during his stay here in college. The Young Men's Christian Association aims to supply this environment. It tries to surround the boy with the best influences. It gives him clean, pleasant, wholesome companions; it tries to get him in the best neighborhood where he will be subjected to the fewest temptations; it induces him to come out to religious meetings where the talking, singing and praying are done by young fellows of his own age.

But there is one great hindrance to this work, and the Association has been laboring under this handicap for many years. It has no building of its own. It has no place where the new man can come and find help in getting settled; it has no place where it can take the homesick Freshman and introduce him to pleasant, congenial companions who will join with him in pleasant games and cause him to forget his loneliness; it has no place where it can hold its devotional meetings, its Bible study and mission classes, its officers' conferences, etc., in peace and quiet. For many years the Association has had to meet where it could, in the Chapel, in lecture rooms, wherever there was no other meeting in progress.

But now the time has come when the Association feels that this state of affairs can go on no longer. We must have a building.

For several years the Association has been trying to raise funds. Letters have been sent out time and time again, circulars have been mailed, plans drawn up over and over. The result has been an accumulation of $1700 which is out drawing 4 per cent. interest, so it has not been lost.

However, we have at last come to see that the requisite sum, $10,000, cannot be raised by mere letters and appeals through the mail. The conviction has grown upon us that this money can be raised only by a personal canvass. And so the Association has selected three men to tour the State during the summer and collect the necessary funds. They are Messrs. R. M. Harper, president of the Association, Z. V. Judd, retiring vice-present, and C. P. Russell, corresponding secretary. These three with President Venable, Prof. Gore and Prof. Alexander constitute the building committee. All funds will be immediately deposited with Mr. W. T. Patterson, bursar of the University. The building will be started on the 12th of October, 1903.

The amount the Association asks for is $10,000. The University with the largest Association in the State and as the head of the State's educational system should properly have the largest and most complete college Y. M. C. A. building in the State, and we call upon all loyal alumni of the University, all interested in the welfare of young men, and all friends of Christianity wherever they may be, to support and assist us in this great work.

I most heartily commend the effort to complete the fund for the Y. M. C. A. building. For more than ten years the project has languished with about one-third of the necessary amount collected and subscribed. Meanwhile the Association has suffered in efficiency. It is altogether unworthy of the University that this strong and most useful band of Christian workers should have no recognized building of their own, with assembly hall, class rooms and library. The University has been able to allow them one headquarters room only, as it was impossible to spare other rooms. I regard the activity of this Association as one of the most helpful influences in the University. They must have fitting quarters for their work, and I concur in their appeal to all friends of young men, lovers of Christianity, and loyal sons of the University.

F. P. VENABLE,
President of the University.

The aims and efficiency of the Young Men's Christian Association are heartily endorsed by President, Faculty and Alumni. The religious life of the University is largely dependent upon and radiates from our Association. The active membership has shown the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to the noble work of the organization. They have won our admiration and the cause they are engaged in deserves the cooperation and help of all who value educated Christian Manhood.

The pressing need of the Association is a building, a home for the organization, a focus for the religious activities of the University, which will greatly enhance the labors of this body of young men, who are giving freely of themselves for others.

J. W. GORE,
Prof. of Physics.

The Work of the Young Men's Christian Association for the Year 1902-'03.

Religious Meetings, Systematic Bible Study, New Life for Sunday Schools, Mission Study Class Organized. Gifts to Missions.

The work of the Young Men's Christian Association of the University during the past year may be summed up in what is suggested in the term practical every day religion. Many things, it is true, which should have been done, has been left undone, and of course when the Association is viewed from the standpoint of opportunity, the work may not seem to be so great. It must be remembered, however, that the college association differs much from other organized Christian work in that it changes leaders each year, and in the case of the Y. M. C. A. at the University, each new set of leaders has to begin work anew, and not where their predecessors left off, mainly because there is no permanent home for the Association.

RELIGIOUS MEETINGS.

Two religious meetings are held each week, one in the Chapel on Tuesday night, which is a half hour long, the other, a prayer meeting ten minutes long, is held in the Y. M. C. A. room each Thursday night. Business meetings of the cabinet and chairman of the committees were held each week during the past year. Several of the faculty, among whom were Professor H. H. Williams, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith and Dr. Thos. Hume, have made strong addresses at the regular Tuesday night meeting. Among some of the students who have made talks are Chas. Ross, G. P. Stevens, H. R. McFadyen, E. McDonald, C. C. Barnhardt, W. J. Gordon, B. F. Huske, E. S. W. Dameron, C. P. Russell, and Z. V. Judd.

BIBLE STUDY.

Bible study is the pivotal point of the Young Men's Christian Association. During the past year eighty men were enrolled in the seven Bible Study classes, in daily systematic study of the Bible. These classes meet once a week for class work under guidance of the following student-leaders: Z. V. Judd, H. R. McFadyen, G. P. Stevens, R. M. Harper, W. J. Gordon, J. B. Robertson, C. C. Barnhardt, and Chas. Ross. Eighty students were enrolled in these courses and the attendance on the whole was good. One great obstacle in keeping up class attendance to a higher per cent is that the Association has no rooms that can be used for Bible study only. The University very kindly lends the recitation rooms in the Alumni building to the Association each Sunday but they are not suited to the needs of the work, and classes cannot thrive as much as they would with regular rooms of their own.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Four Sunday Schools near Chapel Hill and at the chapel near Lloyd's Mill are helped, and in a majority of cases taught and managed by members of the Young Men's Christian Association. Some of these schools have had different forms of entertainment provided, and only two weeks ago the Sunday School near Clark's Spring had a picnic at which Mr. Chas. Ross, the retiring secretary of the Association and a former member of the General Assembly, spoke to the people on "Education." The address was plain and practical and greatly appreciated. Members of the Association arranged for music and refreshments, the people in the country made swings, cleaned off the ground and brought one of Orange county's best dinners. As a result the picnic was a happy combination of events, and in the words of one member of the Sunday School, who had never been to a picnic before in his life, "the picnic showed me and my wife and my son John and his four can get more out of life by mixing up with other people." One not acquainted with the condition of the people around Chapel Hill can hardly imagine what these little entertainments mean in their monotonous lives and what a new outlook on life it gives them. Mr. E. S. W. Dameron with the assistance of F. S. Hudson, who recently died, had charge of the Sunday School work, and during the last fall kept the schools in touch with each other by visiting one each Sunday.

MISSIONS.

The mission department of the Association has been under the direction of Mr. J. K. Ross, chairman of the Mission Committee, and also a student volunteer. Mr. Ross taught a class studying missionary heroes in the fall, and in the spring an introduction to foreign missions. About seventy-five dollars has been subscribed by the students and faculty for the Brockman Fund for missions, and most of this amount has been collected. This money was given mostly in small sums, ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents a month and in some cases fifty cents and one dollar a month.

Entered in the Postoffice at Chapel Hill, N. C., as second-class matter.

The great work the Young Men's Christian Association is doing here at the University, the noble principles the organization stands for, and its pressing needs for more room are well known to all the students and faculty. But to many of the friends and Alumni of the institution in this and other states, this great work and these pressing needs are not known.

This issue of The Tar Heel has been got out to tell the friends of the University what this noble band of young men are doing, to set forth their needs, and to publish their plans for securing means to erect a building that shall be equal to the demand for more room and adequate to the most efficient service.

It is with great pleasure that the editors of The Tar Heel turn this issue of the paper over to the management of the Y. M. C. A. for the purposes above named. These young men are deserving the highest praise for the hard, earnest, untiring labor they are expending in this noble work. We can commend them most heartily. May their efforts be crowned with the highest success, and may our campus soon be graced with a handsome Y. M. C. A. building that shall stand as a monument to their noble work.

N. W. W.

Special attention is called to the extract from the Alumni address of Hon. John Sprunt Hill, on the last page under the head "A Good Beginning for the Building." This is indeed an excellent beginning, and brings the cash part of the building to about two thousand dollars. The speech and gift are doubly appreciated—first for their face value, and then again because they serve as a glad introduction to the movement to lay the foundation of the building in October.

During the summer a canvass of the most prominent towns in the state will be made for the Y. M. C. A. building, but many of the Alumni in our state and all outside the state will not be seen. Then again many who receive a copy of this issue who are not Alumni but who are interested in this movement will not be called on personally. We therefore appeal to each one who receives this notice for help. Send all subscriptions and address all communications concerning the movement to Mr. R. M. Harper, Chapel Hill, N. C.

As there can be no special church organization connected with a State University how shall we define and direct its religious life? Churches fully alive environing the school, we firmly believe, must be behind any vital movement. But such churches in a rural community cannot find the resources for meeting all the requirements; and the student is sui generis and moves in a little world of his own. The College Christian Association organized on the basis of the creed common to all that invisible church who believe in the one Lord and Savior, Christ, meets him on his own ground, bears witness to the spiritual unity—insists on religion in everyday life and offers opportunities for practical and missionary activities which develop the gifts and graces of the young Christian. It should have its rallying ground, its appropriate home-place, not only for proper services and Bible and Mission classes, but for all that fellowship and social life, for all those satisfying recreations for mind and body which parent and teacher, common sense and Christianity, must combine to put in the place of false and hurtful amusements. Imperious nature, the expansion of the whole man in the growing boy, pleads for a building; noble comfortable, attractive, a refuge, a cosy place, a home for soul and body, the centre of the social and spiritual life of the University of the people. THOMAS HUME.

Prof. of Eng. Literature.

I note with pleasure that a movement has been inaugurated to secure a Building for the University Association. The work of the Young Men's Christian Association, being as it is, such a part of the college life, exerts, directly or indirectly a permanent influence for good upon the individual life of every University man, and such an emphasis to the work as a modern Association Building would give could be had in no other way.

GEORGE STEPHENS.

The Young Men's Christian Association has greatly promoted the religious training of the students of this University. Its regular meetings for prayer, discourses and singing of hymns, its classes diligently engaged in Bible study, are efficient aids in inspiring high and serious views of life. If it could have a suitable building for its exercises its influence for good would be greatly enhanced, by its being more attractive. I strongly recommend the movement for such a structure as of signal benefit, not alone to this University but to the state.

KEMP P. BATTLE,
Prof. of History.

I do not believe that it is possible to spend $10,000 anywhere in North Carolina to a greater advantage than in the construction and equipment of an attractive Y. M. C. A. building upon the University campus. Already more than six hundred young men gather here annually, and within a few years the number will be more than a thousand. This constant stream of the State's young manhood flowing through the gates of this institution bears the impress of University training out into every walk of life, into every section of the state. Shall we not rear amongst these wild walls a Christian temple the incense of whose constant service shall sanctify all the splendid training of this institution to that noblest of conceptions of life? It will be an investment for the advancement of church, the ennobling of homes, the strengthening of state—an investment in civilization and Christian manhood. CHAS. ROSS.

SOME HISTORY AND AN ARGUMENT.

The history of the critical period of the Young Men's Christian Association of North Carolina offers one of the best arguments for the general support of the University Association by our people. Organized Christian effort for young men was at a low ebb in 1885-6. George B. Hanna, James H. Southgate, Eugene L. Harris, and a few other choice spirits were behind the movement in the towns. A half dozen of them met the faithful few of the college men at the University in March 1886 with twelve dollars in the State treasury and little reason for hope except in the promises of God. L. D. Wishard, the remarkable leader in the religious awakening in India and other Eastern lands, urged that Dr. Thomas Hume, who had just become Professor of English Language and Literature in the University, should undertake the reconstruction of the Association work in towns and colleges. He gave his services for five years and consecrated University leadership, aided by Davidson and other colleges, helped Hanna, Harris, A. G. Brenizer, David G. Worth, Southgate, N. B. Broughton, W. A. Blair, J. F. Rogers, J. R. Young, (how shall we give the complete roll of the worthies?) to re-awaken spiritual life. H. P. Brockman, John R. Mott, Claus Olandt, L. R. Coulter, H. P. Anderson, we must not omit the names of Weston Gales and R. G. Pearson, came to the rescue. Olandt's wonderful vitality met with a wave of revival power amongst the students that bore scores of them into earnest Christian living. It was not strange that our spiritual leadership here took advantage of the Student's Volunteer movement and that more than fifty young people dedicated themselves to foreign missions, of whom Lacy Little, W. A. Wilson, George Worth, our own students, followed our R. T. Bryan and went to China and Japan. With renewed conservation came more money and the full organization of the work now so efficiently conducted by the State Committee. For several years Dr. Hume superintended an intercollegiate visitation plan by which University students and men from Davidson, Trinity, Wake Forest, Guilford, Elon and other schools,—two from each institution,—would exchange visits at their several college homes, talk of "the things of the Kingdom," spur one another to duty, and call for volunteers for the great world-field who should report to their own church societies for service. Our Association paid the outgoing expenses of one of these missionaries. It is no undue claim, but occasion for gratitude and mutual sympathy, that God's Providence used our organization in this work of reconstruction and inspiration. The self-sacrificing benevolence of Charlotte and Wilmington in the erection of noble Association buildings sent a thrill into these young College societies and was comforted and strengthened by their responsive touch.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1903-'04.

Work for the Coming Year Systematically Arranged.

The prospect for Association work in its every phase during the coming college year is strongly encouraging. Ten members of the Association, mostly by their own effort, are attending the Southern Student Conference of the Young Men's Christian Association at Asheville, June 13-21. Most of these members will return to the University in the fall, and will put new Christian life-blood that is imbibed only from such a conference as is held at Asheville or at Northfield, Mass. And it is well that so many men are at the Conference, for during the coming year they will be confronted with work which a general secretary could hardly perform alone.

Especially will the influence of the conference be seen in the Bible study department of the Association. Each Bible study teacher at the Conference will take the special course he is to lead, and will thus get methods from the best Bible students in the country.

All Bible study classes will meet each week in the Alumni Building. The teachers in the Bible study classes next year will be C. C. Barnhardt, C. P. Russell, E. S. W. Dameron, O. B. Ross, J. V. Howard, W. B. Love, F. E. Hester, Z. V. Judd, and W. J. Gordon.

The Mission class will be led by E. McDonald. The text-book to be used during the coming fall is by the well known missionary authority, Dr. A. C. Thompson, and is entitled "Protestant Missions." This course is well adapted to meet the needs of increasing interest in Foreign Missions at the University, and naturally follows the course taught last year. O. B. Ross is chairman of the mission committee, and has as a goal for his committee, twenty-five men in the mission-study class, and one hundred dollars for the Brockman fund.

The Sunday Schools around Chapel Hill, as in the past, will be taught and managed mostly by Association men. It is the rule of the Association, however, to get the permanent members of the schools to help as much as possible. A plan has been suggested that prominent students in college, an inter-collegiate debater for instance, be secured to meet the neighborhood near the Sunday School or in the Sun-School house itself to speak on some phase of education or like subject. The plan will probably be carried out next fall by having several of these gatherings on Saturday afternoon at Rankin's Chapel, Clark's Sunday School and if possible at the other two Y. M. C. A. Sunday Schools in the country near Chapel Hill. During the fall J. B. Robertson, chairman of the Sunday School committee, will visit one Sunday School each Sunday, and by keeping them in touch with each other, will thus give each much practical help.

The Book department which helped many students last fall in procuring second-hand books from each other, will be continued in the Y. M. C. A. room in Old West building.

One way in which the Association will be helpful to the entire college, is in the intended publication of a college directory for the students. The University has grown to such an extent that the students are widely scattered over the campus and over Chapel Hill. The Association intends to get out a good college directory next fall, giving each student's name, college address, his home address, and if possible his church or the church of his family.

As the Association has no permanent hall in the University it is hard to say what the social phase of the Association will amount to. If possible a reception for all the students will be given within a few weeks after the University opens next fall. Heretofore the reception has been given only to Freshmen but from several points of view this has been unsatisfactory. The Association desires to reach all men in college, and if any reception, therefore, is given, it will be given to all.

To do its most effective work the Young Men's Christian Association of the University of North Carolina needs a permanent home. In fact it has reached a period in its stage of development when a building supplied with the proper facilities, is a real necessity.

The student Associations, now nearly 100 in number, in America, have been instrumental in leading thousands of strong men into the ministry; they have inspired scores of new, hitherto thoughtless and selfish, to lead purposeful and cleaner lives; from the ranks of officers and workers have gone students who are today wielding a strong influence in political and commercial life and are real factors in the extension of Christ's kingdom among men. Within the past few years the Association in the University of North Carolina has extended its work, and today it commands the admiration and respect of the thoughtful people of this Commonwealth. It is a fact of some significance that more than a hundred of the bright, strong men of the University find time to engage in this definitely organized department of Christian work.

These men are catching a vision of the possibilities of a life that is centered in the great Teacher. Their work is not spasmodic—one is impressed with the manly, healthful tone of their meetings, the utter absence of cant and "pioussity," the earnest, clean-cut, business-like manner which seems to characterize all of their plans and work. Then too, they are a practical set—these University fellows. They are holding up the Christian life as the manliest life a man can lead.

All corners of the State are represented in the University and the Association is confronted with a unique opportunity. It can to a large degree influence the lives of men who are to become the leaders of commerce, promoters of civic righteousness, ministers of the gospel in North Carolina.

Every dollar invested in the proposed building will pay a dividend far exceeding that accruing from stocks and bonds.

A PRESSING NEED: A PRIME INVESTMENT.

In all the brilliant exercises of our recent commencement there was nothing so gratifying to me as the initiation of a movement looking to the erection of a Y. M. C. A. building on the University grounds. The organization has done and is doing a capital work among the students in Bible study, in character building, in student evangelism, in neighborhood missions. It is worthy of enlarged facilities and with these is capable of a still wider and deeper work. In fact, the need of a well-equipped Y. M. C. A. building is urgent as a feature of the larger University soon to be, and I know of no addition to our already magnificent educational plant that would yield larger returns, in well-developed, symmetrical manhood. As one of the town factors and profoundly interested in the religious culture of the young men who gather here from all parts of the country, I am greatly gratified at the prospects of the proposed building and sincerely hope it will soon be ready for its high mission.

HIGHT C. MOORE.

Pastor Baptist Church, Chapel Hill, N. C.

The work of building a Young Men's Christian Association Hall on the University campus is an enterprise that should effectively appeal to every patriot and Christian who believes in rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's. It is not too much to say that the Young Men's Christian Association is the center of the religious life of the student body of the University. It is the most effective factor in the developing and conserving the larger spirit of brotherly love and service to one common Master. Denominational differences are here obliterated in the unity of the workers, and thus it is accomplishing a Christian work which no one church of the village nor all of them combined, could do. Therefore let all who love the Lord help these young men to build a Temple upon the University campus that shall stand for a larger Christian life.

N. M. WATSON.
Pastor Methodist Church.

I am more than willing to add any influence (if so be) of my name and of my position, as a Chapel Hill Pastor, to any proper effort for the betterment and fuller equipment of the University Y. M. C. A. And so I welcome and commend the movement looking to the providing a suitable building as its headquarters.

It will greatly simplify matters to waive all matters as to the need or desirableness of such an organization; and to address one's self directly to those who believe in its work as a factor in University life. Those who do approve of its purposes and the methods must realize, if they stop to think, that it can have no more vital centre than at this State University. If it is to keep pace with the growth and demands of this noble institution—the people's own University—it must no longer be suffered by its friends throughout the Commonwealth, to limp along as best it may. It simply cannot realize its hopes nor seize its opportunities so long as it has no building it can call its home, no outfit which shall invite the attention and command the respect of those whom it seeks to interest—nothing, in fine, but the warm hearts and zealous, though handicapped, efforts of the Christian young men who constitute its membership.

W. H. MEADE,
Rector Chapel of The Cross,

A Good Beginning
For the Building.

"We stand here today in Gerrard Hall, built a half century ago from proceeds of the sale of lands of Major Charles Gerrard, bought with his blood in war for civil and religious liberty. Students and professors are called to worship here; and yet one-third of the persons summoned are unable to find seats. Within five years more two-thirds of the students and professors will be unable to find seats at these morning prayers. The religious life of the University is largely in the care of the Young Men's Christian Association. Over sixty per cent. of the students and all the professors are church members, and about two hundred are members of the association. Twice a week evening prayers are held by the association. Four Sunday schools in the nearby country are supported by the association, and it maintains also a weekly service in a nearby cotton mill. Morning classes in Sunday school with an attendance of from one to two hundred are taught by the professors. Says President Venable in his report: "They have no suitable rooms for their Bible class meetings. No general assembly hall, no reading room and no library." Church people of North Carolina, let me ask you if this is not the greatest strategic point in the entire State for those religious operations that seek to touch the heart of higher life and quicken its beats with the universal love of the Father?"

"To these ends, Mr. President, I now desire to now contribute permanently the yearly income derived from four thousand dollars. And it is my wish that during the coming year, this income be given to the fund for the erection of a building, for the religious needs of this institution and thereafter to go toward the establishment of a fellowship in North Carolina History in connection with the University, but open to all students of all institutions for higher education in the State."—News and Observer, June 3, 1903.

In college life, as in all life, there are three phases: the physical, the mental and the moral. The Young Men's Christian Association stands for all three: Body, Mind, and Spirit. The first, however, finds its expression and gets its training on the athletic field and in the gymnasium; the second finds its expression and gets its training in the halls of the University; but the third is largely in the hands of the Y. M. C. A. of the University. Therefore a proper place for its expression and training is a practical necessity. Just as necessary as the church building is to the church, just so necessary is the Y. M. C. A. building to the best interests and highest development of the Young Men's Christian Association.

W. J. GORDON.

I believe that a Y. M. C. A. building on the campus would add much to the social life of the University. It would be the one place that every member of the University could meet on a common ground—Christian fellowship.

Man is social by nature, he naturally joins with his fellows to form clubs. There is a large element in the University who have no sort of club relation; the Y. M. C. A. has an opportunity to supply this need. The home of the Y. M. C. A. would become a University Club House, and the man that boards at Commons would come to know the man that lives at the hotel. If the building did no more than this it would be worth the effort.

FOOT BALL TALK.

An Interview of Coach Olcott—Prospects Good.

The foot ball team this year will be, we dare say, stronger than any student expected before he returned to college. A remarkably good proportion of the old Varsity men have returned: Jones, G., Cox, Jones, H., Stewart, Donnelly, Fisher, Jacobs, Newton, Mann, Berkeley, Engle and Hester. We also have with us this year several men who have had foot ball experience at other colleges. Among these we may mention Roberson, Engle, R. and Ross. The quality and amount of material for the Varsity, in a word, is encouraging.

Coach Olcott, when interviewed in regard to our foot ball chances, made the following pointed remarks:

"I cannot say anything more definite than that our prospects now are as hopeful as they were at the corresponding time last year.

"Now that Hester, our old guard, has returned things look brighter. Yet there is still a lack of line men. Tackle is the most hotly contested position of the line at present, for we have back three old men who were sub-tackles, Donnelly, Young Bully Jones and Hester. It is true, too, that we have enough material for ends; but among the men there are some injuries.

"When we come to think of our back line, however, we become encouraged. Material is not lacking there. We expect to get a good full-back from the men who are working for this place. Among these are Roberson, full-back on A. and M. last year, and Engle, our last year's full-back. Engle has been too busy with his college course recently to come out on the field; but in a day or two he will be there to make the contest a little more spirited.

"And then too, we expect a very interesting struggle for quarter. The present contestants for that position are: Jacobs, Worth, Wilson, Roach, Engle, R., and Ross, who was last year's quarter on Oak Ridge. So, although our old quarter, Graves, and our sub-quarter, Carr, are not here, you may say that we expect to get a good man for the place out of the new candidates.

"Giles, by the way, says something about leaving; but we all hope that he will not do that, for we need him here."

"How about the weights of the individual men this year?"

"Well, there is Stewart, for instance, who has gained eighteen pounds, which makes a total of two hundred and thirteen. But he, I guess, is about the heaviest man on the team."

"Will you state the condition and chance of each individual player?"

"No, I can't say anything further in particular. It's too soon to tell.

"There is one thing, though, of which I do wish to speak, and that is the good that will be gained if men turn out to strengthen the scrubs. On this depends not only the development of this year's Varsity but also the strength of next year's team. For, next year most of our old Varsity men will not be back; and the best and surest way to be able to fill the vacancies thus created is through the training that is to be got by work on this year's scrub team. We lack men now, and the scrubs as a whole are not as heavy as is wished. Until these men develop, the practices each evening must be light. In a short time, however, we intend to appoint a coach for the scrubs and to have them thoroughly organized. I am very anxious for the material which I know is here among these six hundred students, to come out to the practice each evening, and give the Varsity the strongest opposition possible. The men to whom I refer—the men who have the slightest ambition to play foot ball—if they come on the field and work, will do two worthy things: help, to an incalculable degree, both their college's foot ball prospects and their own.

"The Scrubs have another considerable inducement. All faithful Scrubs, whether they have been so successful as to become a member of the Varsity or not, are going to be taken to Richmond Thanksgiving on the excursion free of charge. Here they will have the pleasure of seeing how effectively the axe which they sharpened can cut. This pleasure has been offered the Scrubs simply because the athletic association feels, and knows, that a faithful Scrub is due at least this much material compensation."

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION MEETS.

Officers of Athletic Association and Tar Heel Editors Elected Last Saturday.

The General Athletic Association met in Gerrard Hall last Saturday to organize for the year. As every student of the University is a member of this organization, the hall was crowded with the loyal, from freshman to post-graduate, all interested in the year's athletic work. Especial interest was given to the meeting by the fact that our prospects for successful teams were never better than this year. And everyone felt that to be victorious there must be a good beginning.

The association was called to order by Captain Jones, of the foot ball team, who stated the object of the meeting, and called for nominations for president. Mr. J. B. Ramsey was nominated by Mr. R. S. Stewart and received the unanimous vote of the house. Mr. Ramsey then took the chair, and, after thanking the students for the honor, proceeded with the elections. The following officers were chosen: Vice-President, A. H. Johnston; Secretary and Treasurer, T. H. Hill; Graduate Member Advisory Committee, R. S. Stewart; Undergraduate Member, A. W. Haywood; Chief Cheerer, L. S. Holt.

As THE TAR HEEL is the organ of the Athletic Association the following board of editors was elected: Editor-in-Chief, C. P. Russell; Business Manager, W. E. Pharr; Associate Editors, J. V. Howard, J. L. Moore, J. K. Wilson, J. A. Parker and W. T. Shore.

Mr. M. Ashbey Lambert, of the law class, spent Sunday

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

With the present issue of The TAR HEEL Volume 12 begins and a new editorial board takes on the trials and troubles and tribulations incident to the getting out of a college weekly. This board is new to the business and if mistakes occur, we ask you not to "cuss us out" behind our backs but put your criticism on paper and mail it to THE TAR HEEL. It will be thankfully received and gladly published.

THE TAR HEEL is the official organ of the General Athletic Association and though its principal theme will be the athletic side of the University, other sides will not be neglected but it is the aim of the editors to represent and reflect college life here as a whole. And so all news and contributions pertaining to college life and affairs will be printed with pleasure.

We ask support not only along this line but also financially. THE TAR HEEL is the official organ of the Athletic Association; every student in the University is a member of the Athletic Association; therefore it is the duty of every student in the University to lend his support to THE TAR HEEL by subscribing to it. Don't sponge on your neighbor by reading his paper or looking on with him when he gets it out of the office, or get out of subscribing by any other means but when the Business Manager comes around, put your name down like a man.

Next, we have a word for the new student. We are glad to welcome you to Chapel Hill and earnestly hope that you have come to do solid work and become an honor to your Alma Mater and your State. We send a copy of THE TAR HEEL to you free this week that you may see what it is and what it stands for. Read it carefully, ponder over it earnestly and then get your subscription ready.

Finally, to all students, old and new, let us make this a great year for old U. N. C. and let each and every one of us preserve an unshaken and unswerving determination to subscribe for THE TAR HEEL.

We are sure that every loyal son of Carolina will rejoice with exceeding great joy that we have such excellent prospects for a foot ball team this fall. A goodly number of our old men are back and the new material is promising. The weather has been a little warm but the plays are made with a snap and ginger that argue well for a fast team. With a capable captain, an efficient manager and a coach unsurpassed in the South, there is no reason why the team of 1903 should not make some history this fall.

Our first game is with Guilford to-day, the 26th. Guilford never fails to put up a fast, plucky game. Let us have a larger crowd out to this first game than we have had in the past.

The schedule for games this fall was printed last spring but we give it again for the convenience of those who failed to see it last spring.

Sept. 26th, Guilford College, at Chapel Hill.

Oct. 3rd, Oak Ridge, at Chapel Hill.

Oct. 10th, South Carolina College, at Columbia.

Oct. 17th, V. M. I., at Roanoke.

Oct. 24th, Georgetown, at Norfolk.

Oct. 31st, University of Kentucky, at Greensboro.

Nov. 7th, V. P. I., at Norfolk.

Nov. 14th, Clemson, at Chapel Hill.

Nov. 26th, Virginia, at Richmond.

This is a good schedule and a very interesting one but in our opinion it is also one of the most difficult that the team has had in years. The first two might be called practice games but we'll wager that the remaining games will be interesting a plenty. If Carolina comes out as victor at the close of the season, she will have performed a feat indeed. There are at least four championship games in the series and if the team is to win, it means that the student body must get behind the team as it never did before. A schedule like this means work and no team can do its best without the assurance that it has the confidence of the student body.

The only idea that we wish to add is especially directed toward the remaining factor that shapes the success of the team, viz., the student body. As usual, of course, we expect to hear the college yells often during both the practice and the regular games; and we are confident also that our "Chief Cheerer" is the kind of man that will have these yells given, for we think he is not at all backward. But, there is a certain false conservatism among our students which ought not to be. This shyness of which we speak, is that thing which keeps a man on the side-line from cheering unless accompanied by a crowd of fellow students. In short, we censure the college man who sees a good play and then stands with fixed mouth, "too scared or being butted" to speak. The right sort of spirit is in the fellow who, when he sees a commendable play, does not wait, but regardless of his fellow students spits his tobacco juice, so to speak, and shouts his approval.

Let us all "come down off our high horses" and get on common ground where we can show our ardor for our college team. We want to see them finish the season victorious for several reasons. One good reason was given by Coach Olcott at the mass meeting last year just before the team left for Richmond. Those who were present at that outburst of college spirit will never forget that last sentence which was spoken so earnestly.

"For, there are friends and alumni of the University all over this State, and in other States, who will be watching the team anxiously—and I want them to say, like General Lee once said, "God bless the Tar Heel Boys."

Y. M. C. A. Meeting

The first public meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the chapel Sunday afternoon, Sept. 13th. A majority of the faculty and students were present, and an interesting meeting was held. Short talks were made by the following:

"Welcome in Behalf of University," by Dr. F. P. Venable.

"Welcome in Behalf of Pastors of Chapel Hill," N. M. Watson.

"Type of a College Man," by E. K. Graham.

"Young Men's Fellowships," by Dr. Thomas Hume.

"Men Wanted for Practical Workers," by R. M. Harper.

As a result of this meeting about seventy new members were secured, which is about fifty percent increase over that of last year.

Faculty Fishermen.

It is well known that some of the members of our faculty can do something else well besides teach. "Red Buck" Bryant writes in the Charlotte Observer from the Sapphire country: "Dr. R. H. Whitehead and Maj. William Cain, of the University, fish in the Tuckaseege river every summer. Dr. Whitehead makes his home at Sapphire and goes down for a fishing frolic whenever he feels like it. He fishes with the fly altogether and is reputed the best fisherman that goes to the mountains. He can toss the fly further and into the most remote places. He and Mr. Cain caught some good strings last season."

Messrs. Eagles and MacNider have been appointed Assistants in Geology.

Dr. J. K. Ross, of Charlotte, one of our oldest inhabitants, is back on the Hill shaking hands with numerous friends and re-visiting the scenes of his childhood.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the University Pharmacy in another column. While waiting for your mail make yourself easy with them.

Some additional work has been done in the Library. About twenty-five hundred volumes on Biography were re-catalogued during the summer, and also a new scheme for getting at the North Carolina publications. Electric lights have been put in and the Library is now kept open from 7:30 to 9:00 at night.

One of the biggest additions that is to be made to the University this fall is the extension of the physical laboratory. Several thousand dollars have been invested in dynamos and motors and auxiliary apparatus, and much other apparatus to be used in teaching Physics has been ordered. When these improvements have been made, the University will have one of the best physical laboratories in the country.

The post-office at University Station is about the last place that one would think of to procure cash, but some enterprising thief got inside last Monday night during the absence of Mr. O. T. Craig, the postmaster, and came off with one hundred and eighty-two dollars of Uncle Sam's cash and some Southern Railway checks in his jeans. The report is that there is no clue to the robbers.

Prof. Collier Cobb went down to the City of Oaks Saturday to remain over Sunday.

"The Octopus" has been lost from the library. Finder will please return to the Librarian.

We wish to direct the attention of our readers to the ad of Kahn Bros. in another column.

Boys! Try Klutz for your supplies; he caters for the Student trade, and will save you money.

Mr. W. H. Smith returned from Goldsboro Thursday afternoon. He was called home on account of death in his family.

Prof. Williams notes the fact that his lecture room has been changed from No. 13 to No. 14. Probably this was done that none would be afraid to enter therein.

The University is fortunate in having secured Mr. A. D. Brown as Physical Instructor for the ensuing year. Mr. Brown has had wide experience in this line, having served the Y. M. C. A. of Germantown, Penn., where there are over a thousand members.

The four members of the faculty who were away on leave of absence last year have returned and are meeting their classes again. These are Dr. H. V. Wilson, who was abroad; Dr. A. Henderson, who was at the University of Chicago; Prof. E. K. Graham, who was at Columbia; and Mr. J. E. Latta who was at Harvard.

THE TAR HEEL is sent this week to many of our old alumni subscribers who have been taking the paper heretofore. We deem it unnecessary to communicate with all in regard to it, and trust that they will notify us if they wish their paper discontinued; the subscription price is, as usual, $1.50 in advance.

Faculty Lectures.

The following lectures on Hygiene will be given during the present session by members of the faculty who are experts in the various lines upon which they will address the students. These lectures are intended for male students only, and as they will be both interesting and helpful, every student should try to hear them. The dates of these lectures will be given later, also that of the Star Lecture Course.

Below are the names of the Faculty, and their subjects.

Dr. C. S. Mangum will give four lectures on "Cleanliness, Internal and External;" "Sleep;" "Exercise;" "Physical Excesses."

Mr. A. D. Brown, Director of gymnasium, "Physical Culture."

Prof. Gore, "Lighting, Heating and Clothing."

Dr. I. H. Manning will give three lectures: "Physiology of Digestion;" "Physiology of Circulation and Respiration;" "Physiology of Nervous System."

Dr. Chas. Baskerville gives two on, "Air and Ventilation;" "Water and Sewerage Disposal."

Dr. A. S. Wheeler, one on "Food and Food Adulteration."

DR. BATTLE LECTURES.

First of the Series of Faculty Lectures for the Year.

The first of the series of lectures given by members of the faculty during the college year was delivered in Gerrard Hall, Thursday by Dr. K. P. Battle. His subject was "The Similarity of the Development of the Constitution of North Carolina to that of the English Constitution." Dr. Battle's knowledge of history is well known and he handled his subject in his usual entertaining manner.

The object of Dr. Battle's lecture was to show that the changes in the political development of Great Britain and North Carolina have been almost the same and adopted at times nearly identical. Of course this arises from the fact that the people of North Carolina are transplanted Englishmen. The executive, judicial and legislative departments were taken in order. Edward VII has the legal powers of Governor Aycock, and no more. And these powers are few. Still both have great influence owing to their personal qualities and conspicuous positions.

The cumbersome and costly equity suits and nicety of pleading were corrected by North Carolina in 1868 and by England in 1873. So the unjust laws in regard to married woman's property were changed in North Carolina in 1868 and in England, 1882. And the old decision that a husband could lawfully whip his wife were declared bad law in the two countries about the same time.

Dr. Battle then showed how the House of Commons in England ruled the country, and how the Senate and House in North Carolina the same as the Commons in England, and virtually rule the State. He showed in same detail the inequalities of representation in the two countries, and how one was corrected in 1832 and the other in 1835.

The history of Catholic Emancipation was then detailed, succeeding in England in 1828, and in our State formally in 1835, but virtually in 1832 on the election of Gasper to the Supreme Court. He showed too that Rothschild, a Jew, was admitted to Parliament in 1858 and the old restrictions finally removed eight years later. North Carolina acted in favor of the Jews in 1861.

Other coincidences in legislation were mentioned although there was no communication between the two countries on the subjects, an interesting proof that communities of same lineage and similar political training, no matter how widely separated, are apt to think alike.

Senior Election.

The Seniors met at two-thirty Wednesday and elected the following as class officers.

President, S. S. Robins.
First Vice-President, W. C. Rankin.
Second Vice-President, E. A. Council.

Secretary, L. B. Lockhart.

Athletic Notes From Other Colleges.

Georgetown had 35 men out as candidates for her foot ball team the first evening. Her captain is Hart, last year's half-back. Givens, her centre last year, who made the All-Southern with our Stewart as second choice, weighed in at the beginning of the season, at 240 pounds. He will probably be played at tackle this year. Other Georgetown men back who were on last year's team are, Rorké and Mahoney, guards; Edmonston, end; Abbatticho, quarter; and Reilly and McGettigan.

Virginia has elected I. Branch Johnson, tackle, as captain in place of Waters, who is prevented from playing on account of too many "grats". Some of these were taken up in an elopement with a young lady of Charlottesville. Albright, our last year's guard, is said to be at Charlottesville this year. Virginia already has Council and Bass and if she can manage to add 8 more North Carolinians, she may be able to get out a good team this fall.

Clemson reports 65 men out at first practice with prospects of this going up to 100. She has five old men back with some likely new material. A newspaper dispatch says that "the new playing rules will, of course, affect Clemson's style of play considerably, and Coach Heisman is kept busy explaining just what their full effect will be and outlining what Clemson's new system will be like."

Georgia has trying for guard a freshman, weighing 275 pounds, and standing 6 feet, 4 inches in his socks. He ought to make it.

Bible Study Rally.

The Y. M. C. A. held a Bible Study Rally in the Chapel Sunday afternoon at 3:30. After the scriptural reading by H. C. Moore, an address was made by Mr. Charles Ross on the "Layman's Attitude Towards the Bible."

Mr. Ross' speech was a strong plea for independent searching in the Bible for truth. As he was a leader in one of the Bible classes here last year his words had an additional weight. He urged that the men of all classes join the Bible classes, and thus make a systematic and unprejudiced study of the Bible.

After the address short explanations of Bible courses were given by W. L. Mann, C. C. Barnhardt, E. S. W. Dameron and O. B. Ross. Over sixty new men were enrolled in the Bible classes. This number will probably be increased to over a hundred before the session ends.

Dr. George Howe has been elected to the chair of Latin to fill the vacancy made by the death of Dr. Linscott. Dr. Howe was born in Columbia, S. C., and is a nephew of President Woodrow Wilson. After graduation at Princeton, he taught for three years in New York with much success, then he spent three years in the University of Halle, taking the degree of Ph.D. Later he studied in Oxford University. Dr. Howe comes highly recommended as a scholar, as a teacher, and as a man.

Hon. C. R. Thomas is spending a few days on the Hill with his son.

GUILFORD DEFEATED

The First Game of the Season Goes to Carolina—The Game in Detail.

The Guilford-Carolina foot ball game last Saturday resulted in a score of 15 to 0 in favor of Carolina. The playing began at 12.35 o'clock, and in three minutes Carolina made a touch-down, and after two minutes more she made another five points. Then Guilford revived to such an extent that the Varsity did not score again until she made her last touch down about the middle of the last half. In the meanwhile the Quakers, aided mainly by Farlow, Dook and Thornburg, made some considerable advances. The visitors as a whole might have made the game at least a little more interesting if the man who did the kicking for them had not almost always punted the ball either straight up in the air or back over his head. As it was, the punts only added to the long gains which were every now and then made by Donnelly, Jones, Jacocks and Newton.

THE GAME.

The game in detail is as follows:

Guilford chooses to defend the east goal, and receives kick-off from Carolina. Jacocks kicks 30 yards, and Guilford catches and advances 10 yards. On first down Guilford gains 2 yards. Next Guilford punts 10 yards.

The ball is caught by Newton, and advanced 5 yards. Roberson goes over centre for 5 yards. And then through same place Jacocks takes ball for another 5 yards. Newton attempts to make a circuit around right end but is thrown back. Jacocks takes ball through the line for 3 yards. On attempting this play a second time Jacocks fumbles the ball but Cox falls on it like a flash. Next, Newton takes the ball, fumbles and loses it. In the shuffle Jacocks regains the ball, and crawls for some two or three yards "kinder" like a snake until he touches the ball down behind the goal posts. Time, 3 minutes. Roberson tries to kick goal but hits one of the posts and the ball bounces back. Score: Guilford 0; Carolina 5.

Our team now takes the eastern half of the gridiron to receive the visitors' kick-off. Captain Dixon punts the ball 25 yards for the Quakers. Singletary catches and advances 15 yards. Jacocks carries ball around left end for 15 yards. Next, by means of a very artistically executed fake play, Newton makes 20 yards. In the following down Guilford gets the ball on account of a fumble.

Guilford on first down loses 2 yards on account of our centre, Stewart, breaking through the Quakers' line, and tackling their runner, almost before he can get started. This forces Guilford to kick. For once she makes a punt for 20 yards.

Jacocks catches the ball and advances 10 yards. Roberson goes over the line for 5 yards. Newton takes the ball by Guilford's left guard and tackle and lopes down the field for a most sensational gain, which culminates in a second touch down.

The contest has now been waging only 5 minutes.

Roberson fails again to kick goal, and so the score is: Guilford 0; Carolina 10.

The Varsity takes the lower half of the gridiron and receives Guilford's kick-off of 35 yards. Donnelly advances 20 yards. Jacocks fails to get around left end, but Newton tries around right end and makes 5 yards. Now Jacocks edges his way through right guard for 5 yards. Roberson makes 3 yards through center, but the referee calls our men back 5 yards because of some one of the team's off-side play. Newton takes the ball 3 yards over left tackle. The ball is now kicked to Guilford's 45 yard line. A Guilford man catches, and is tackled on the spot.

Guilford is beginning to do her best playing. Farlow bucks through our left guard for 3 yards. The visitors next make distance over our right guard. Now they fail to make gain over Donnelly. Around left end they make 4 yards. They kick ball 2 yards, and one of their men gets the ball. On their first down they make 2 yards, and on their second down they make 3 yards. Farlow pushes ball through the Varsity line for 1 yard. Guilford kicks one of her backward kicks and loses 5 yards.

But Jacocks offsets this by losing 8 yards. The Varsity punts the ball 25 yards. Guilford makes a free catch, and makes place kick from the spot.

Roberson, on catching the ball, advances 15 yards to the middle of the field. Donnelly makes a good effort and gains 10 yards over right tackle. There is only a minute and a half to play. Newton makes 5 yards, Jacocks 3 yards and Roberson 5 yards. N. C. kicks the ball and Guilford catches it. Townsend tackles Guilford's man with ball 10 yards from their goal.

Time is called for relaxation.

Guilford, upon resuming position, takes the western end of the field and seems more determined than before to get into the game. The Quakers kick off to Jacocks on Carolina's 10 yard line.

Jacocks advances 15 yards. Mann also makes 15 yards around left end. Donnelly gains 5 yards, and Newton 3 yards. Mann makes 5 yards. Roberson makes 1 yard through center. Mann fails to gain, but Jones, H. M., makes 8 yards. Roberson again tries to buck centre and makes 3 yards. Jones, H. M., gains 10 yards. Newton fails to carry ball because of Guilford's man Thornburg.

Roberson again goes by centre for 5 yard gain. Mann, trying his old-time twisting and turning, makes a beautiful advance of 5 yards against strong defense. Newton is given the ball and he places it over another chalk mark. And now we see the prettiest feature of the game. Donnelly with the ball and with perfect interference, with Carolina men clustered all about him, is carried between the goal posts.

The men have been playing 4 1-2 minutes. Guilford has been doing her utmost, but the Varsity is down hard at work.

Roberson fails to kick goal, and Guilford prepares to kick off from the eastern half of the field.

They kick 35 yards to Jacocks who advances 25 yards. Mann makes an 8 yard run but is called back by referee 10 yards, due to off side play. Jacocks kicks 25 yards.

Dixon catches and advances 10 yards. Farlow goes through the line for 1 yard. Guilford kicks the ball, which hits the teams in line and bounces back 20 yards. Mann grabs the ball and advances 10 yards. Roberson goes over the line for 5 yards. Mann makes no gain. Newton is kept from making gain by Farlow. Newton makes 3 yards. Ball goes over to the Quakers.

Thornburg makes one yard and Snipes gains a yard. Guilford advances 1 yard between Jones and Singletary. The ball goes to Carolina.

Jacocks makes no gain. Newton gains 1-2 yard.

Time is called with the ball in Carolina's hands on Guilford's 25 yard line.

A NEW GYMNASIUM

The Gift of Judge W. P. Bynum, as a Memorial to his Grandson, W. P. Bynum, Jr.

It is with pleasure that THE TAR HEEL announces to the students and alumni of the University, the generous gift of $25,000 from Judge W. P. Bynum, of Charlotte, to be used for the erection of a gymnasium. When the announcement was made in the chapel yesterday the students gave voice to their appreciation in vigorous and prolonged applause.

The new building is to be a memorial to Judge Bynum's grandson, W. P. Bynum, of the class of 1903. He was a student at the University for two years; but his life was cut off before he could fully equip himself for it. He was a member of the Dialectic Society and was a diligent student, making an average of 95 per cent. on his studies. His personal character was exemplary. He was a generous friend and a noble Christian. His death was a loss to his State and to his Alma Mater. It is very fitting therefore, that a building should be erected to his memory on the University campus.

The gift supplies a much-felt want, and comes at the right time. The building will probably be placed on the old athletic field. Work will begin on it soon, so as to have it completed by next year, if possible. This and the new Y. M. C. A. building will make excellent additions to the campus.

Radium and Kunzite.

Several of the New York papers of late have had articles on the work done on the Morgan-Tiffany collection of gems the last summer by Dr. Kunz, of New York and Dr. Charles Baskerville. The latest is the New York Herald, which has an illustrated article this week on Kunzite, the new gem, which was discovered by Drs. Kunz and Baskerville during the course of their investigations, by the action of radium. It was named Kunzite by Dr. Baskerville in honor of Dr. Kunz. It is said to be a most beautiful gem, belonging to the Hiddenite species. It will interest Chapel Hillians to learn that the only sample of this beautiful stone outside of Tiffany's is owned by Mrs. Baskerville, to whom it was presented by Dr. Kunz.

Dr. Baskerville has recently had in his possession a sample of radium which came from the Societe Centrale des Produits Chimique. It weighed only a gram but was worth $200. He recently shipped this to a physician in New York City who was enabled by it to treat successfully a malignant case of sarcoma on the jaw.

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes she whole college will aid it along this line.

Well, we have played our first game for the season and took it without trouble though the score was not as large as was expected. The heat told severely on the Varsity as most of the members of the team have not yet worked off the superfluous flesh gained during the summer. Guilford did not suffer as much in this respect, as their men are lighter than usual and had been in training for some time. Guilford put up its usual plucky game, making some very decided gains over our line at times and throwing end plays for a loss. To-day Oak Ridge is to go up against us and as they generally have some good material in their line-up, an interesting game may be looked for. The attendance at the Guilford game was good and it is probable that to-day it will be much better. Let's have a few more yells at this game.

The good news was announced yesterday morning that the University is to have a gymnasium building at last. Judge W. P. Bynum has given $25,000 for its erection as a memorial to his grandson, W. P. Bynum, Jr., once a student here. Although Judge Bynum is not an alumnus himself several others of his family have been graduated here and he has always felt a deep interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the University. He has the sincere thanks of the entire student body for his princely gift.

What's the matter with pulling off the tie with North Carolina? Nobody seems to know just why the mill was called off last year. The Tar Heels are doubtless as dissatisfied as we are with the present status of the matter.

—Red and Black, (Ga.)

We do not know "why the mill was called off last year" any more than you do, dear brother; it was certainly not our fault. We are ready at any time under the old conditions.

We are sure that all those interested in the welfare of the University will be gratified to hear that work on the long-talked-of building for the Young Men's Christian Association is to begin so soon. This building will mean much to college life here besides being a great addition to the campus.

Alumni Notes.

Burton Smith, ex-'04, is now a student in the Georgia Tech.

The New York correspondent of the Charlotte Observer says:

"Mr. Cameron Belo Buxton, formerly of Winston-Salem, has assumed the duties of chief clerk in the local freight offices of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad. Mr. Buxton is well known in North Carolina, where he was graduated in the class of '99. * * * Probably there is no young man in the Southern colony here who is better liked than Mr. Buxton, or whose success has been more genuinely meritorious." Mr. Buxton was one of the best half-backs Carolina has had in years.

There were two sudden and rather unexpected marriages recently. The lucky man in each case was a U. N. C. man. Mr. and Mrs. Holley Bell are spending their honeymoon in Baltimore. Until a few days Mrs. Bell was Miss Mary Williams of Warrenton, N. C. On the night of the 28th, Miss Maude Ferguson, of Waynesville, N. C. a member of the junior class of Converse College, S. C., became the bride of Mr. Alexander Shuford, ex-'00.

While it is rather early in the year to be talking base ball, it is a matter for congratulation that our prospects do not look so blue as they once did. Hobgood, Wake Forest's well known twirler and Murphy, crack pitcher last year for the Georgia Tech, have entered the University, and these with Green and Hart, who are back, will make our pitching staff complete.

A meeting of the Greensboro University Alumni Association was held on the 24th ult., for the purpose of deciding on opening University headquarters during the great reunion of North Carolinians to be held in Greensboro this month. The meeting was called to order and presided over by Capt. R. P. Gray. Resolutions were adopted authorizing Capt. Gray to appoint another committee to select headquarters for the University and also to appoint another committee to prepare plans for organizing a permanent association of Guilford county alumni.

LOCAL NOTES.

Mr. S. S. Robins returned Tuesday from a business trip to Durham.

Mr. J. B. Goslen returned from Winston-Salem Saturday.

Mr. W. E. Pharr went to Raleigh Saturday on business connected with the Tar Heel.

Mr. J. K. Ross returned from Charlotte last Monday.

Mr. C. M. Byrnes, of the class of 1902 in this University, was on the Hill Monday on his way from his home in Mississippi to Baltimore, where he is studying medicine in Johns Hopkins University.

Mr. Jesse Wilcox, '03, of the second year Medical Class, went home yesterday morning after having been confined to the infirmary for several days with an attack of appendicitis. He will have an operation performed as soon as his condition permits.

Mrs. H. H. Williams is away on a visit to friends and relatives in Pennsylvania.

Gen. W. R. Cox was visiting his sons, Messrs. A. L. Cox, '04, and F. A. Cox, '05, this week.

It now appears that the report that Albright is at Virginia is a mistake. He has been at work at Greensboro and will return to the Hill next week to resume his old position as guard.

In Virginia's game with St. Albans last Saturday, three old Carolina men took part. Council and Bass played left tackle and right end, respectively, for Virginia. Holt played full-back for St. Albans, and was reported a star as usual.

Dr. H. V. Wilson, of the Biological Department, was summoned to Baltimore last Sunday by a telegram telling him of the fatal injury of his father in a street car accident. Dr. Wilson left at once but was unable to reach the bed-side of his father before his death. The entire student body and faculty of the University sympathize with Dr. Wilson in his sad bereavement.

Dr. Charles Lee Raper has a paper in the September issue of The North Carolina Booklet, entitled "Social Life in Colonial North Carolina." This is the first of a series of papers on the subject. He begins a study of how the colonists lived in a social way, as he has discussed other sides of their life in his various other books and papers.

The next meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science will be held at Chapel Hill in November. This organization is made up of the teachers in the scientific departments of the various colleges in the State, and others who are interested in scientific work. The Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society has been made its official organ and hereafter will be published quarterly.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

New Addition to the Campus. Work Will be Begun This Fall. Plans Now Being Arranged. To be Located South of the Chapel and South Building.

At a meeting of the Building Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association held in Dr. Venable's office in the Alumni Building last week, it was decided that work on the building for the Association should begin at once. All the members of the committee were present and the decision was unanimous.

During the past summer a canvas of the state was made in the interest of the building. This canvas together with the cash and notes which have been gradually collected for the past ten years brings the building fund to a little over $7,000. The purpose of the Association is to erect a $10,000 building, a building devoid of useless rooms, practical, and at the same time a structure that will appeal to the aesthetic in such a way that it will be in harmony in season and out of season with the buildings that are on the campus now and with those that are to be erected here in the future.

The building will be of brick, but as to the other details no final plans have yet been agreed upon. Architect Milburn, of Columbia, S. C., who made plans for the Carr and the Mary Ann Smith Buildings has been written for and is expected on the Hill in a few days. The committee will then meet him, presenting the details they have agreed upon in order that he may arrange the plans immediately. In the meantime Prof. Gore is communicating with parties for brick so that the first shipment can be made if necessary in the next few weeks. No contract will be given out for the erection of the building; in order to save this expense several members of the Faculty will take charge of the work.

As was stated before, the Association now has about $7,000 in cash and in notes for the erection of this building—about $1,500 in cash and $5,500 in notes. Most of these notes are payable in four installments of six months each. Several of the largest ones are payable when the foundation is laid. Mr. E. McDonald, Jr., who has charge of the collection of these notes is busy this week sending out requests for the first payment which is due Oct. 1st. The Building Committee hope to raise the fund for the building to $10,000 this year, so the work will not be slackened.

It will be a great epoch in University life when the foundation is laid this fall. For the last ten years the project has been talked of but matters seem to be coming to a head at last and a Y. M. C. A. Building for the University is no longer an iridescent dream.

German Club Meets.

The German Club met Saturday and elected the following officers: President, M. C. Staton. Vice-President, H. V. Worth. Secretary, Louis Rountree. Treasurer, Preston Cummings. Leader of the October German, Tom Meares.

· FORTY-FIVE TO NOTHING!

Last Saturday's Game Between Carolina and Oak Ridge Results in a Walkover for Carolina.

The Carolina-Oak Ridge foot ball game Saturday was not so much a glorious victory for Carolina as it was for Oak Ridge a pitiable defeat. Carolina gained nearly nine hundred yards, while Oak Ridge did not gain a yard. The Varsity so completely outclassed the visitors that there was no good game from a practical point of view. No doubt, however, the students were pleased to see the Varsity execute her plays so effectively. The two good tackles, however, that were made by Oak Ridge men were things that everybody was glad to see; and if some other remarkable thing had been done by Oak Ridge, everybody would have been still more pleased. That might have made the Varsity feel more at liberty to increase her score.

As it was the ball was in play only 20 minutes, and in that time Carolina made 45 and Oak Ridge 0.

In a few words the game was something like this: Varsity's quarter would call the signals; then there would be a few rushes, and next some Varsity man, after a little dodging, would chase down the gridiron for a touch down. In detail, however, the game is somewhat harder to describe, it being a series of such long runs that it is hard to use specific language and preserve accuracy. The following report is as correct as possible.

THE GAME IN DETAIL.

Oak Ridge kicks off from the western end of the gridiron for 30 yards.

Newton catches the ball and advances 10 yards. Jacocks makes 3 yards; Mann 8 yards; Donnelly 15 yards; Mann 5 yards; Jacocks 1 yard, and Newton 5 yards. Jacocks makes a "beauty" circle around Oak Ridge's right end for 30 yards. The ball is now within about 10 yards of goal posts. And Mann is given the ball which he carries around Oak Ridge's left end for a touch down. The ball has been in play 3 minutes. Jacocks kicks goal. Score: Carolina 6; Oak Ridge 0.

Carolina kicks off from the west for 23 yards. Oak Ridge catches but makes no advance. She attempts to gain again but fails, since left end Townsend runs behind the line and downs the man with the ball. The ball goes to Carolina.

Jacocks makes another long run of about 30 yards around Oak Ridge's right end and makes a touch down. The ball has been in play only one minute and 20 seconds since the last touch down. Jacocks kicks a second goal. Score: Carolina 12, Oak Ridge 0.

The Oak Ridge men station themselves in the western end of the field and kick off 30 yards to Mann, who attempts to pitch to Jacocks, but Oak Ridge gets the ball.

After twice attempting to advance without success, Oak Ridge kicks the ball 10 yards.

Jacocks advances four yards. Engle makes 25 yards on a pretty trick play around left end. Jacocks punts ball about 35 yards and Cox falls on the ball, which is about 15 yards from the goal. Mann carries the ball over for a third touch down.

Time of play since last score, 3 minutes and 50 seconds. Jacocks kicks goal. Score: Carolina 18, Oak Ridge 0.

Oak Ridge kicks off 25 yards from the east.

Mann catches and advances 12 yards. Donnelly goes through the line and makes a long run more than half the length of the field, making a fourth touchdown. Time since last score, 30 sec. Jacocks kicks goal, making the score: Carolina 24; Oak Ridge 0.

Oak Ridge kicks off 30 yards.

Mann catches and advances 10 yards. He is stopped by a very pretty tackle on the part of an Oak Ridge man. Next Jacocks takes the ball and runs around Oak Ridge's left until within 20 yards of the goal, but is called back 50 yards, on account of a foul play on the part of some Varsity man. This delayed the next touch down only a little bit. The very next play Donnelly went between left tackle and left end on down the field until he laid the ball down behind the goal. Time, 1 minute and 50 seconds. Jacocks fails to kick goal. Score, Carolina 29; Oak Ridge 0.

Oak Ridge chooses to kick off again. Donnelly catches and advances 20 yards. Carolina kicks 25 yards.

An Oak Ridge man catches the ball but makes no gain, because of Townsend's pretty tackle. Oak Ridge then punts.

Engle catches and advances 15 yards. Jacocks makes 10 yards. Mann goes through the line for 5 yards. Jacocks goes around right tackle for 10 yards. The ball is now within a short distance of the goal, but time for this half is almost up. So Jacocks attempts to kick a drop 20 yards from goal and succeeds. Score: Carolina 34; Oak Ridge 0. Time is up.

SECOND HALF.

Carolina takes the western end of the gridiron and kicks off 45 yards. An Oak Ridge man catches and Rose makes a quick tackle. Oak Ridge makes two futile attempts to advance the ball, and finally the ball goes to the Varsity.

Engle attempts drop kick but fails to score. Oak Ridge lines up on the 25 yard line. Rose catches the ball and advances 10 yards.

Newton goes around Oak Ridge's right end for another long run. An Oak Ridge player tries to tackle but is prevented by Berkeley, who throws himself in his way, thereby thwarting the man in his purpose. So Newton goes on unmolested and makes a touch down. The ball has been in play 1 minute and 55 seconds. Roberson kicks goal. Score: Carolina 40; Oak Ridge 0.

Oak Ridge kicks off from the west 20 yards to Fisher, who advances 15 yards. And on the next play Berkeley makes some rabbit-like dodges and runs down the field for one more touch down. Time of ball in play, 36 seconds. Roberson fails to kick goal. Score: Carolina 45; Oak Ridge 0.

Oak Ridge kicks off 35 yards. Fisher catches and advances 10 yards. Newton makes another long run for 30 yards. Newton makes no gain. The ball is about 15 yards from Oak Ridge's goal.

It is necessary for the visitors to make the afternoon train and time is called. The ball has been in play only 6 minutes of this half.

Gridiron Gossip.

Yale's great rival, Harvard, complains of a lack of heavy men, but has material enough on the gridiron to make the best of them hustle can be taken for granted. Hard work is being done.

Harvard's team was given a big upheaval Wednesday when three of last year's players were shifted to new positions, which they seem likely to hold throughout the year.

Pennsylvania has another eligibility problem on her hands, in the shape of Captain Gardiner, of last year's red and blue eleven. Gardiner, though this is practically his fifth year in foot ball at Pennsylvania, maintains that he is eligible this year.

The first serious accident this year on the foot ball field occurred at Carlisle, Pa., when Samuel Sannok, the center of last year's Indian team, broke his leg while practicing.

West Point and Wesleyan are the only teams that are on both the Harvard and Yale schedule.

Dr. Charles Baskerville went down to the Capital City Saturday to remain over Sunday.

ON TO RICHMOND!

The Fifteen Most Faithful Scrubs Will be Given a Free Trip to Richmond November 26.

From an interview with Coach Olcott today, we quote the following:

"I desire," said he, "that you mention in the Tar Heel, and under heavy head lines, that the faithful scrubs who play for the practice of the Varsity until the close of the season will be given a free trip to Richmond on Thanksgiving Day, November 26."

Dr. Venable expressed the desire that the Athletic Association do this much for the Scrubs and has appointed Coach Olcott and Manager Smith to say who the faithful few will be. The Varsity will carry eighteen men as usual, and from the scrubs remaining, fifteen of the most faithful ones will be given their railroad fare.

This is gratifying to the whole student body as to the scrub players. It is from the scrubs that the Varsity gets its strength. A strong scrub team means a strong Varsity and a strong Varsity means success for Carolina.

Let there be no lack of men, to practice the Varsity, but let every man who is physically able come out and show his interest in Carolina's success. Last year was a record breaker for Carolina in athletics. Now let everybody rush together and make this a banner year as well as the last one. We cannot go backwards.

The excursion train to Richmond on November 26, will be run as it was last year, and under the direction of the students. The railroad fare will be the same, if not less.

T. N. E. Initiation.

Last Friday and Saturday the Sophomore Fraternity of Theta Nu Epsilon held its annual initiation.

Friday night in accordance with the custom the new men were given a banquet. Ramsey made the address of welcome to which Staton, in behalf of the initiates, ably responded.

Saturday morning from 10:30 until after the foot ball game much amusement was afforded by the fantastic appearance of the neophytes, who strolled around the campus and athletic field dressed in all sorts of different combinations.

The following are the initiates: H. C. Jones, Jr., R. B. Engle, M. C. Staton, T. B. Cheshire, P. F. Faison, Walter Clark, Jr., E. S. Burwell, W. Winborne, B. H. Perry, A. D. Browne, L. Sheep, E. Hobgood, J. G. Wood, A. McMillan, C. L. Pemberton, D. Fowle.

T. S. Fuller, Law '03, from Raleigh, was on the Hill a few days this week. He has formed a partnership with Jas. H. Pott, at Raleigh, and will practice at that place.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

In the "Red and White," N. C. A. and M., which we have lately received, the athletic editor, Mr. O. Max Gardner, makes some remarks which have the right ring to them. We wish that every student of whatever college could read and ponder them. Mr. Gardner says in part:

From time immemorial, the pranks of college boys have been a recognized feature of student life, due allowance being made by the college or municipal authorities until as regularly happens, matters are brought to an aggravated state. Unfortunately, in the college world, little attention is given to those actions that create considerable unfavorable comment in the world at large. This is not a matter which involves especially the reputation of any institution, or any one of them in particular referred to, but in every educational institution, without exception, it concerns the undergraduate members. In one of the papers last year appeared this sentence: The College student in the singular number is generally a gentleman; in the plural he is a rowdy. Innocent fun it all may be as contemplated by the participants, but it is in the highest degree reprehensive, and should receive more than a passing consideration. A small minority of the students in any institution can, and as a rule do, create the disturbance that gives rise to these opinions, injuring beyond measure their own reputation and the college to which they belong.

It will be but a few weeks now until our foot ball eleven will be off on its trips, and let me adjure you men of the foot ball squad to act as gentlemen on these trips. There have been men on our foot ball teams who were totally devoid of the first principles of good behavior; they would try to carry on and flirt with every woman they saw, at the hotels bully the waiters, annoy the porters, disturb all the guests, and manage to make themselves a general nuisance. Let our men be spoken of as gentlemen, and if they are not victorious, defeat will not be so stinging. O. M. G.

These are words of wisdom and coming from the man they do, they mean much. His address to the foot ball team is especially timely, we think. We are glad to be able to say that we have never heard any but the very best reports of the conduct of our own men, both on and off the foot ball field. A report appeared in a Richmond paper last Thanksgiving telling of a row at Petersburg started by University men which was made out of the whole cloth; but fortunately very little attention was paid to it.

As there are prospects of one or more excursions to accompany the team this fall, let us remember that a U. N. C. man is always closely watched wherever he appears; then let us always act as gentlemen and as University men. We need have little to fear then from the criticisms of outsiders.

We print in another column the agreement drawn up by the representatives of the Literary Societies of Georgia and those of our own Di. and Phi. in regard to the new series of three debates between Georgia and Carolina lately decided upon. We are truly glad that the negotiations have finally come to a satisfactory close and that Carolina's good debaters will not be without a chance to meet upon the rostrum this year a worthy adversary. Georgia is the only opponent that has ever given us much trouble and we await the outcome of the series with great interest.

The 150th meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society takes place in Person Hall, Tuesday, Oct. 13th, 7:30 P. M. The following paper will be presented:

LOCAL NOTES.

Registration—572.

Hereafter THE TAR HEEL will appear on Thursdays.

Foust will return the 17th.

Fred Harris, '03, who had been visiting friends here, left Monday to enter Harvard University.

At a meeting of the South Carolina Club Saturday, Mr. R. S. Stewart was elected President, S. Kluttz Vice President, and Rex Perry Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. R. M. Harper, '04, returned Monday from a visit to Elon College and Whitsett Institute. Mr. Harper is a special student Y. M. C. A. Secretary and he visited these institutions in the interest of the Association.

Quite a number of students went to Durham Saturday night.

Mr. Williams, of the Oak Ridge team, who had the misfortune to have his collar-bone broken in the game Saturday, returned to Oak Ridge Monday.

Mr. C. H. Norton, '06, of Durham, is spending a few days on the Hill this week.

Gymnasium exercises under the instructor, Mr. Browne, began Wednesday afternoon. Freshmen are to report at 5 p. m., Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; Sophomores and Juniors, on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Messrs. Geo. D. Vick and R. G. S. Davis, both of the class of '99, are on the Hill. The former comes to study medicine; the latter is on a visit to friends.

Mr. Ashbey Lambert, of the Law school, spent Sunday in Raleigh.

Mr. W. H. McLean came to the Hill Tuesday morning on account of the illness of his son, Mr. Will McLean, '07. Mr. McLean has been confined the infirmary for several days with typhoid fever, but is reported to be improving.

In the Phi Saturday night Messrs. F. McLean, '05, and Stancell were elected to represent the society in the Junior-Soph Debate.

Mr. E. W. Martin has accepted a position with the Yearby Drug Co. and will be glad to serve his friends in anything in his line.

A private telephone line is being erected connecting the power house and the pumping station one mile from town.

A peculiarity that has been noted this year among the followers of foot ball is the majority of the teams, judging from statistics computed from thirty-five of the leading elevens of the country, will be captained by men in the line. Princeton will be led by a guard, De Witt; Yale by an end, Rafferty; Cornell by a guard, Hunt; Pennsylvania by an end, Metzger; West Point by an end, Fainsworth; Virginia by a tackle, Johnson, and Carolina by a tackle, Jones.

Sphinx Initiates.

New members of the Sophomore Order of the Sphinx are as follows: Murphy, J. B., Crump, Gray, Calder, Shore, Hill, Pace, Lambeth.

"Billy" Reynolds, formerly coach for Carolina but who has coached Georgia for the past two years, created a sensation down there the other day by suddenly handing in his resignation. He said that he had received the offer of a fine position in Canada and would leave at once.

West Point and Annapolis do not meet this year, the government regarding their annual contest with disfavor. West Point plays the University of Chicago on November 14th. Virginia plays Annapolis on October 10th.

Resolutions Passed by the Faculty, October 2, 1903.

The Faculty of the University of North Carolina esteems it a privilege to express its appreciation of the Memorial which Judge William Preston Bynum purposes to erect here to his grandson, William Preston Bynum, Jr., of the class of 1893.

This brilliant young man died at the close of his Sophomore year. But his brief residence at the University was amply sufficient to win for him the love and respect of his instructors and companions.

The College records bear witness that in scholarship he stood in the first rank; all who knew him remember the charm of his courteous bearing and hearty good-fellowship. He was in perfect sympathy with College life.

It is fitting that the memory of so noble a character should live forever, as an inspiration to all who come into the University community.

The erection of a Gymnasium in memory of William Preston Bynum, Jr., commands our hearty sympathy and our grateful appreciation.

Changes in Foot Ball Rules.

There have been several important changes made in the rules since last year. These changes are said to affect both Virginia's and Clemson's style of play very materially while it is very probable that they will work to our great advantage.

The first alteration allows the quarter-back to run with the ball, provided, he goes five yards out from the point where the snapper-back puts the ball in play. In order that the umpire may be able to judge accurately of this distance, it will probably be necessary that the part between the two twenty-five yard lines, where the quarter is allowed to run, be marked out, not only with the customary five yard transverse lines, but also with longitudinal lines, thus making this middle section a sort of checker board.

A second alteration rules that the man who kicks the ball, if the ball goes beyond the line of scrimmage, may neither put men on side by running up ahead of them, nor may he himself secure the ball. This is aimed to protect the full-back from charges after he has kicked the ball and to restrain him from getting the ball after his own kick and carrying it on.

Another alteration proclaims that while the teams change goals after a try at goal following a touchdown, and also after every goal from the field, the teams also shall take opposite goals at the beginning of the second half from those assumed at the beginning of the first half, and the side which did not kick off at the first half shall kick off in the second half.

GORDON, '03, and STEWART, '03, REPRESENTATIVES.

Another alteration gives to the team that has been rather freely scored upon the option of kicking off or of having their opponents kick off.

The most important change, however, provides that when the ball is put in play in the scrimmage at any point of that middle portion of the field extending from one 25-yard line to the other—First, at least seven players of the side having the ball must be on the line of scrimmage when the ball is put in play; Second, the player who first receives the ball may carry it forward beyond the line of scrimmage, provided, in so doing he crosses such line at least five yards from the point where the snapper-back put the ball in play. Outside of this territory between the two 25-yard lines the old rules prevail.

Another change provides that head gear, etc., shall no longer be made of sole leather or other hard and unyielding material and all other protectors must be made as, in the opinion of the umpire, to be without danger to the other players.

The penalty for holding an opponent is now a loss of twenty yards instead of the ball going over.

The tackling below the knees rule has been left out but for tripping an opponent the loss will be twenty yards.

Another excellent alteration has been made providing that the linesman instead of giving testimony to the referee under certain conditions must himself penalize a side for off side play in the line, tripping and unnecessary roughness to a back after a kick. If the linesman and umpire both give decisions on the same play, one affecting one side and the other the other, then the ball shall be brought back to the point where it was put in play and played over again without alteration in position. The man who, standing back of his own line of scrimmage receives the ball from one of his own side and then kicks it beyond the line of scrimmage, cannot put other men on side by running ahead of them, nor can he himself get the ball until after it has been touched by a player of the opposing side. The reason for this is that no excuse may be offered by the defense who may run into the full-back of the offense after he has kicked the ball. The Rule committee expects officials to severely punish any such unnecessary roughness.

If the ball, when in possession of either side, is touched when inside the opponents' ten yard line by a player who is off side, it shall go as a touch-back to the defender of that goal.

GEORGIA-CAROLINA DEBATE.

Stipulations Have Been Signed and the Debate is Assured.

At last the Georgia debate is a certainty.

The two college last year could not come to any agreement satisfactory to both sides. At first it seemed that such would be the case this year, as the Georgia people wished to admit law students. But they have now agreed to renew the stipulations under which we formerly debated. As this is what we wished all along, they have been signed by both sides and the debate assured.

The next thing in order is for the contestants for positions on our team to present a query, and then get down to work. Georgia has always been our strongest rival on the rostrum, winning three of the six debates we have had with them. To win this series means, not only to work off the tie, but to firmly establish Carolina's claim to the southern debating championship. For this reason it is hoped that our best men will enter the contests.

The following is a copy of the stipulations:

On this, the first day of October, 1903, the Phi Kappa and Demosthenian Societies of the University of Georgia, and the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies of the University of North Carolina enter into the following agreement:

First: There shall be a series of three annual debates between the said Universities.

Second: These debates shall take place on the first Friday night in April of each year, beginning with 1904.

Third: These debates shall be held alternately in Chapel Hill, N. C., and Athens, Ga., the first to be held in Chapel Hill.

Fourth: Each University shall be represented by two debaters, the same to be selected by the Literary Societies of their respective institutions.

Fifth: The societies at the Institution where the debate is held shall bear all expenses except traveling expenses, of the visiting debaters.

Sixth: The President or Chancellor of the Institution at which the debate is held shall with the concurrence of the President or Chancellor of the other Institution, choose three judges who shall decide the debate. But no one shall be a judge who is a student or alumnus of either Institution; or who is officially connected therewith.

Seventh: A query for debate shall be submitted by the societies at whose institution the debate is to be held, by the third Saturday in October, and the societies of the other institution shall inform those submitting the query of their choice of sides within two weeks of the time the query is submitted.

Eighth: The debaters must be bona fide undergraduate students of the academic department of their respective institutions.

Ninth: Each debater shall be allowed twenty-five minutes to be divided into two speeches as he may prefer, provided that the second speech shall not be more than ten minutes in length, and, provided further that the second speech shall be used only for rejoinder, and not for the introduction of new matter except in rebuttal.

Philological Club.

The Philological Club held its first meeting for the college year on Tuesday night, in the Alumni Building. Papers were read by Prof. W. D. Toy and Dr. C. A. Smith.

Prof. Toy's paper was on "Certain Points of Comparison Between Tatian's 'Harmony' and the Old High German Translation." The substance was as follows:

Tatian's Latin Harmony is a life of Christ made out of the four Gospels in such a way as to present a continuous narrative. The German version was the work of a monk at the monastery of Fulda in the year 825, and is a literal translation of the Latin.

Attention was called to a number of points in which errors of the Latin produced striking results in the Old High German translation. These results were made clear by tabulating the readings of the Greek original, the Latin and the Old High German Version.

Dr. Smith's paper "Two Notes on Conditional Sentences in English."

(1). The indicative mood in an unreal conditional ("If Washington was alive") is declared by all the grammarians, American and foreign, to be of comparatively recent date. It has not hitherto been traced earlier than Richard Brinsley Sheridan (1751-1816). It occurs, however, in Bunyan's Pilgrim Progress (1684) II, 77: "As if one was awake."

(2). In his Shakespeare Grammatik (§396) Franz quotes the following sentences from Antony and Cleopatra III, 4, 31: "As if the world should cleave, and that slain men should solder up the strife."

There are many sentences of this sort in Shakespeare, and even in the writings of Steele, Addison, and Swift. The problem is to explain that, which is used as a substitute for if. I have found this construction occurring twice in Chaucer's Parson's Tale. It is not known in Alfredian English (See Wulfing's Syntax in den Werken Alfred's des Grossen (§448-§450). I suggest that the word in question is merely a remnant of if that which Chaucer and Shakespeare often use instead of the simple that.

The following officers were elected for the current year:

President, W. D. Toy.
Vice-President, C. A. Smith.
Secretary and Treasurer, T. J. Wilson, Jr.

Pneumatic head gear for the football players has made its appearance. The new rules forbid the use of sole leather. The new harness is nearly twice as high as the old leather affairs. Inside it fits as closely to the head as a skull cap, and the pneumatic portion is built outside of that.

SOUTH CAROLINA DEFEATED.

North Carolina Comes Off Victor in an Interesting Game at Columbia Saturday.

South Carolina is far from disgraced because defeated by the team from the neighboring State yesterday afternoon. The score was 17 to 0. From start to finish the local collegians put up a plucky struggle and long before the first half was at an end cheers of admiration rose from the disinterested spectators to mingle with those of the crowd of supporters of the Garnet and Black.

Few had expected victory and many had no idea of so small a score on the part of the visitors. They came with a record of victories of which few of the Southern teams can boast, and won on many a hard fought field. South Carolina's team was green and had played but one game—that could hardly be dignified by the name. Five of the men had never appeared in a foot ball game of any merit before. Yet the team stood like veterans the rushes of the North Carolinians and time and again the ball went to South Carolina on account of the inability of the other side to gain.

The visitors stuck very closely to old line foot ball, using no new formation as was expected as a result of the new rules. Tackle-back formations and tandem bucks were used time and again. South Carolina's ends showed up well throughout the game, and the Tar Heels seemed to consider the line a better chance than the ends. Foster's courage and grit was equalled only by his skill as a player. Few plays crossed his end, though the interference of the North Carolinians swept him from his feet. McKay, who was substituted in the second half, also appeared to advantage, getting into the plays with spirit. Oliver broke the North Carolinians' line several times and aided materially in sending Capt. Gunter through the holes. The last named athlete was, as ever, a star, taking every chance that came up.

For North Carolina Jones, Jacocks and Donnelly played good ball. Donnelly is as much a star at foot ball as at baseball. Capt. Jones plunged through the line almost unaided at times, his great strength being his success. Engle generated the team with much skill.

South Carolina's supporters were more than satisfied at the showing made. North Carolina's eleven was composed largely of men of last year's team and outweighed their opponents practically 15 pounds. Fendly, centre for South Carolina, worked hard throughout the game and the critics complimented his work highly.

North Carolina kicked off in the first half and Capt. Gunter caught the falling leather. After advancing the ball some 30 yards it was lost to one of the other side who fell on it. North Carolina failed to gain materially after trying all of her backs, and Reed blocked Jacocks's drop kick, falling on the ball. Oliver and Gunter took the ball and then Wyman punted for 60 yards. North Carolina worked the ball up the field by hard line plunging, using Mann many times, until a touch down was made. Goal was not kicked. The rest of this half was played between the 25-yard lines, both teams being forced to punt, and the half ending with the ball in North Carolina's possession. Score 5 to 0.

In the second half South Carolina kicked off. North Carolina was soon forced to punt. Immediately after the ball was put in play after this punt one of the startling plays of the afternoon occurred. Wyman was passed the ball and, evading the opposing backs and ends, came up the field for 40 yards and was caught near the 25-yard line. Soon afterwards the ball went to North Carolina on downs, and the Tar Heels again took the ball for a touch down, though the path to the goal was stubbornly fought. This goal was kicked and another touchdown was made a few minutes later by North Carolina, after hard fighting. The game ended with the ball on the 25-yard line and the score 17 to 0.

THE GAME IN DETAIL, AS SEEN BY A NORTH CAROLINIAN.

Game called at 4.15. Gunter won the toss and chose to defend the south goal. Jacocks kicks off to Gunter, who returns the ball 20 yards. Oliver goes 4 yards through tackle. Gunter goes through left tackle for 3 yards. South Carolina tries 2 more plays which fail and kicks to Jacocks. Mann then hits left tackle for 3 yards. Jacocks goes through right for two. South Carolina is off side and is penalized 5 yards. Mann fails to gain.

Donnelly fails to gain. South Carolina is off side again and loses 5 yards. Newton goes through centre for 4 yards. Jacocks goes through right for 3 yards. Jones G., fails to gain. Jacocks tries goal, hits Newton in the head and South Carolina gets the ball. Oliver hits right tackle for 2 yards. Gunter goes through right tackle for 1 yard. South Carolina forced to punt and Wyman kicks 30 yards.

Donnelly hits right for 4 yards. Jacocks makes first down. Donnelly goes two yards over right tackle. Mann is thrown by Foster on next play for no gain. Jacocks goes 5 yards but fumbles and Oliver falls on the ball. Wyman hits right tackle for no gain. Left half goes through left tackle for 2 yards. Wyman punts to Jacocks. Mann hits left tackle for 5 yards. Newton goes through center for 6 yards. The next play Mann shoves through left tackle for 20 yards and a touch down. Bully misses goal. Score N. C. 5; S. C. 0.

N. C. receives kick off. Wyman kicks to Jacocks who runs 15 yards. Jacocks hits left tackle for 4 yards. Jones tries left tackle for no gain. Newton bucks centre for 1 yard. Jacocks hits right tackle but South Carolina gets the ball. Wyman goes over right for 1 yard and tries centre for no gain. Wyman punts 30 yards and North Carolina gets the ball. Newton bucks centre for 1 yard. Jacocks hits left tackle for 4 yards. Newton hits centre for 3 yards. Mann dashes around right end for 4 yards and then bucks right for 4 yards. Jacocks punts 40 yards to Wyman who goes around right end for 30 yards. Time is up, with the ball in Carolina's possession. South Carolina's 25-yard line.

SECOND HALF.

Wyman kicks off to Newton, who runs ball back 15 yards. Jones hits left tackle for 4 yards and through centre for 3 yards. Jacocks loses 1 yard around left end. Mann loses 3 yards around Foster's end. Jacocks punts 45 yards. Wyman, who runs out of bounds. Ball is brought in 15 yards. On double pass Wyman succeeds getting past everybody and runs 10 yards before being thrown. Engle in a beautiful tackle. Gunter hits left tackle for 4 yards. Wyman hits left tackle, fumbles the ball and Stewart falls on it. North Carolina has the ball on her own 30 yard line. Jones makes 3 yards over left tackle and Mann adds over same place. Jacocks goes 5 yards over left tackle again. Wyman here hits Townsend a foul blow in the eye and is put out of the game. Jones bucks left tackle for 4 yards. Mann goes 5 yards through same place, and Jacocks adds 4 yards again over same place. Mann tries left tackle once more for two yards. Not content with this

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Wednesday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We have played our first game off the Hill for this season and won it without much trouble. We give two different accounts of the game. The first as seen by a South Carolina man in "The State"; the second as seen by our own representative. The two views do not accord exactly but we leave them for our readers to pass upon.

We have heard no complaints as to the behavior of our own men both on and off the field and we wish we could say the same for South Carolina. We do not think it wise for us to continue athletic relations with South Carolina College. Our baseball team did not receive the best treatment in the world when at Columbia last spring and now a South Carolina man exhibits his hate for U. N. C. by striking the youngest and smallest man on the foot ball team a foul blow in the eye; on account of which the latter was compelled to go to his home for treatment. There is no glory to be gained by defeating South Carolina College, so let us have no more of them.

What is the matter with our musical organizations? Where are the Glee Club, the Mandolin and Guitar Club, the Orchestra, and the Band? Last year these were the most pleasant features of our college life and we see no reason why they should be dropped after such a successful year. The musicians we sent to Greensboro last year were most highly spoken of; some of the Normalites even going so far as to declare that they were "just too cute for anything."

The band last year was a most up-to-date organization and aided the rooters very materially in our ball games. Whenever Carolina made a great play, which was often last year, the notes of "We are Tar Heels Born" sounded like a very paean of joy. We play one of our biggest games on the Hill this fall; at this and at Richmond on Thanksgiving the band will be a most valuable addition to our rooting organizations. By all means, let's have the band.

We are glad to see the class teams out and going through their signals with so much snap and ginger. These class teams are direct feeders for the Varsity and more attention should be given them. The freshman team of 1903 won the class championship and seven men out of the eleven afterwards gained the right to wear N.C. on their breasts. We have probably the best class teams in the South, other Southern institutions paying very little, if any, attention to class athletics.

The way in which our class teams defeat neighboring preparatory schools show what a good article of ball they can put up and we hope they will be able to get games with nearby schools this fall. A little instruction by Coach Olcott would increase the efficiency of a class team very much and would besides aid in the development of material for future Varsity teams, and he could doubtless be procured for a short while occasionally to give instruction in the finer points.

Let us pay more attention to our class teams.

We acknowledge the receipt of the "Annual Report of the Auditor of the State of North Carolina for the Fiscal Year Ending November 30th, 1902," sent with the compliments of Auditor B. F. Dixon. It is a very neat volume, larger than a 12 mo., and bound in light green paper covers. We were much interested in the reports of the numbers of mules, goats, feather-bed renovators, lighting rod agents, etc., in all the counties from Cherokee to Currituck. On the whole the volume reminds us of what Mark Twain said of the dictionary, "Powerful interesting reading, but a trifle disconnected as to plot."

ELISHA MITCHELL SOCIETY.

The North Carolina Academy of Science to Meet Here on Nov. 12th and 13th—Election of Officers.

The 150th meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was held Tuesday night in Person Hall. Papers were read by Mr. J. E. Latta, Dr. Chas. Baskerville and Prof. E. V. Howell.

Mr. Latta spoke on "The Use of the Vector Diagram in Electrical Engineering." He said in part: "There are two methods of solving problems in electrical engineering, the analytic and the graphic. The analytic is long and complicated. The graphic, by the use of the vector diagram, is much simpler though not so accurate.

It is of great use in shortening and simplifying electrical problems where only approximation is required." Mr. Latta showed its application to a certain problem where it was required that inductance be overcome.

Dr. Baskerville read a paper on "Tanning." He gave two of the old methods, showing their difficulties. Recently a new method has been discovered, which is a great improvement on the others. It depends upon the action of chromium nitrate. This changes to the oxide of nitrogen, which are volatile and can be easily removed from the leather, thus avoiding destructive chemical action, which was one of the objections to the old methods.

Dr. Baskerville showed some specimens of tanning, given him by Tiffany and Co. They were of rare skins, used for the making of ladies' purses and other things suitable for a souvenir of a goldsmith.

Prof. Howell spoke on some work he and Dr. Wheeler are doing in getting coloring matter from muscadine grapes. They have been at work only a few days, and have not, therefore, reached anything definite.

After the papers had been read a business meeting was held at which the following officers were elected: President, Dr. Baskerville; Vice President, Mr. Latta; Recording Secretary, Dr. Wheeler; Permanent Secretary, Dr. Venable.

Dr. Baskerville announced that the North Carolina Academy of Science would be here on November 12th and 13th, holding meetings in Gerrard Hall each evening, and also afternoon meetings in the Alumni Building. A committee was appointed to provide for the entertainment of the Academy while here.

The Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Society will hereafter be the organ of the North Carolina Academy, though retaining its old name. Instead of being a one hundred page book as heretofore, it will have two hundred pages. It will be published quarterly. The election of editors will still be in the hands of the Elisha Mitchell Society. The present editors are Dr. Baskerville and Dr. Coker.

A Freshman's Vision of Glory.

I want to be a Soph,
And with the soft ones stand.
A bruise upon my head,
A fresh within my hand.

II

Yes I want to be a Soph.
I'll join that wretched band.
And to that wretched crusade
I'll lend a helping hand.

III

Certainly; I will be a Soph.
I'll climb the ladder of fame
And down upon some freshman's mind
I'll write my idiotic name.

IV

Well, I'll soon be a Soph.
How I glory in that crew!
I will take on the wings of a buzzard
And with them I will have flew.

V

Listen! I hear them coming!
Oh, how they rave!
Tis worse than a vision of the ghost dance,
Upon some freshman's grave.

VI

Glory in my title! I am now a Soph.
But still with the Freshman class.
Oh the title, that I've won.
But knowledge I've failed to amass.

A FRESHMAN.

A Sophomore, who happened to see the above poem while it was in the printing office, straightway submitted the following remarks:

Written by the very freshest fresh
That ever shook with fright.
He's as brave as the bravest lion by day,
But he's under his bed at night.
"Of course, I'll be a Sophomore,"
He boasts with greatest glee.
But there's eight full hours to be gotten off
E'er a Sophomore he'll be.
Eight full hours, and a bruised head
Does not conduce to study.
Yet "Vengeance is ours" is the sentiment
Of the Sophomores, in a body.
If he thinks he'll attain Sophomorehood
By inflicting on us such common rot,

FACULTY LECTURE

Dr. H. V. Wilson Delivers Second of Series on the "Museums and Laboratories of Europe."

The second of the series of faculty lectures was delivered on last Thursday night by Dr. H. V. Wilson. His lecture was on the museums and laboratories in Europe, with which he was connected during his recent studies on sponges. Although of a scientific nature, the lecture was free from technicalities, and was enjoyed by scientist and literary man alike.

Dr. Wilson said in part:

"The point of view from which I shall consider laboratories and museums abroad, will not be that of a tourist but rather that of one who works in them, and who works on deep sea discoveries.

"It is only in recent years that deep sea explorations have been made. People for many ages have been familiar with only the fauna at or just beneath the surface of the sea. For this reason it was thought that no fauna existed at the bottom. In the last 30 years this idea has been abandoned. Deep sea dredging has shown that there is an abundant fauna at depths of one or even five miles. It was at first thought that this fauna was that of past geological ages, which still existed at these depths. This theory, however, proved to be premature, and the idea now is that this fauna has migrated from shallow waters.

"At these extreme depths the pressure is many tons. It is so great, in fact, that animals, on being brought quickly from them to the surface, often explode, by the force of the pressure of the gases which they hold within them. Sunlight never reaches them, and they may be said to live in absolute darkness. The bottom of the sea is light, consisting of microscopic calcareous animals. There are no plants whatever at these depths. Animals sustain themselves by feeding on others. Though it is so dark, they usually have large eyes, which are of use to them in the light furnished by their own phosphorescence. It is improbable that we have obtained the largest of these sea animals, since they could more easily escape the fishermen than smaller ones.

"The greatest work on these deep sea explorations was done by the Challenger expedition sent out by the English. The specimens taken were given to the specialists for study. The reports from these are mostly in. The French, Germans and Dutch have also sent out expeditions. America has not been far behind, due largely to the efforts of Mr. Alexander Agassiz. He sent out the Blake along the Atlantic coast, the Gulf, and the Caribbean sea. The best equipped vessel in the world for this sort of work is the Albatross, also sent out by Agassiz. Her work has been mostly along the west coast of Mexico. Much of this work was on sponges, some of which were given to me. It was necessary to go to Europe to study these in laboratories there. It was, therefore, from the point of view of one who had a collection of sponges on which to work that I viewed the European laboratories.

"One of the best institutions for this kind of work is the Museum for Knowledge of Organic Nature in Berlin. It is a very conveniently arranged museum. The function of such an institution is a double one, that of a museum and that of study. The collections are not so large but they are beautifully arranged. Besides the rooms for collections, there are laboratories for original work. The director of the museum is a highly trained specialist. He has spent thirty years in work on one group of sponges.

"There are also in Berlin institutions for other branches of work. Two of them, an anatomical and an embryological institute are especially good. In the latter studies are pursued on the embryological development of all kinds of vertebrate animals.

"The Museum for the Knowledge of the Sea, also in Berlin, was established by the German government to help build up the commerce of the country. The large emigration of Germans to other countries has made Germany a great commercial nation. To facilitate this commerce a knowledge of the sea is necessary, and this institution supplies the demand. All sorts of marine animals are preserved here in almost lifelike appearance. In this museum are also numberless models of marine architecture.

"There is in Berlin an excellent aquarium, supplied daily with fish from a station on the Adriatic.

"The English museums and laboratories are inferior to the German in many respects, especially in point of arrangement. The collections which they contain are, however, much larger. The British Museum collections are, perhaps, the best in the world. I had come especially to see the Challenger collection of sponges. The arrangement of these is but poor, they being crowded into one small room, in great contrast to the excellent arrangement in Berlin.

"In America we have much to learn about science and its study.

"We do not choose to accept everything from the Germans, especially their intense specialization. But it is certain that there is much we can learn from them.

Consternation was created down at Sewanee the other day when six of the most promising foot ball men were read out during chapel exercises as debarred from participating in any further games this winter. To be a member of the team, every student is required to maintain an average of 2, according to the Sewanee system of marking, and it is said that this practically destroys Sewanee's hopes of a winning team.

Vanderbilt had a big surprise sprung on her the other day when in the first game of the season. Cumberland defeated her 6 to 0. Henry, her coach, has been hard at work ever since, rearranging the line-up.

Yale has developed a new play that promises well. Instead of sending the tackle through the line when called back, he is used to defend the backs from the nearest end while they alone hit the line between guard and tackle.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

V. M. I. MEETS DEFEAT.

The Virginians Put up a Plucky Game But are Forced to Succumb by Carolina's Strong Team Work.

The University of North Carolina and Virginia Military Institute met yesterday afternoon on a very wet field, to play the initial game of foot ball in this city, and it was all that could be desired from a foot ball enthusiast's point of view. There were fast end runs, long punts, hard and sharp line plunging and good "hiking."

Notwithstanding the score was very much in favor of N. C. the play never flagged and the "faithful few" spectators never lost interest for one moment.

The most commendable feature of the game was the total absence of foul play of any sort; truly it was a game between gentlemen, for no purpose whatever except for good natured rivalry.

The following is a very general summary of the plays, as made:

THE GAME.

First half, time twenty minutes.

V. M. I. kicks off to N. C., ball going out of bounds; N. C. then kicks to V. M. I. from the 25-yard line. V. M. I. carries ball back 20 yards, and by a series of line plays is forced to kick. N. C. carries punt back 20 yards, and by strong line plunging makes anywhere from 10 to 40 yards, carrying the ball within 25 yards of V. M. I.'s goal line, where Mann makes 3 yards, Donnelly 2 yards, first down. Mann makes 3 yards, first down, Donnelly 2 yards more. Mann makes first down. Mann carries ball again for a 20-yard run and a touch down. Jacocks kicks easy goal. Score, N. C. 6; V. M. I. 0.

N. C. kicks off to V. M. I., who carries ball back 20 yards. V. M. I. loses 5 yards. Johnson gains 5 yards and first down. Johnson adds 5 yards more but is forced to kick, N. C. returning the ball a short distance. Jones makes 5 yards. Newton adds 5 yards more. Newton again makes 4 yards. Jacocks adds 1 more and first down. Donnelly goes through line for 5 yards. Jones gains 3 yards. Jacocks adds 10 yards more. Newton gains 2 yards. Jones makes 1 yard and first down. Jones again gains 3 yards. Mann makes 2 yards and a touch down, making the second touch down. Jacocks fails to kick goal. Score, N. C. 11; V. M. I. 0.

V. M. I. kicks off 40 yards to N. C. Carolina carries ball back 10 yards. Carolina loses 2 yards. Mann gains 4. Carolina kicks 40 yards into V. M. I. territory; Johnson receives ball but fails to gain; Johnson goes around left end for 1 yard gain. Claggett fails to gain and Johnson, being forced to kick, boots the ball 45 yards into Carolina's territory and the ball is fumbled by Jacocks. Pierce for V. M. I. falls on the ball, making first down for V. M. I. at this stage of the game. V. M. I.'s offence proves to be irresistible, and by a series of Captain Johnson and Conrad, Johnson takes the ball over for V. M. I.'s first and only score, just as time is called for first half. Doyle kicks an easy goal. Score, Carolina 11; V. M. I. 6.

SECOND HALF.

Carolina kicks 40 yards to V. M. I. McCord fails to gain. Johnson makes 34 yards. McCord makes 2 yards. V. M. I. fumbles but recovers the ball. Johnson is forced to kick, but is blocked by Carolina, who falls on the ball. Newton makes 4 yards. Donnelly makes no gain. Newton repeats the performance by adding 2 yards more, making first down. Jacocks adds 1 yard more. Mann makes 40 yards around end, and by beautiful dodging and hurdling scores a touch down. Jacocks kicks difficult goal. Score; N. C. 17; V. M. I. 6.

Carolina again kicks to V. M. I. Nash returns ball 10 yards. Johnson adds 5 yards more. V. M. I. punts 20 yards. Cox returns it 15 yards. Jones makes first down. Mann adds 4 yards. Newton hurdles line for 4 yards. Newton also makes 5 yards through centre. Jones makes 4 yards; Mann 3 yards. Jones adds 3 yards more. Mann clips off 15 yards. Jones goes through line for 1 yard and touch down. Jacocks fails to kick goal. Score: N. C. 22; V. M. I. 6.

Carolina kicks off to V. M. I. Johnson returns ball 5 yards. Nash adds 10 yards. Johnson gains 5 yards. Nash makes 10 yards. Johnson makes 3 yards. Burrow kicks 40 yards. Jones carries ball back 4 yards. Mann gains 12 yards by good team work. Jones makes 4 yards; Jacocks 2 yards; Donnelly 1 yard; Jones 3 yards; Mann 5 yards. Jones hurdles line for 2 yards. Jones makes 6 yards and again 10 yards for a touch down. Jacocks kicks easy goal. Score: N. C. 28; V. M. I. 6.

There being only two minutes to play, V. M. I. rushes the line for short gains, then punts to Carolina, who also makes short gain through line. Time is called, with ball about the middle of the field in N. C.'s possession.

The features of the game were the playing of Capt. Jones, Donnelly and Jacocks, for the University of North Carolina, and for V. M. I. Captain Johnson was a star. Pierce also played a fine game in the line.

The referee Dr. Bodie Nalle, of the University of Virginia.

Mr. George A. Jennings, of Hampden-Sidney, performed the duties of umpire.

Both teams left for home last evening by their respective routes, and although the V. M. I. players were a trifle downcast they are not in the humor to let the defeat by U. N. C. trouble them, but will

UNIVERSITY SERMON.

Rev. Frank Siler, of Asheville, Preaches on "The Place of Christ in Education."

The University Sermon for October was preached Sunday night by Rev. Frank Siler, pastor of the Central Methodist church, of Asheville. This sermon was an able one and the interest of the audience showed plainly their appreciation of it. His subject was "The Place of Christ in Education." The text was from II. Corinthians, third chapter and 18th verse: "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord."

Mr. Siler said in substance:

The birth of Christ took place at the confluence of three civilizations, the Hebrew, the Roman and the Greek. Each of these races had a special mission for the work. The Hebrews taught religion, the Romans law, and the Greeks philosophy. The Corinthians were Greeks; hence Paul addresses them as philosophers. In this text he teaches them the Place of Christ in education. Paul does not speak of the face of Christ, as do the other apostles. They had seen him on earth in the flesh. Paul had seen him in glory, in the light of a vision. They had seen the face of a man. He had seen the face of God itself.

I ask that you study with me the face of Christ. In studying the face there are two things which impress us, feature and expression. A man's actions are the features of his life; his motives are its expression. There is a marked resemblance between the features of Christ's face and that of other men but there is a marked difference in their expression.

There have been five men in the history of the world that have tried to set themselves up as monarchs of universal kingdom, Confucius, Buddha, Zoroaster, the Roman stoic, and Jesus Christ. The features of these men resemble, but their expressions differ. Confucius taught humility; so does Christ. Both taught men to take the eye from the sky and put it on the earth. But in the face of Confucius we see absolute dejection written. He put the eye on the earth, to make it earthy. In the face of Christ we see hopefulness. He took the eye from the sky and put it on earth to make the earth like the sky. Christ was a hopeful man. This is what distinguishes the races who have followed Christ from those who have followed Confucius. The temples of Christian nations look toward the future; those of China toward the past. Paul saw this quality in the face of Christ, and became the impersonation of hopefulness. Beholding in the glass the glory of the Lord, we are made hopeful.

Buddha, like Christ, taught giving, but he taught it in order that you might have nothing. Christ taught giving that you might have more abundantly. Buddha said: "Throw the children into the Ganges, and their mothers after them." Christ said: "Whoso shall offend one of these little ones, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea."

Zoroaster stood for war; he was a fighter. So was Christ; he said, "I came not to send peace but a sword." But he taught that warfare must not be aggressive, but defensive. Zoroaster says, "Learn to fight in the field." Christ says, "Learn in your closet."

Both the Roman Stoic and Christ wished to control men's actions. The Stoic compelled them; Christ controlled them with love. "The love of Christ constraineth us."

"We see that Christ resembles these other men in feature, but differs from them in expression. It was this expression that Paul saw when he speaks of the glory of the Lord. This glory is infinite and cannot be compassed. It is most dangerous to try to dissect Deity. It is by faith that we are to see this glory. As the veil was over the face of Moses when he came down from the mount, so are there veils that separate us from the glory of the face of God. The veils of evil-doing, of ignorance and of indolence must be withdrawn before we can see God.

But they will be withdrawn and, as our text says, we are to be changed into the same image with Christ. When he shall appear we shall be like him. We shall be transformed when we see the glory of God. We are being made like him by our visions of him here, but we shall be perfected when we see him.

As Paul says, this change comes through the spirit of Christ. Man is neither all good nor all bad. God sees enough in him to save him, and brings about in him a readjustment, a change. This change does not come at a single bound. It is made at successive steps, "from glory to glory." Let us see that the stepping stones have solid foundations, and that the light by which we follow them comes from on high.

8.00. Union Mass Meeting, Public Invited.

The following committees have been appointed by the local association for work in the interest of the conference: Entertainment, W. J. Gordon, W. C. Rankin, T. Grier Miller, E. S. W. Dameron, O. B. Ross, and E. McDonald; Reception, Messrs. Z. V. Howard, J. B. Roberson, G. C. Singletary, L. Brigman, C. O. Abernethy and W. H. Mann; Music, Mr. C. T. Woollen; University Committee, Messrs. C. C. Barnhardt, W. H. L. Mann and A. H. Johnson.

This last named committee has been appointed to make arrangements for the delegates to get glimpses of the different departments of the University, such as getting the Chemical and Physical laboratories, the Library, etc. open at special hours. The two literary societies will be asked to appoint special committees to meet those interested in such work and carry them through the two halls, explaining the workings of the societies. The purpose of the members of the University Association is to look after the minutest details in entertaining these college men, in order that our visiting friends may feel that the Association here and the University as a whole have succeeded in making the Conference the most pleasant that has ever been held in the State.

buckle down to hard work for the future, and endeavor to build up the team in its weak spots.

The ladies turned out enthusiastically to yesterday's game, despite the threatening weather, and the presence of a tally-ho load of girls wearing the college colors of U. of N. C. was a feature. The next big game in Roanoke will be Saturday, Oct. 31st, between V. P. I. and Washington and Lee.

BLUE AND WHITE LOSES.

Carolina Receives a Terrible Blow in Norfolk Saturday at the Hands of Georgetown.
Score: 33 to 0.

Its brutal sport, this watching a game of foot ball in such weather as prevailed yesterday; but 2,000 people shivered, shook, trembled, turned blue, purple and green and did divers other things for three hours in Lafayette Park to see Georgetown defeat Carolina by a score of 33 to 0 yesterday.

It was as clean a victory as was ever won, and superior playing, both as a team and individually was responsible for the result.

Georgetown simply outclassed Carolina at every point of the game. That is all there is to the story, but while the score indicates that the game was one-sided, it was far from being uninteresting, and when the final play had been made there were practically as many people within the big park as there were when the whistle first sounded.

Carolina put up a wonderfully plucky game against overwhelming odds and she deserves all the credit an undaunted team should receive.

Reilly, of Georgetown, was the bright, particular star of the game. In the latter part of the first half he replaced Cromley at left half, and from that moment he was in every play. Three touch downs of the six made by Georgetown are to his credit, and many a Carolina gain was nipped in the bud, often turned into a loss by his unerring tackling.

Hart's run from Georgetown's 10-yard line to Carolina's 3-yard line was the most sensational play of the game, and only the speed of Roberson kept him from making the score that Martel achieved on the next formation.

The ball was kept in Carolina's territory practically the entire game, and only on a few occasions did the Blue and White team hold the boys from up the Potomac for downs.

Twice during the game Carolina seemed to brush aside the almost invulnerable rush line of the Georgetown eleven and at those times her sturdy backs darted through the narrowest of holes and made gains running all the way from 5 to 35 yards on quick plays while the spell lasted.

The formation plays of Georgetown swept by the Carolina team at times like a perfect whirlwind and again, at other times, Carolina would brace and nail the Blue and Gray runners in their tracks.

It was a mud-horse game, and this accounts for many of its gains and losses, but considering the slippery condition of the field the few fumbles constitute a remarkable feature.

Only once was the ball lost by a misplay in the scrimmage, though several times the Carolina boys woefully misjudged the spiral punts of Carroll and suffered heavy loss by the oval rolling behind them towards their goal.

Carroll's scrimmage foot work was of the finest order with and against the wind, and the deceptive twist of his punts fooled the Carolina players frequently. With the wind he did not miss a goal, and against it he did not score one.

The smallest doubt of the game's outcome was dispelled early in the first half, in fact just as soon as Georgetown's backs got their turn with the ball.

When Georgetown kicked off at the start of the game Carolina brought the ball back almost to the center of the field on the return. On a line play she gained a yard and was then thrown for a loss of four. Another line play netted 3 yards, and 5 yards were gained on penalty. That was all. Georgetown stood like a stone wall and took the pigskin in the middle of the field.

The first three plays of the Georgetown backs netted 17 yards.

With a never-ceasing system the Blue and Gray swept Carolina down the field, and finally put the ball on her 5-yard line.

There the Chapel Hill team made their stand and held the rushes of their opponents twice without gain. Then Martel hurdled the line for the first touchdown, after twelve minutes of play.

Carroll's try for goal struck one of the uprights and the score was 5 to 0 in favor of Georgetown.

Carolina kicked against the wind to Edmonston on the Georgetown 15-yard line and the run back netted 10 yards.

The Blue and Gray, with the ball in their possession, resumed their ferocious attacks and carried the game to Carolina's 25-yard line, where they were penalized 20 yards.

Encouraged by this, Carolina held and Carroll punted to the 25-yard line, but Mann fumbled and the ball was downed on the 15-yard line.

McCarthy broke through and hurled Newton back 5 yards more, and it looked as if the ball would be forced over while in Carolina's possession, but on the next play Mann darted through the line for 15 yards, and Newton, with the prettiest of interference, covered a like distance around the end. Then Jacocks netted 2 yards and Georgetown forfeited 5 yards for offside playing. The Blue and Gray made a stubborn stand here and Carolina fumbled. McGuire, of Georgetown, fell on the ball.

Cromley failed to gain and Carroll punted 65 yards.

Jacocks squirmed, dodged and sprinted 35 yards and had a clean field before him when downed by McGettigan, after making the longest gain that Carolina boasts.

Cromley was hurt and Reilly took his place, and on the next play a fake kick let Newton fool Georgetown for 25 yards.

McCarthy threw Mann for a loss and Newton punted to Georgetown's 45-yard line.

Reilly plunged into the line for 10 yards and skirted the end for 5 more

Carroll took 15 on a tackle over play and Reilly ploughed through right tackle for 20 more. Then Hart went 5 yards through the opposite side of the line and Rorke was whirled over for a touch down.

Carroll kicked an easy goal and the score stood; Georgetown 11; Carolina 0.

Jacocks, the plucky Tar Heel right half, was badly hurt in the scrimmage and gave way to Newton, who was moved from full, making room for Roberson.

Georgetown kicked off and Carolina ran the ball back 10 yards to her 25-yard line. She was held there and Roberson punted 40 yards to McGettigan, who was downed by Cox in his tracks.

Reilly went into the line for 5 yards and Hart drew a similar number on the end.

On a beautifully executed delayed pass from Hart to Reilly, the latter got around Carolina for 15 yards and then took 3 more in the line, the first down being made by Martel.

Foust supplanted Wright on Carolina's right end.

Edmonston gained 10 yards and Georgetown forfeited 20 yards for a foul, forcing Carroll to punt to Carolina's 15-yard line.

Mann gained 3 yards and Roberson 3 more, following it up with an equal distance on the next play. Then Georgetown braced and got the ball on her 30-yard line.

Martel hit the centre for 5 yards. Reilly was thrown by Cox with a loss of 6 yards, and Carolina got the ball on downs.

Mann gained 3 yards, Cox made the down and Hart threw Foust for a loss.

On the third down Roberson punted to Georgetown's 25-yard line and the ball was rushed by a series of quick plays to the centre of the field.

Reilly netted 5 yards, McGettigan failed and Carroll punted to Carolina's 25-yard line. Mann brought it back 5 yards and the half ended.

SECOND HALF.

In the second half Georgetown put more vigor into her playing, while Carolina seemed to lack the stamina that characterized her work during the first part of the game.

Engle returned Mahoney's kick-off and Carolina secured the ball, carrying it to the centre of the field in three plays with Foust, Newton and Mann as vehicles.

Reilly threw Roberson for a loss of six yards and the Blue and White was forced to pant.

Hart and Reilly netted 22 yards, and the latter was thrown for a loss by Roberson. Hart gained 4 yards, Martel failed and Carroll punted over the line.

Carolina brought the ball out to

PROF. DURHAM SPEAKS.

The Conference Listens to an Able Address on "The Spiritual Deepening of the Soul."

The first conference of the College Y. M. C. A. met Friday evening, October 23, in Chapel Hill. This was the first meeting of the kind ever held in North Carolina. Dr. F. P. Venable in a brief and fitting speech welcomed the Conference on behalf of the University and town. The speaker of the evening was Prof. Durham, of Trinity College. His subject was "The Deepening of the Spiritual Life." Some of the things he said are: "In the far perspective of time one may see in the gathering forces of history, a restless search for the throne of God, and our gathering here to deepen our spiritual life is but a continuation of that drama which began long ago. Back of all things is the same desire, the same cry, for the way above the brute, blind forces, where the human spirit may live and reign.

"In a certain way the word spirituality is the vaguest word in the vocabulary. A great majority of the people misunderstand the term.

"I cannot define it, but I must call your attention to one wrong conception of it. In some way and somehow Christianity was put in the mould of Greek philosophy. This philosophy was dual. It made God and matter opposed to each other. This lie got into Christian theology and monasticism was the outgrowth of it. The effect is that Christianity is a religion of some other sphere, that we must go to some far away place to find God. A greater effect is that our lives are split by a great veil. We see God through this veil. Nearly all sorrow, affliction and lack of inspiration come from this misunderstanding.

"What then is the correct view? The ability to feel and comprehend the presence of God. That man is spiritual who is able to lay his hands upon God and feel the sweep of the spirit through his life.

"Two things are necessary. One is to have the right idea grounded into you, and the other is to discipline it. There is no distinction in space between God and man. God underlies our lives. He is the infinite worker of our lives. The greatest Astronomer, the greatest Physicist, the greatest Farmer, who is he? God. All life is God life. Spirituality is the power to see and feel things as God sees and feels them. We must have in some sense the vision of God. We do not look at the world in an infinite way as He does. We give ourselves to blind passion, He to the beautiful vision of things.

"We must train ourselves to understand the purpose of God. Our lives have but little purpose. But Well, it was unexpected, to say the least. Not in many years and but few times in the history of athletics has Carolina suffered such a crushing defeat. It is safe to say that there was not a man acquainted with our team, however superior he considered Georgetown or however inferior he considered Carolina who ever dreamed that the former would be able to pile up such an overwhelming score. Curiously enough, however, confidence in the White and Blue seems but little shaken; everyone knows that we have a good team, and everyone knows they can play much better foot ball than they did last Saturday. How Georgetown did it is still a matter of much discussion; it is simply one of the curious, unexplainable turns that the game sometimes takes and few are they that can account for them.

There was just one note in the report of the game last Saturday that did not have a sound ring to it; and that was that 97-yard run through the whole Tar Heel team. This could mean but one thing—Carolina had about given up. To one who saw the Richmond game last year this seemed extremely improbable and yet that was the only way to explain it. Two years ago two rival teams a little to the north of us met on the gridiron for their annual contest. One team started into the game with a rush, carrying everything before them and registering three touch downs in the first half, making a score of 16 to 0; thus proving its superiority to all—seemingly.

During the intermission, the seemingly weaker team held a serious talk with itself and finally made up its mind that it would not be beaten. It started into the game with determination written in large letters all over the faces of its men; they got the ball and refused to be stopped, in spite of the desperate efforts of their opponents, till they had placed the ball three times behind the lines for themselves; they won the game 17 to 16.

We do not believe there is any gamer fighting stuff on earth than the plain, ordinary Tar Heel. Georgetown doesn't really count since she is not called a Southern college and gets most of her players from the North. Now the only way in which Carolina can atone for the disgraceful defeat at Norfolk, is to put it on all the remaining teams to be played, by such overwhelming scores that the memory of that 33 to 0 game will never occur to rankle in our minds again. Our team is composed of Carolinians "to the manner born"—they are not a set of quitters, and so it is up to them to win all the rest of the games in the series.

On Saturday we play Kentucky, a team which recently held Virginia down to a single touch down. It seems to us that not enough attention is being paid to this game. We would be nothing less than disgraced if those fellows should beat us. There has been some talk of an excursion to carry some rooters to the game but we have heard nothing definite. Certainly the Varsity needs rooters now as it never needed them before and a few songs and yells would be a great help at Greensboro.

Finally, we have the material for a team this season which we may not have again for years, so let us make the most of our present eleven.

God's purpose, what is it? If it were to flash on us it would burn us up. One thing in history that strikes us is that one man is nothing but a temporal being, a gazer at the clouds, while another makes history.

"One was indifferent and cared not, the other had a purpose and in some way saw into the life of things and put them into history.

"We have misunderstood conversion. There must be a time and a place when there is a power that explodes into our consciousness, which gives force and power. We must toil for that thing which will dominate our lives. Spiritual life grows as naturally as other life. We have to feed it. Get the habit of companionship with man and books. Feed on them. Know the great men that have made history. Stand with them for they are the prophets of God.

"To be spiritual you must lead a life of prayer. Withdraw yourself from society into solitude and communion with God. Have an hour each day in which your companion is God. That is prayer.

"Lastly, there must come into our lives some knowledge of the Being we call Jesus Christ. We must come into that spirit that dies for men. Look into the blind face of religion, society, politics, finance and see if there is not some idea to follow, to die for."

"Tony" to Get Married-

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. W. Hearn, of New Orleans, announces the engagement of their daughter, Bessie Green, to Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, formerly our own president, and now president of Tulane University, the wedding to be an important mid-winter event in society at New Orleans.

Miss Hearn is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Hearn and has been one of the prominent belles in New Orleans society for several years. She is said to have a most attractive personality and besides has had all the advantages that wealth can bestow.

The University of Minnesota has a Megaphone Brigade, and elects annually a "King of Rooters," whose duty it is to rally, organize and manipulate the rooters. And 112 to 0 is the score that University recently piled up against an opponent. Put the two together and draw your own conclusions.

Continuous report of the game with Kentucky in the Chapel Saturday.

Dr. W. C. Coker spent Wednesday at his home in Columbia.

Maj. Cain entertained a few of his friends at a musical Tuesday evening. The invited guests were Misses Mary and Nellie Wheatley, Miss Bridgers, Mrs. Gore, Dr. and Mrs. Henderson and Dr. Ruffin.

Mrs. Gore and her guests, the Misses Wheatley, of Washington, D. C., spent Tuesday in Durham.

Miss Hume of Chapel Hill, who has been the guest of Miss Dunnington, has returned home.—College Topics.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Morris, of Atlanta, were here Tuesday on a visit to their son, J. A. Morris, Jr.

One mistake was made by the Virginian Pilot in its report of the game. Newton made the tackle of after his 97-yard run though Roberson put up a great game.

Miss Louise Venable of Chapel Hill, N. C., is the guest of Dr. C. S. Venable, High Street.—College Topics.

Next Saturday evening after the Carolina-Ky-game the State Normal girls will give a reception to the University students.

Messrs. A. H. Johnston and Brand Starnes went to Durham Monday.

At the rate Yale and Princeton are playing these two great rivals would be fairly evenly matched were they to meet today, instead of the latter part of November. Columbia, if she can only "get going" in time, should give Pennsylvania a great tussle, but at present the Quaker's have the call. Both West Point and Cornell are behind time, but with any kind of luck the former at least ought to round into shape before long, or in ample time to give the University of Chicago eleven a stiff argument.

Foot Ball Days.

The foot ball days have come again, the gladdest of the year;

One side of Willie's nose is gone and Tom has lost an ear.

Heaped on the field, the players jab, and punch, and claw and tear.

They knock the breath from those beneath and gouge without a care;

They break each other's arms and legs, and pull joints out of place.

And here and there is one who gets his teeth kicked from his face.

The Freshman and the Sophomore, besmeared with grime and mud,

Go gallantly to get the ball and quit all bathed in blood;

The Senior knocks the Junior down and kicks him in the chest.

The high school boy is carried home and gently laid at rest,

While here and there a crowded stand collapses 'neath its weight.

And forty people get more than they paid for at the gate.

O brave, O happy careless days! How deep the mother's joy,

What time she thinks of all the things they're doing to her boy!

How proud she is to know that he is on the team; how sweet

His face appears to her since it is only bloody meat!

With honest pride she lays away his amputated ear,

And puts his eye in alcohol to be a souvenir.

—New Haven Leader.

SOUTHERN FOOT BALL.

Heisman, Clemson's Coach Gives His Views on the Subject. Thinks Hardest Game Will be With Carolina.

Coach Heisman, of Clemson, is undoubtedly the "Hurry-Up" Yost of Southern foot ball.

The great Michigan leader has never lost a battle since he first took up the art of teaching the modern game of war, and four seasons have gone by marked only by constant victory.

Heisman's record is almost as brilliant as that of the guiding star of the Wolverines. For eight seasons the old Pennsylvania end has moulded Southern elevens and during this period has lost but five games—a remarkable showing, considering the fact that in this time his squads have played more than 70 games.

Mr. Heisman's knowledge of foot ball, especially that pertaining to the South is almost unlimited, hence any expression of opinion from him will carry added force.

"In my opinion our hardest game this season will be with North Carolina on November 14th. This game will be played in Chapel Hill and this of course will be in the Tar Heels' favor. Two years ago we downed the blue and white 22 to 10, and they are laying for us this year. 'Look out for Clemson,' has been their watchword, for they are determined on revenge. They may beat us, as they have a strong team this fall, but they must face a tough proposition, for barring a run of unusually hard luck, we will be ready for the best by that date.

"We have also two games scheduled with the strong A. and M. team of Carolina this season. I look for hard battles on both occasions, for A. and M. has the strongest team in her history. Just to show the strength of this college take that last Guilford College contest. North Carolina was able to defeat Guilford just 15 in 0 in a close game, while A. and M. ran away with the same aggregation 50 to 0. We play one game during the fair in Columbia with this team, and 10 days later we play them at Clemson.

"I think these will be our hardest games.

"From what I have seen so far Southern elevens as a rule seem to be weaker this season than last year and as we are consequently stronger we stand a fine chance for the Southern championship, if we can only defeat North Carolina. Sewanee refuses to play us and we offered Vanderbilt $200 and expenses to meet us after their game with Georgia, but they never answered the letter. In making up a championship selection only 'dope' can be used as all the best teams do not meet. On this account a Southern championship is undecided business since comparative victories and defeats are used to decide this matter.

"The Georgia and Auburn game should be a good one. I think, however, that Georgia will lose today to South Carolina, as this team fought the Tar Heels to a finish last Saturday.

"In comparing Southern teams Virginia colleges should be debarred from the calculations as they work under a different regime from that which characterizes teams in this section. They play men who are not eligible under the S. I. A. A. rules. Taking them year in and year out, Virginia would possibly beat the strongest Southern elevens, but it must be remembered that they gather their stars from other colleges and an athlete who has competed for money in a professional contest of any kind is not ruled out at this institution. Most of this season's team is largely made up of star players who have drifted in from other college teams."—Atlanta Journal.

the 25-yard line and punted 15 yards to Reilly, who darted back the same distance with it. He then took five more in center and was followed by Martel by a gain.

In the next scrimmage Reilly hid behind the push until it was well tangled and then skirted the crowd for 20 yards and a touch down, and Corroll kicked goal.

Score—Georgetown, 17; Carolina 0.

Mahoney kicked to Carolina's 6-yard line and Roberson brought the ball back 6 yards. Georgetown braced and Roberson punted 30 yards to McGettigan, who came back 5 yards.

Hart, Mahoney, Reilly and Martel put the oval on Carolina's 15-yard line after a desperate struggle and Reilly squirmed through for the second touch down, within 14 minutes of play. Carroll missed goal and the score was 22 to 0.

Mann ran Mahoney's kick back 5 yards and Roberson was thrown for a loss. After several plays, in which the Blue and White managed to make the required distances, Mann was injured and gave way to Berkeley, who fumbled his first try when thrown by Kernan, and Reilly fell on the ball.

Georgetown made 10 yards on a mass play and Reilly broke through the line, sprinted 40 yards and made the third touch down in the 17 minutes of the half. Carroll dropped a neat goal over the bar, raising the score to 28 to 0.

Roberson kicked to Hart on Georgetown's 10-yard line and the big Blue and Gray back made the star run of the game by going almost the entire length of the field through the entire Carolind team and was downed by Roberson on Carolina's 3-yard line, after a stern chase that made the two thousand spectators hold their breaths.

The touch down Hart had all but earned was secured by Martel on the next play in just one minute after the previous score. Carroll missed goal and time was called with the score 33 to 0.

A HARD FOUGHT BATTLE.

In the Game Which Kentucky and Carolina Fought to a Finish on Saturday, Kentucky Makes 6 Points to Carolina's 5.

The crowd is only fair. The weather is slightly cloudy. There has been a light rain. Heisman, Clemson's coach, is watching the game and taking notes. Kentucky wins toss and Carolina kicks to Kentucky.

Carolina kicks 45 yards to Kentucky, who returns it 10 yards. Ball is on Kentucky's 20-yard line. Kentucky, on next play, is offside and loses 10 yards. Ball on Kentucky's 10-yard line. Kentucky goes over Albright for 5 yards. Kentucky kicks 40 yards. Roberson downed in his tracks. Donnelly goes around end for 3 yards.

Berkeley goes around end on next play for 2 yards. Carolina fumbles but regains the ball. Ball on Kentucky's 48-yard line. Carolina makes no gain and the ball goes over. Kentucky tries double pass, but Jones tackles runner for a loss of 8 yards. Kentucky goes around Cox for 15 yards. Kentucky goes around Foust for 3 yards. Ball is in the center of the field. Kentucky tries Cox for only one-half yard. Time is out. Kentucky's ball on Carolina's 50-yard line. Second down, with 4 1-2 yards to make.

Kentucky hikes around Foust for 10 yards. Kentucky fumbles but regains ball and gains 2 1-5 yards. Kentucky makes 2 1-2 yards. It's Kentucky's ball on Carolina's 35-yard line. Time is out. With only 1 foot to gain, Kentucky loses 3 yards around Cox, and it's Carolina's ball on her 30-yard line. Cox is hurt but continues. Kentucky has a way of passing the ball after being downed, which helps in making gains. Jones makes 2 yards and Foust 4. Donnelly makes 5 yards, but Jones makes no gain. Foust makes 5 yards. Time is out, the ball being Carolina's, on her 50-yard line. Roberson goes 7 yards around end and is hurt but continues in the game. The ball is on Kentucky's 50-yard line. Berkeley darts around end for 20 yards placing the ball on Kentucky's 30-yard line. Foust 3 yards. Pretty good punting. Jones makes 2 1-2 yards. Foust makes 3 yards—first down; Roberson makes 4 1-2 yards. The ball is now on Kentucky's 20-yard line. Berkeley in quick opening gets 5 yards. Jones makes 2 yards. Roberson loses by one of Kentucky's guards coming over Seagle for 4 yards. Jones tries place kick and fails. Kentucky returning the ball to her 25-yard line.

Kentucky goes through center for 1 yard. Jones is hurt. It's Kentucky's ball on her 26-yard line. Kentucky makes 2 yards over Seagle. Kentucky fails to gain over Seagle and Donnelly and Carolina gets the ball on Kentucky's 29-yard line. Jones makes 1-2 yard and Foust adds 6. Ball is on Kentucky's 22 yard line, first down; Roberson makes 2 yards, Donnelly 4, and the ball is Carolina's, first down on Kentucky's 16-yard line. Foust makes 4 yards.

Foust makes 1 yard over tackle. The ball is now on Kentucky's 8-yard line. But on an offside play the ball is advanced to Kentucky's 5-yard line. A foul is called here by Kentucky's quarter kicking ball as Stewart snaps it, and the ball is advanced to the 2 1-2 yard line. Jones makes 1 1-2 yards, placing the ball within one-half yard of the goal line. Jones goes over for a touch down. Jones misses goal. Roberson is put out of the game for scrapping on unfair ruling. Kentucky is playing dirty ball. Kentucky man is also put out but both men are allowed to continue in the game. A touch down is made in 18 minutes. 25 and 20 minute halves are being played.

Carolina kicks to Kentucky's 10-yard line and Kentucky returns it 15 yards, gains 2 yards and then 3 yards more. Seagle breaks through but fails to hold his man. Kentucky makes no gain and then makes 2 1-2 yards. She fumbles but regains the ball. Kentucky makes 2 yards and then hits centre for 1-2 yard. The ball is on Kentucky's 35-yard line. Kentucky makes 3 yards over Jones, and on double pass carries the ball to Carolina's 32-yard line, where Berkeley makes a beautiful tackle, getting his man through fine interference. Kentucky makes 2 yards and adds 5 more. The ball is on Carolina's 30-yard line. Kentucky makes 2 yards. Another gain of 2 yards is made, putting the ball on Carolina's 25-yard line. Kentucky makes 5 yards. Kentucky makes 2 yards over Jones. 15 seconds more to play, with the ball on Carolina's 18-yard line. Hester gets hurt. Kentucky tries place kick but misses Berkeley catches the ball, steps behind the line and with but a few seconds to play, the ball is brought out to the 25-yard line and kicked by Berkeley for 40 yards. Kentucky catches it and returns 40 yards by a beautiful pass of the man who is tackled. Time is up; score, Carolina 5, Kentucky 0.

Carolina rooters fill in the intermission by marching around the field under the gallant leadership of Jack Frost, singing "We're Tar Heels born and we're Tar Heels bred."

SECOND HALF.

No changes are made in the lineup. Kentucky kicks off to Carolina's 10-yard line. Hester returns 10 yards and Foust makes 10 yards around end. This puts the ball on Carolina's 25-yard line. Hester through center makes 4 yards; Berkeley 3 yards; Donnelly 2 1-2 yards. Foust makes 5 yards around end. Time is out, with the ball in Carolina's possession on her 43-yard.

Roberson makes no gain. Foust makes 1-2 yard. On a fake kick Berkeley loses 10 yards, and the ball goes to Kentucky on Carolina's 35-yard line, with 14 1-2 minutes to play.

Kentucky tries centre for 2 yards and again for 3 yards, putting the ball on Carolina's 30 yard-line. Kentucky makes 4 3-4 yards. Seagle breaks through and tackles runner for a loss of one yard. Kentucky tries the line but fails to make a distance of 1 yard and the ball goes over to Carolina.

Donnelly makes 1 1-2 yards; Berkeley no gain; Berkeley kicks 40 yards. Kentucky returns 5 yards. The ball is in Kentucky's possession on Carolina's 40-yard line. Kentucky goes through line and on forward pass loses 5 yards. On try around end she loses 3 yards more; third down, with 12 1-2 yards to gain. Kentucky kicks to Carolina's 10 yard line and Berkeley returns it 15 yards. A long discussion here ensues, the place for the ball having been lost, as the foul did not count. The ball is finally put on Carolina's 18-yard line in her possession. Donnelly makes 4 yards. Donnelly hurdles the line for 3 yards more. The ball is on our 20-yard line.

[The report is here somewhat mixed but seems as follows:] At this point Carolina loses the ball on a fumble. H. Yancey gets 5 yards around right end. He again takes the ball and starts around the same place. Cox tackles him by the foot but fails to hold him, and dodging other tacklers he runs 25 yards for a touch down. Kentucky kicks goal. Score: Kentucky 6; Carolina 5.

Kentucky kicks off to Carolina's 10-yard line. Hester fumbles but Foust gets the ball and makes 10 yards. Roberson makes 4 yards. Berkeley makes 20 yards around right end. It's Carolina's ball on Kentucky's 45-yard line. Jones makes 1 yard. Hester makes 3 yards. Foust makes 3 yards. Kentucky is offside and Carolina gets 5 yards. The ball is on Kentucky's 35 1-2 yard line. Berkeley goes through the line and fumbles the ball, which Kentucky gets, on her 40-yard line. Kentucky makes 2 1-2 yards; Kentucky no gain; then she kicks to Carolina's 20-yard line. Berkeley returns it 5 yards.

Donnelly makes 3 yards. The ball is in the centre of the field. Roberson makes no gain. Foust makes 2 1-2 yards. Donnelly makes 3 yards. Berkeley, on fake kick gets 10 yards through line. Roberson loses 3 yards, putting the ball on Kentucky's 37 yard line.

Mann is substituted for Berkeley, Mann makes 5 yards. Carolina fumbles but regains the ball, on Carolina's 32-yard line. Carolina kicks to Kentucky's 46-yard line and the ball goes out of bounds. Kentucky makes 4 1-2 yards. The ball is on Kentucky's 45-yard line. Kentucky makes 1 yard. Kentucky on delayed pass around Cox loses 2 yards. Kentucky kicks to Carolina's 5-yard line but Engle returns it 3 yards. Time is up; score.

Once more the White and Blue has met what is called defeat; and yet Carolina was not beaten or defeated nor are the colors of old U. N. C. in the dust. Kentucky kicked goal and Carolina didn't, hence we are said to have been beaten and the newspapers come out with such fanciful head-lines as: "The Tar Heels Bite the Dust," "Carolina Beaten by Kentucky," etc.

Well, let the newspapers talk; supporters of the White and Blue who saw the game know that our team played a great game. Kentucky's backs averaged over 180 pounds against our three who weighed 145, 183 and 150 respectively. And so we have no reason to feel dissatisfied with our team or with the game they put up Saturday. Kentucky's team is made up of men of weight and experience, they played rough foot ball and Carolina did well to hold them down as she did. That word "fumble," which was such a distressing feature of the Virginia game in 1900, again figured somewhat largely but we have no doubt this fault will be mended before Saturday. And then speaking of goal kicking, too, do we practice this enough? It is not long now till we play Clemson, a team that has missed few goals this season, and this rather neglected feature with us may mean victory or defeat. We just say this by way of parenthesis.

Next Saturday we line up against V. P. I. We will be able to judge pretty accurately of what we can do on Thanksgiving Day by the game we put against Blacksburg. Let us break up this losing streak we've gotten into recently. By the way can't we give the team a send-off this time?

Our friend, College Topics, thinks, judging by the recent foot ball scores that "Georgetown and Virginia are in a class by themselves and far superior in the So th."

Well, it does look that way, and there is a possibility of a new member in the class by Thanksgiving Day.

Rev. W. M. Morrison, D. D., for some time a missionary in the Congo Free State, under the auspices of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations, has promised to speak here about the middle of November. Dr. Morrison is a graduate of Washington and Lee University, and is considered a speaker of ability.

Fred B. Smith, of Boston, who has had such a wonderful success in men's meetings in our larger northern cities and colleges, will make a two-weeks tour in North and South Carolina, speaking at five or six different points. The students of the University will be the only students in the State to hear him. He will speak here about a week before Thanksgiving.

An athletic fraternity has been formed at the University of Iowa. Chapters will be established in the "big nine," but it is proposed to have chapters in practically every American University. The chief object of the fraternity is to spread a bond of fellowship among college athletes and remove the feelings of distrust and suspicion which sometimes mark the athletic relations of competing Universities. Membership is to be limited to those entitled to wear the Varsity initial of the University in which chapters may be established.

Summing up in a few words the leading eastern elevens as they appear today, it is plain that Yale, Princeton and Pennsylvania are displaying the most satisfactory form. At present Harvard appears to have little chance of defeating Yale and scarcely an even break with Pennsylvania.

THE TAR HEEL hereby announces that the Athletic Association will give a free ticket to Richmond on Thanksgiving Day for the best college song. This is open to every student in the University and it is hoped that we will be able by this means to increase our repertoire of songs. We have some good ones now but we want some more. It would be a good idea to make your verses to some standard tune so they can be easily learned.

It is probable that a mass meeting will be held shortly to practice some new songs.

There are several men in college who can write good verses and the writer of a good college song will have his fame go down in history. Let everybody hand in a song. They will be published in this paper each week whether they win the prize or not.

Here is one stanza of a song that recently appeared in "College Topics," air, "Strike up the Band." Show them some "stunts," Virginia in ouning,

LOCAL NOTES.

Good morning, did you go to the Normal reception?

Rev. C. E. Maddry, '03, of Hillsboro, was on the Hill Monday.

J. A. McRae, ex-'03 and Law '03, has moved to Charlotte to engage in the practice of his profession.

Ask Robins, S. S., if he doesn't know the front way to the Normal.

Quite a number of students went up to Greensboro last Saturday to witness the Kentucky game.

Mr. C. W. Tillett has been on the hill several days this week visiting his son, D. F. Tillett, '07.

Messrs. Huffman and Dick returned Monday from a visit to their homes at Whitsett, N. C.

W. C. Rankin left last Thursday for his home at Whitsett. We are sorry to learn of his slight illness since going home.

Our honored President has a visitor at his house. THE TAR HEEL extends congratulations and wishes long life to the young lady.

Continuous report of the V.P.I. game in the chapel Saturday. This is the last until the Virginia game and it should be an interesting one.

Dr. and Mrs. Howe, the latter until a short time ago Miss Margaret Flynn, of Columbia, S. C., have arrived on the Hill. THE TAR HEEL extends most hearty congratulations to the newly married couple and wishes all possible happiness to them down the pathway of life.

The Tennis Tournament With Virginia.

Carolina can beat Virginia in baseball, as was shown last spring; Carolina can beat Virginia in football, as we will show Thanksgiving day, and Carolina can beat Virginia in tennis, even if it is said by us who have just been defeated. Just here I might as well give you a little account of the game as you probably are not able to hear from any other source. On Monday we played the matches in singles, Hobgood vs. Fleet and Winston vs. Shaner. Their players are weak in serving and have no stroke at all in returning; they just play a steady, careful game. At the start of course we were fresh and could play hard. I beat my man the first three games straight and was saying what a snap I had. My mistake was that I had not played enough to keep my pace; whereas Shaner could play a week and never blow. Their game is entirely defensive; they just let you drive the ball about and they keep on knocking it back easy. About the fifth game my tongue was hanging out and my best was done. Shaner continued steady and finally got three sets to my none, but every set was close. Hobgood's experience was about the same.

After the game we had a good many Virginia fellows to tell us that we played a far better game than they; and naturally you will ask why we didn't beat. In doubles we beat more games than they did; but they beat more sets, and they are the counters. We won 27 to their 26. At one time we had them going, and this is the secret of our defeat: we were not sufficiently trained. I believe U. Va. and U. N. C. act as a metre each for the other. Each of us measures ourselves in comparison to the other.

So then, let us examine ourselves in tennis. At Virginia tennis is on a par with foot ball and base ball and some of their fellows said that more interest was shown in tennis this fall than in anything else and this was evidenced by the crowd at the game. There is a well organized tennis association of a hundred members, and it costs three dollars to join the association. As a result they have ten splendid courts surrounded by wire netting and a tennis net to every court. These courts are close together and are always in use. This is just what we must have here. This is the only department of athletics that is neglected here. It is just as impossible to get two men from here to win in tennis without competition and with very little practice as it would be for a man to run a successful mile race when he is not trained. At Virginia they have held a tournament participated in by 75 men in which four rackets were given as prizes. Their representatives have played regularly every afternoon since college opened and have had other players to make suggestions. If we train what we have here in college there will be little doubt as to the outcome, for if we in the very infancy of our playing make such a showing against those who are now at their best surely it would be a different tale if we had some sort of tennis system. We do not realize what advantages we would get by having an association. I suppose there are 150 men here who play tennis either in some back yard or on some run down court full of weeds. If we could get say fifty men to join an association at $2, we could put on the old athletic field six as well equipped courts as could be found anywhere.

Then, too, when we are organized we can buy balls at wholesale much cheaper, get special rates on rackets and be in some position to demand things instead of taking them as we can get them. A hundred dollars would equip these courts with nets and backnets and we could hire a negro to fix them up once a week. It could easily be arranged so that everybody could have a turn at the courts and the college would take more interest having sixteen or eighteen men all playing right there together. If such a thing could be brought about we could have a preparatory tournament this fall and don't let anybody stand back because he believes he'll get beat. Such a thing as this is all that is needed to put out three men to put it on Virginia. Let us all think of this and when a notice is posted for a meeting, let everybody who takes any interest in tennis come out and we will talk it over. We would be glad to have any of the faculty and let all of the Freshmen be sure to attend. We are going to beat Virginia in the spring.

Foot Ball Songs.

The songs printed here below, written on paper daintily bound with white and blue ribbon, were sent to THE TAR HEEL from Norfolk "By a North Carolina Girl in Virginia," and they are good, too. No name was signed but we hereby extend to the fair sender our hearty thanks, with the assurance that the songs shall be used to the vast encouragement of Carolina's team and the confusion of her enemies.

Tune: "The Bonnie Blue Flag"

Just see the flags a-flying,
And hark! the band does play—
Carolina plays a foot ball game
With U. Va. today.

CHORUS.

Hurrah! hurrah! for the White and Blue, hurrah!
Hurrah for the N. C. team and every one a star.

II.

With a cry they run and take Position in the field,
Some of them with nose-guard armed,
And others shoulder shield.

III.

The rooters root, the horns do toot,
The game is in full force.
Why do blue and orange wave?
N. C. will win of course.

IV.

Now watch that player running
The pig-skin in his hand.
He will make a grand touch down
To Carolina's band.

V.

And when at last he makes it,
Another kicks a goal,
Her score runs up and rooters cry,
"Va. is in the hole!"

VI.

Then the game is over!
White and Blue wave high?
Carolina lives forever!
But hard the Va.'s die.

Tune, "Under the Bamboo Tree."

In North Carolina is a town,
Where many college boys are found.
Its name is Chapel Hill, you see
And is the home of U. N. C.
Foot ball is their forte, you know
And into other towns they go.
Rarely defeat their colors show,
For with pluck they sing this song.

CHORUS.

"If you play us like we play you
And we both play the same
I lak a say this very day
We're going to beat this game.
For our dauder's up and we'll get the cup,
And whether you'll no or yes
We will show you what we will do.
And N. C. will prove the best."

Tune, "Kiss yourself Good-bye."

A college swell and his best girl
Had a tilt one night.
She knew he'd win if he'd just begin
A foot ball fight.
She told him plainly unless he'd go,
Right there with her he'd have no show.
He looked at her with a face of woe,
But she wouldn't relent, oh! no.

CHORUS.

"I've showed you the way for you to take,
Out on the field your rep. to make,
Out where the gridiron boys do play, oh my!
Studying so hard will make you sick,
So fall in the game and that right quick,
You need not try to shirk, so up and get to work.
Just kiss yourself goodbye."

Tune, "Sammy."

'Lina, oh Carolina, for you we're playing with all our might.
With true grit we'll show that we're "it"
When we beat them in the fight
'Lina, oh Carolina, we'll play for you, our pride and joy!
We love you and we will prove, too,
We are each one your own true boy.

ANOTHER DEFEAT.

V. P. I. Puts It on Carolina by a Score of 21 to 0. A Detailed Account of the Game.

Carolina met her second severe defeat of the season at Norfolk, Va., last Saturday. The Norfolk Landmark says: "The score 21 to 0 by no means indicates the pluck and spirit with which North Carolina contested with V. P. I. on the gridiron at La Fayette Field for foot ball supremacy yesterday afternoon;" and this is true. The Tar Heels fought well but the superior team work and impregnable interference of V. P. I. was too much for them.

Conspicuous above the remainder of the aggregation that struggled upon the checkerboard shone the work of Carpenter for V. P. I. Seldom has such playing been seen on any gridiron. As a half-back this man undoubtedly stands in a class by himself in the South; there is not another man who can approach him. Four of Blacksburg's very best men, including Carpenter, who were not in the game with Virginia on account of injuries or State's rules, played against Carolina and though this fact does not account for the defeat of the Tar Heels, it undoubtedly had something to do with the size of the score.

While the Tar Heels did good individual work, they seemed to lack team work and failed to work together. Stewart, Foust, Donnelly, Mann and Berkeley did good work.

Carolina wins the toss and receives kick. V. P. I. kicks 50 yards to Carolina and the ball is run out side. Mann goes 25 yards around end. Berkeley gets 20 yards around other end. Donnelly goes 2 yards. Hester gets 2 yards through centre and Foust adds 1 yard. Mann loses 3 yards around end and then tries line for no gain. Berkeley kicks 35 yards and Carpenter is downed in his tracks by Cox. V. P. I., man gets hurt.

The ball is on V. P. I.'s 25-yard line in her possession. Wilson tries Carolina's end but Mann tackles him for a loss of 1-2 yards. Carpenter goes around Cox for 85 yards and a touch down. He is tackled about six times but continues to run. When tackled last time he falls on the goal line, after 3 minutes of play. Cox and Mann are hurt but continue to play. V. P. I. has to kick out and succeeds. She now tries at goal and fails.

Carolina kicks to V. P. I.'s 15-yard line and V. P. I. returns it 20 yards. V. P. I. goes around Foust for no gain. Carpenter goes over Albright and Jones for 5 yards. V. P. I. makes no gain, Stewart tackling behind the line. Carpenter over Donnelly makes 4 yards. Councilman makes 5 yards over Albright and Jones. V. P. I. makes 2 yards. The ball is on the 56-yard line. A V. P. I. man is hurt. Carpenter gets 10 yards over guard.

V. P. I. goes 30 yards through line. Carpenter makes no gain over "Hyde." Councilman goes 4 yards over Perry. Carpenter gets 2 yards, then fumbles and Perry gets the ball. The ball is on Carolina's 14-yard line. Mann is hurt but continues to play. Mann loses 2 yards. Donnelly gains 1 yard. Berkeley kicks, and the ball hits V. P. I. man. Cox gets the ball and becoming confused runs toward his own goal. Mann loses 5 yards around end. Berkeley makes no gain. Carolina carries ball back to her 10-yard line on penalty. Berkeley kicks 25 yards and Carpenter brings it back 2 yards. Councilman makes 1 yard. The ball is on Carolina's 20 1-2-yard line. Carpenter makes 5 yards. Carpenter is hurt and V. P. I. makes 1 yard. Miles makes no gain. Carpenter makes 5 yards. The ball is on Carolina's 3-yard line. Carpenter gets 2 yards and Councilman goes through line for the second touch down. Carpenter misses goal. Score: V. P. I. 10; Carolina 0.

V. P. I. kicks off to Carolina's goal line and Mann returns the ball 27 yards. Berkeley goes around end for 15 yards. Mann hits the line for no gain. Jones makes no gain. Mann is hurt. The ball is on Carolina's 41-yard line. Berkeley kicks 30 yards and V. P. I. fumbles. Jones gets the ball and carries it to V. P. I.'s 15-yard line. None of the last counted as V. P. I. was off side and the ball is brought back to V. P. I.'s 45-yard line and given to Carolina.

Hester goes through the line for 3 yards. Berkeley makes 1 yard. Hester goes through line and fumbles but Engle gets the ball and makes first down. Foust goes around end for 2 yards. Mann goes through line for 3 yards, making first down. The ball is on V. P. I.'s 35-yard line. Mann is hurt. Berkeley loses 1 yard. Jones makes no gain. Berkeley kicks 30 yards and Hester throws Bear back to within 2 yards of V. P. I.'s goal line. Carpenter goes around Cox's end for 10 yards. Councilman gains 3 yards. A V. P. I. man is hurt. The ball is on V. P. I.'s 14-yard line, with 6 minutes to play.

V. P. I. makes 5 yards, Carpenter 10 yards and is tackled by Cox on a back run. V. P. I. makes 15 yards, placing the ball on her 45-yard line. Carpenter goes around Cox for 4 yards. Nice tackle is made by Cox. V. P. I. goes through center for 3 yards. Carpenter goes over Jones for about 25 yards, putting thy ball on Carolina's 35-yard line. Carpenter goes over Jones for 7 yards. V. P. I. makes 10 yards over Donnelly. V. P. I. 3 yards in same place. The ball is on Carolina's 14-yard line with 1 minute to play. Hester is hurt but continues to play. V. P. I. tries Foust for no gain. Carpenter tries Jones and Mann for no gain. Councilman hits line for 5 yards.

V. P. I. makes no gain and the ball is on Carolina's 5-yard line. Carpenter gets 4 yards. Time is up just as ball started in play and V. P. I. just goes over for a touch down but officials let it count. V. P. I. fails to kick goal. Score: V. P. I. 15; Carolina 0.

SECOND HALF.

V. P. I. has a faster team than we have and Carpenter is in a class all to himself. His offensive work is superb. Our boys are not playing at all together. Carolina kicks to V. P. I.'s 25-yard line and Abbott returns it 6 yards. On quarterback's running with the ball V. P. I. makes 5 yards. Next she goes around Foust's end and is tackled by Engle for no gain. V. P. I. is offside and the ball is put on Carolina's 35-yard line. Carpenter makes 10 yards. Carpenter on delayed pass gets 1 yard. Carpenter drops back for a kick and Wilson goes through line on fake play for about 10 yards. V. P. I. makes no gain. The ball is on V. P. I.'s 53-yard line.

V. P. I. makes 2 yards and the first down. On delayed pass V. P. I. loses 2 yards, being tackled by Donnelly on quarter back run. Engle, Foust and Donnelly tackle V. P. I. man for a loss of 3 yards but Carolina is offside and V. P. I. gets 3 yards. Next she goes over Donnelly for 2 yards and again for 3 yards in the same place; then she goes around Cox's end for 5 yards but on next play fails to gain. The ball is on 36-yard line.

Carpenter on delayed pass gets 10 yards but V. P. I. is offside and loses 20 yards. The ball is in her possession on Carolina's 45-yard line. V. P. I. by a quarter back run makes 4 yards. Carpenter kicks to Mann on Carolina's 5-yard line and he returns it 3 yards. Carolina makes 1 yard. Jones makes 3 yards and first down. The ball is on Carolina's 12 1-2 yard line. Jones is hurt and goes out. Wright goes in at end and Foust goes to tackle. Carolina fails to make first down by about half a foot and the ball goes over to V. P. I. who makes 10 yards around Wright, putting the ball on Carolina's 5-yard line. Berkeley is hurt. Carpenter goes over for a touch down around Cox's end. V. P. I. has to kick out for a better try at goal, makes fair catch, tries goal and kicks it. Score: V. P. I. 21; Carolina 0.

Carolina kicks to V. P. I.'s 10-yard line and Carpenter returns it by double pass to the centre of the field. The ball is brought back to V. P. I.'s 5-yard line for foul in holding Cox. V. P. I. on delayed pass gets 5 yards and on foul for using hands the ball is brought back to the 5-yard line again. Carpenter goes over Foust for 6 yards. Engle and Seagle go through Carpenter for no gain. Carpenter goes over Foust for 5 yards, and then over Foust for 5 yards more. On LECTURE BY DR. RUFFIN.

Dr. Thos. Ruffin Lectures in Gerrard Hall on "The Common Sense of Law."

Dr. Thos. Ruffin, of the University Law School, delivered a public lecture last Thursday evening in Gerrard Hall. His subject was: "The Common Sense of Law." This he handled in a very practical and common sense way. He began by saying: "Many people think of law as something apart from them, and they fail to have the proper respect for it. All society must have laws to govern its individuals. Formerly society was ruled by custom, and when a custom became clearly defined it became a law. Laws are not stationary but they progress as the people progress. From time to time the code is changed. A few years ago two hundred crimes were punishable by death, a woman was nothing more than a chattel, the oldest son inherited all the goods, and trials were often by combat or ordeals.

"These are now foreign to our rights. The change has been brought about through a natural process based on the common sense of the people. Law registers the change and so reflects the moral life of the people. Our laws are given us by trained men except our statute laws, which are made by the representatives of the people. Sometimes statute laws conflict with the constitution, when they do they are not laws.

"Common law is the unwritten law. It may be replaced at any time by statute law. The object of all law is common sense equality. It guarantees life, property, reputation and freedom of thought. It secures the right and redresses the wrong. It regulates civil acts, not moral ones."

Dr. Ruffin spoke of wrongs under three heads, viz., crime, torts and contracts; crimes as wrongs that affect the State, torts the individuals, and contracts personal agreement. He spoke of the laws concerning wills, deeds and the transfer of lands, and of their development. "The seeming injustice of the law is due more to jurists than to any fault of the law."

He concluded by saying: "A truly great lawyer can be made only out of a good and great man. Law leads a man to honesty, truth and morality. The lawyers are a noble set of men though often slandered. They fashion, make and apply laws to suit the high and low, the rich and the poor. They direct the course of civilization."

The question at the Di. Saturday night was: Resolved, that further annexation of territory is not for the best interest of this country. The affirmative won and Mr. Duls, '07, was reported best speaker 21 to 0 was another unexpected score. Some thought that we would beat V. P. I.; others thought they would win by a small score, but no one, not even V. P. I. itself, thought that we would be beaten so decisively. We have quite a train of disasters behind us, but now is the time to turn our faces to the front and hope for better things.

On Saturday we go up against a team that has kept the newspapers hot and the air thick with its boasts all the fall. We have heard of their multitudinous tricks and hair-raising runs through and around their opponent's line. We have heard how when their opponents stand high they butt them over and proceed on their jaunts down the field undisturbed; when their opponents get low their line hurdles them, carrying on their shoulders the entire back field, the full back carrying the opposing centre in his teeth while the quarter climbs the goal post and stands on his head with seven tacklers hanging to the different parts of his anatomy.

But that Clemson has a good team it cannot be denied. Thus for they have scored 136 points to their opponents 0; in a recent game they gained a total of 615 yards during the entire game to their opponents 28, scoring 13 touch-downs and kicking 8 goals. Their coach is a man in whom the Clemson team has sublime confidence; he has reduced the art of coaching down to pretty near an exact science and his name has been a by-word in Southern athletics for the last three years.

In 1901 this team defeated our crippled eleven 22 to 10, thus putting themselves in a class higher than they had ever before attained. Last year when we could and would have swamped them, they cancelled the game. And so now it is up to the Varsity to atone for this defeat and other defeats by silencing these boasters forever and a day. But the Varsity must have some help; the cheering must begin a little before the game and never cease until the final whistle blast is blown. There will be a lot of visitors on the Hill and they must be shown what Tar Heel spirit is—the never-say-die kind. The team is probably somewhat discouraged on account of its recent defeats but this time we must cheer them on to victory. This cannot be too strongly emphasized.

Rooters should be divided up into sections, each under the direction of a leader, so that when necessary the cheering can be united. All those who intend to root for U.N.C. should get together and keep together. "We Are Tar Heels Born" always impresses listeners—they know it by heart up in Virginia—so let this ring out loud and clear. We can't all get in the game but we can whoop 'em up for Carolina and cheer, cheer, cheer.

We trust that every student read the article in last week's issue on the tennis tournament with Virginia and took it to heart. Tennis certainly does not receive the attention it deserves at the University and there is need for a change. Before going to Charlottesville our representatives had been in no previous contest and had had no practice to speak of yet they put up an excellent game. This shows that with good courts and yearly tournaments we can turn out players with no superiors in the South. At our neighbor's, Virginia, tennis has almost monopolized attention this fall and the result was a winning team.

Tennis is a game which requires no special qualifications and every body can engage in it. There is no reason why we can't have a good active Tennis Association here which will turn out some winning players. Virginia is willing to play us again in the spring, so let something be done at once.

delayed pass Carpenter makes about 25 yards and is tackled beautifully by Berkeley. But on account of going out of bounds the ball is brought back to V. P. I.'s 33-yard line. On fake kick Carpenter brings it to her 56-yard line. On same trick V. P. I. makes, one yard, putting the ball in middle of the field, with not quite a minute to play.

Hester is hurt and Roberson goes in. On the next play Donnelly breaks up interference and throws Wilson back for a loss of 3 yards. Carpenter gets 6 yards and then the ball goes over to Carolina on downs. Time is called. Final score: V. P. I. 21; Carolina 0.

LOCAL NOTES.

Rev. Dr. H. W. Battle, of Greensboro, is the University preacher for November. He will preach in the University chapel next Sunday evening.

Four of Prof. Cobb's students will stand the civil service examination for appointments in the United States Geological Survey this week. The examination will be held in Raleigh.

Mr. G. H. Long and sister Miss Flora Long spent some time here last week, visiting friends.

The Misses Wheatleys, who have been visiting Mrs. J. W. Gore left for their home in Washington.

Quite a number of students went to Norfolk last week to see the Carolina-V. P. I. game.

Ask Joe Ramsey which gives the best service a passenger or freight train.

Saturday will bring to the Hill the best game of foot ball we will have here this season. Clemson will put up a good game. Every student should make an effort to see this game. It may be some sacrifice for some students to attend the game, but your interest and support is needed just at this time from a financial standpoint and also to strengthen the team.

Last night in the chapel Mr. E. S. W. Dameron led the Y. M. C. A. using for his subject, "Association Fellowship." Mr. Dameron entertained his hearers with something good as he always does.

The North Carolina Academy of Science will meet here Friday evening, November 13th.

The friends of Mr. George Pickard, our clever and accommodating liveryman, will learn with regret that some one visited his office at his stables last Sunday and relieved him of thirty dollars in cash.

Dr. Venable, Profs. Baskerville, Alexander, Smith and Graham attended the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools in Durham last week.

Dr. Chas. Baskerville will deliver an illustrated lecture Friday evening in Gerrard Hall on "Fluorescence, Phosphorescence, Radium and Radio-active Phenomena."

The Tar Heel was issued one day late last week in order to get in Mr. Winston's interesting account of the N. C.-Va. Tennis Meet.

Recently a newspaper account stated that Dr. T. J. Ruffin, Associate Professor of Law, had decided to give up his post here to practice law in Charlotte. We are glad to be able to announce that the report is untrue. Dr. Ruffin has a more than State reputation as an instructor and the Law School as well as the University could ill afford to lose him.

The University of Georgia team, which has no love for the Georgia Tech., promised to give Clemson in her game with the latter a bushel of apples for every point they made over 29, which was the score Clemson put on Georgia. Clemson piled up 73 points on the Tech. and hence gets 44 bushels of apples from Georgia at $1 per bushel.

Guff and Gossip.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch says that the annual Thanksgiving german will be given at the Masonic Temple, decorated for the occasion in palms, yellow and white chrysanthemums, and the dark and light blue of the Universities of Virginia and North Carolina.

Mr. I. E. Avery, of the Charlotte Observer, says in his "Variety of Idle Comment":

"Just for curiosity one would like to see the foot ball team that was not the 'best team the college ever had.' The plague on college athletics in this country is a conceit which breeds carelessness. Each college team defeats a smaller college team; hears prize poems read in its honor; and then goes down in quaking defeat before a larger college team. The playing is too careless in superiority and too nerveless against odds. Clemson College and this year's Davidson team seem to be the exceptions to the rule. The University of North Carolina team never has an adequate idea of what it is fit for until after the game with the University of Virginia."

Clemson is said to use two formations more than all others. One is a tandem effect and the other is a straight formation with the backs arranged in order. In the tandem the first man smashes a hole through the opposing line or carries the extra man out of the path while the second carries the ball, held up and carried along by the quarterback and the remaining half. In its recent game with the Georgia Tech., Clemson scored 13 touch downs and kicked 8 goals, making a total of 73 points in 40 minutes of play. A newspaper report said that "Hauvey's work in hurdling was the best seen on a local gridiron since the days of Koehler of the Tar Heels, when Carolina put out her greatest team."

Meeting of the Historical Society.

The historical society met in the history room on November 2d. After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by Dr. Raper, several papers were read. Mr. Winstead read a paper on Gen. L. O. Branch. He was followed by Dr. Raper with a short talk on the system of defense in colonial North Carolina. Dr. Battle then read an article on the Havinger, the first newspaper ever published by the University. It was published in 1833.

We are glad to be able to announce that the University is going to have another good musical organization. This week practicing begins in earnest. More than ever before, Mr. Woollen states, there is this fall among the student body plenty of good material for a Glee Club, which includes Mandolin Club and Orchestra. We are fortunate both in having this material and in having such a competent musical director. For, when we recall the creditable organization of last year, we know that an even better one will very greatly help the students and the college in many ways useless to mention. The whole college is proud to have and to support such a Glee Club at home—and abroad. We expect this worthy organization soon to take definite shape.

The Tennis Tournament With Virginia.

The tennis meet with Carolina instituted this season for the first time was, from Virginia's point of view, a most successful one. In spite of the fact that North Carolina failed to win any of the three events her representatives were worthy of our skill and put up a game fight, especially in the doubles, which event Virginia was able to land only after the hardest kind of struggle. The weather conditions were ideal and the large crowd, which numbered about 200, contained quite a number of the fair sex. * * *

The players who defended Virginia's name and fame were selected with great care by a committee appointed for the purpose and the wisdom of their choice is shown by the result of the meet, Shaner and fleet played in the singles, while Fleet and Page made up the team for the doubles. Carolina sent but two men, Winston and Hobgood, both excellent players, brilliant at times, but lacking that steadiness of play which characterized the work of Virginia's men and won out in spite of the bursts of speed of the Tar Heels. In the singles Fleet defeated Hobgood three straight sets (6-2, 6-7, 6-4), by steady tennis, placing the ball carefully and lobbing in great style while Shaner was equally fortunate with Winston, winning out 6-4, 6-2, and 6-2. In the doubles the teams were more evenly matched, Page and Fleet having played together but rarely, were at a disadvantage which only good individual playing could overcome, and it seemed at times as if they would be overcome, and it seemed at times as if they would be beaten. They won the event, however, 6-4, 5-7, 7-5, 1-6, 6-3.

CLEMSON OUTCLASSED.

Carolina Defeats Clemson by a Score of 11 to 6 in the Face of Difficulties. Foust, Newton and Jacocks Stars.

In a most exciting game Carolina beat Clemson last Saturday on the University gridiron by a score of 11 to 6. Uneasiness for the Varsity was felt at the beginning of the game on account of her crippled condition, and because of Clemson's trick plays. And, in fact five of Carolina's men were "knocked out" while Clemson played the same eleven from beginning to end. The visitors were well trained and they played exceptionally hard, snappy ball. This, however, the Varsity offset, for, to use the language of an old Carolina player, "none of the team had cold feet." And the balance tilted in Carolina's favor because the Varsity as a team played hard, honest ball.

Clemson's playing was characterized by fouls: off-side plays, and by holding in the line. In fact, the Referee on one occasion was forced to call time to say: "Gentlemen, the rules state that all such playing is unsportsmanlike and must be penalized, and it will cost you every time I see you foul." But Clemson—and the facts must be recorded—continued to play "unsportsmanlike" ball, and Carolina, we regret to say, finally met them halfway.

The noticeable feature of the game was the team work on both sides. Yet there are some who must be given special mention: for Clemson—Sitton, Wood, Furtick and Harvey; for Carolina—Foust, Berkeley, Engle, Jacocks and Newton. Newton, with a constantly bleeding eye, played a brilliant game, and he was taken off the field at the close of the game, amid cheers on the shoulders of enthusiastic rooters.

THE GAME.

Clemson wins the toss and chooses to defend the east goal. Berkeley kicks to Clemson's 10-yard line and Clemson returns it 5 yards, then fumbles but regains the ball and goes over Foust for 3 yards; then Clemson goes around same place and is tackled by Newton for 2 yards. On next play Clemson fumbles but regains the ball. Next two plays net 3 yards. Clemson loses 3 yards around Cox, second down. Clemson kicks 35 yards and Berkeley returns it 5 yards. Newton makes 3 yards. Clemson is off-side and loses 5 yards. Donnelly makes 20 yards around Sitton. Foust on like play makes 3 yards and a Clemson man is hurt. Newton makes 2 yards over tackle. Foust adds 2 1-2 yards over tackle, placing the ball on Clemson's 32 1-2 yard line.

Hester misses signals and Engle runs with the ball, making 1 yard, Berkeley is hurt. Donnelly makes 3 yards but is called back as Clemson is off-side. The ball is on the 25 1-2-yard line and first down. Newton goes over the line for 1 1-2 yards. On tackle back Foust makes 1 yard. On same play Newton makes 3 yards. Berkeley makes 1-2 yard. Donnelly makes 1 1-2 yards over line. Foust makes 3 yards over tackle and then hits the line for 2 1-2 yards and again goes over the line for 3 1-2 yards. The ball is on Clemson's 3 1-2-yard line. Newton is hurt but continues to play. Newton behind tackle-back formation goes over Clemson's tackle for a touch down. Jones kicks goal. Score, Carolina 6; Clemson 0. Time played 6 1-2 minutes.

Carolina kicks to Clemson on 15-yard line and Clemson returns it 20 yards, and then goes around end for 5 yards. Maxwell goes around Cox's end for a touch down but on account of off-side play he is called back and penalized 5 yards. The ball is on Clemson's 30-yard line. Clemson then tries Cox for double pass by a long throw and loses 1-2 yard. Time is out. Clemson's holding in line lost for her 20 yards. The ball is on Clemson's 11-yard line. Clemson kicks 30 yards and Newton is tackled in his tracks. Donnelly gets 1 yard. Hester plunges over line for 3 yards, and Foust makes 1-2 yard, failing to make required distance by only a few inches. Clemson gets the ball. Newton on next play tackles Sadler for a loss of 5 1-2 yards. On delayed pass Clemson makes 7 yards. Clemson fumbles and Hester falls on the ball.

Newton makes 3 yards around Sadler. Foust, hiked by Newton, makes 2 1-2 yards. Berkeley darts around Sitton's end for 13 yards. Newton goes around Sadler for 1-2 yard. Foust makes 1 yard, Newton 2 yards and first down by a close shave. Foust makes 2 1-2 yards over line and then adds 2 yards and again 1 1-2 yards on line. Newton makes 1-2 yard over tackle. Donnelly on cross-back makes 1-2 yard. A Clemson man is hurt.

Foust makes 4 1-2 yards over tackle, hiked beautifully by Newton. Berkeley gets around Setters for 5 yards. A Clemson man is hurt. Foust hits the line for no gain. Clemson makes a great stand. The ball is on Clemson's 1-2 yard line, but Clemson is off-side and Carolina gets half the distance. Newton is pushed through for a second touch down. Time 11 minutes. Jones misses goal. Score: Carolina 11; Clemson 0.

Carolina kicks to Clemson's 15-yard line and Clemson returns it 20 yards. Clemson, on trick pass, makes about 20 yards, Sitton carrying the ball and is thrown from behind by Fisher in a beautiful tackle. The ball is on Carolina's 50 yard line in Clemson's possession. Foust and Newton tackle a man for no gain. On delayed pass Clemson makes 5 yards. Engle making nice tackle. Engle is hurt but continues to play. Clemson hits the line for 2 yards, Engle making another good tackle. On same play Clemson makes 4 yards. On next play in trying to make a long pass, Clemson loses the ball and Cox falls on it on Carolina's 25-yard line, 6 3-4 minutes remaining to play. Donnelly makes 1-2 yard and is hurt. A Clemson man shoots under Perry and gets Donnelly. Newton gets around Sadler for a beautiful run of 20 yards. Berkeley goes around end for a nice run of 7 yards. Jacocks takes Berkeley's place at half-back, Berkeley being badly hurt and carried off the field. Newton goes around end for 1 yard and Clemson gets the ball on a fumble. Clemson makes 6 yards around end, Cox making nice tackle. Clemson goes around Fisher's end for 30 yards and is stopped by the pretty tackle of Jacocks. Engle is hurt. Stewart breaks through on next play and tackles man and Clemson's goes over Perry for 5 yards. Clemson makes touch down on tandem play. 2 1-2 minutes more to play. Clemson punts out for a better try at goal. Sitton makes a fair catch. Clemson kicks goal. Score Carolina 11; Clemson 6.

Clemson kicks to Carolina's 10-yard line and Jacocks returns the ball 25 yards. Jacocks makes 3 yards around end. Newton goes around end for 2 yards. Clemson is off-side and loses 5 yards. Hester goes through the line for 2 yards. Donnelly goes around tackle for 2 1-2 yards and is hurt. Foust gets 1-2 yard, first down. Bully Jones opens up nice hole and Newton makes 3 yards. Jacocks makes 8 yards through the line and time is up with the ball in Carolina's possession in the centre of the field.

SECOND HALF.

Clemson makes a short kick, and Sitton gets the ball. On next play, Newton breaks through and tackles runner for a loss. Clemson makes 4 yards but is off-side and loses 10 yards. The ball is on Carolina's 30-yard line. Ross goes in at quarter and Albright goes to guard. Clemson on fluke tries end and Newton butts runner over and it's Carolina's ball. Newton by fine run makes 25 yards around end. Jacocks makes 5 yards, Newton doing fine blocking. On delayed pass Jacocks makes 3 yards and first down. Newton makes 4 yards. Foust stumbles and makes 1-2 yard. Third down 1-2 yard to make. Jacocks makes first down.

Some one misses signals and Newton takes the ball and makes 2 yards. Jacocks is hurt but on next play makes 1 yard. Foust makes 5 yards on nice team work. Jacocks goes around end for a fine run of 17 yards. Newton by end run makes 10 yards. Moyon goes to half and Newton takes full. Foust makes 2 yards and then adds 1 yard over line. Clemson gets the ball on downs on Clemson's 11-yard line. Newton gets hurt. Clemson makes 2 yards and then 4 yards and 2 yards and again 1 1-2 yards, using tandem formations. Clemson is off-side and loses 10 yards. Clemson kicks 45 yards out of bounds.

Jacocks makes 5 yards and Foust 6 yards. Somebody misses signals and no gain is made; time out. Foust makes 4 1-2 yards. Foust is hurt but continues to play. Newton goes through line for 2 1-2 yards. Jacocks goes around end for 12 1-2 yards. Jacocks goes through line for 2 yards and again for 3 yards. Newton goes through line for 1 yard. He misses signals and Foust makes 1 yard. It's 3rd down, with 3 yards to make and Moyon makes 5 yards. Foust makes 3 yards. Clemson gets the ball by stealing it after it was downed. Clemson makes 3 yards but time is out. Clemson makes 3 yards. Moyon is hurt. Clemson goes around end but loses 3 yards on tackle by Foust.

Clemson kicks 20 yards and after some 3 fumbles Moyon gets the ball. Jacocks makes no gain. Foust makes 5 yards. The signals are mixed and as the quarter-back runs with the ball, it is carried back 20 yards. Jacocks kicks 30 yards and the ball is returned 10 yards. Clemson makes 3 yards and again 2 yards, first down. Next she goes around Cox for 3 yards. Clemson makes 5 yards and again 3 yards. Ross is taken out and Hart goes in. Clemson makes 3 yards. Clemson makes 6 yards. Time is up, with ball in middle of the field. Score: Carolina 11; Clemson 6.

Special Train to Richmond.

A special train will be run to Richmond Thanksgiving, to carry all students wishing to go to see the game. The train will leave Chapel Hill station at 5 or 5.30 A. M., returning leave Richmond at 12 midnight. The fare will be $2.50 per capita for round trip. In order to have this train run the Athletic Association has to guarantee the railroad people a sale of 150 tickets or more. For this reason it is urged that as many as can, go. Unless this number go, and communicate their intention to do so in time to charter the train, it cannot be run. Sign the list in the University Pharmacy and come out to the mass meeting to be called soon to find out the number intending to go. On to Richmond.

Saturday's victory was very encouraging. With a badly crippled team Carolina went in and won a victory from one of the hardest fighting teams in the South. This shows what the Varsity can do when it tries. If it can put up that sort of game with the team in the worst condition it has been this year, there is no telling what it can do with all the men in the pink of condition—as it is hoped they will be by Nov. 26th. There are few teams in the South today that could withstand the line-plunging, end-running and good team work that the Varsity put up last Saturday.

Only one more game remains for the season of 1903. This is the one most prepared for and anticipated—perhaps too much so. Latest advices from the seat of war state that Virginia is expecting to win by a score of 40 to 0. They are looking forward to simply a little track team work with Carolina and are already prepared to celebrate themselves as champions of the South. They are actually expecting to beat the Indians next Saturday. Well, nobody forgets how after winning a glorious victory over the Red men and becoming much puffed up thereby, the Virginians went into the Thanksgiving game last year with great confidence, lost the ball on downs the very first three rushes, and when they recovered from their trance found the score 12-12. We won't venture any predictions at this date. Conservative estimates say Virginia should win by three touch-downs. Perhaps they are right; who can gainsay them? But let them guard against surprises.

Excursions will be run over both the Seaboard and Southern. An immense delegation will go from the State as a whole, and there is no reason why Carolina should not have at least 300 rooters at the game. The rooting was very poor last Saturday and we must have an improvement along this line. Let everybody sign up at once for the trip and make old Richmond ring with "Yackety-Yacks" on Thanksgiving Day.

Scientists Meet.

The second annual meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science was held here last Thursday and Friday. While on The Hill the members of the Academy were the guests of the Elisha Mitchell Society.

The first meeting was Thursday night in Gerrard Hall. Dr. Venable made the address of welcome. Prof. C. W. Edwards, of Trinity College, president of the Academy, delivered his inaugural address on "Science and Its Relation to the State." On adjournment, a smoker was given by the Mitchell Society to the members of the Academy in the Alumni Building.

There was a business meeting Friday morning, at which the following officers were elected:

President, Dr. Chas. Baskerville, of the University.

Vice-President, Prof. J. I. Hamaker, of Trinity College.

Secretary-Treasury, Mr. Franklin Sherman, State Entomologist.

The executive committee are Dr. Baskerville and Mr. Sherman, ex-officio, and Dr. F. L. Stevens, of A. and M. College; Prof. W. L. Poteat, Wake Forest, and Mr. C. S. Brimley, of Raleigh.

Papers were read at the morning and evening sessions as follows:

Collier Cobb—A New Palaeotrochis Locality, with Notes on the Nature of Palaeotrochis.

W. C. Coker—The Flora of the Isle of Palms, South Carolina.

Jno. F. Lanneau—Approaching Sunspot Maximum.

C. W. Edwards—Theory of the Induction Coil.

F. L. Stevens and W. G. Sackett—The Granville Tobacco Wilt.

C. B. Williams—Improvement of Corn by Seed Selection.

H. V. Wilson—Notes on Some Pacific Sponges.

C. S. Brimley—Southeastern Box Turtles.

Collier Cobb—The Forms of Sand-dunes as Influenced by Neighboring Forests.

Franklin Sherman, Jr.—Work on a List of the Insects of North Carolina.

F. L. Stevens—Poisoning by Lepidota Morgani.

T. G. Pearson—Life Histories of Some Southern Birds. (Stereopticon).

W. C. Coker—Chapel Hill Liverworts.

C. S. Brimley—Notes on the Transformation of Some Large Coths.

C. S. Brimley—List of the Tiger-beetles (Cicindellidae) of North Carolina.

Charles Baskerville—A Simple Device for Illustrating the Periodic Law.

Charles Baskerville—"Action of Ultra-violet light upon Rare Earth Oxides."

Charles Baskerville—The Effects on Rare Earth Oxides of Radium—barium compounds and on the Production of Permanently Luminous compounds by mixing the latter with Powdered minerals.

Adeline C. Stevens—Observations on the Cytology of the Phycomycetes.

T. G. Pearson—Rare North Carolina Birds.

W. S. Rankin—Demonstration of the Parasite in Anchylostomiasis. (Hook-work Disease).

W. L. Poteat—Cendel's Contribution to a Theory of Heredity.

At night Dr. Baskerville delivered before the Academy a lecture which will be found in another column. After the lecture a reception was given by the members and ladies of the faculty in the Zeta Psi Fraternity building.

If Manager Smith will make arrangements so that admission tickets to the Carolina-Virginia game can be bought on the excursion train that is to be run from here to Richmond, a great deal of trial and tribulation will be avoided and not only will much trouble be prevented, but also Carolina's management can more easily tell its exact portion of the gate receipts. The above suggestion is made on the strength of the experience of last Thanksgiving. The excursion from the Hill arrived in Richmond just in time for the boys to eat a hurried dinner and chase out to the grounds by the time the game was called. But when the fellows got to the gate it was impossible to get to the ticket window. Hundreds of people were scrambling and fighting around one pigeon-hole. Some of the Carolina students were forced to give money instead of a ticket to the gate-keeper. Others gladly gave a dollar for a fifty cent ticket to a scalper on the outside. Many were unable to get into the grounds until the first half was well under way. But criticism of anything done last year is not in mind except in so far as such criticism points out grounds for our suggestions, viz., that the foot ball manager fix things so that the Carolina excursionists to Richmond can conveniently buy their tickets to the game.

LOCAL NOTES.

On to Richmond. U. N. C. stock is advancing rapidly.

There will be a continuous report in Gerrard Hall next Saturday, of the game between the Carlisle Indians and Virginia.

Mr. J. A. Patterson, of New Bern, was here several days last week on a visit to his son, who is a student in the University.

Messrs. Walter E. Murphy and W. R. Linton, of Salisbury, came to see the game Saturday. The students were glad to see Mr. Murphy, especially. He is a loyal son of the University. He held down center on the Varsity for four years, from 1892-'96.

Mr. W. S. Allen, of Davidson, was among those who saw Saturday's game.

Dr. J. E. Mill, a member of the University faculty last year, is on the Hill.

Mr. A. G. Kneble, of Charlotte, State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., spent several days on the Hill this week.

Messrs. C. M. Carr and B. K. Lassiter went over to Durham Monday afternoon.

Quite a number of old students came to see the Carolina-Clemson game last Saturday.

Mr. Robt. G. Lassiter, an old student and instructor of the University spent several days on the Hill this week.

Messrs. W. F. Carr and R. O. Everett, of Durham, came over last Saturday to see the game.

Messrs. C. R. McIver and H. W. Scott came to see the Carolina-Clemson game here last Saturday.

Mr. T. C. Linn was here last week visiting his son, who is a member of the class of '07.

Mr. Alex Stronach, of Raleigh, was here last Saturday.

Dr. W. A. Lambeth, a member of the faculty of the University of Virginia, was here Saturday to see the game.

Dr. Hume has recently delivered two lectures before the Baptist Woman's College in Raleigh and a sermon and a lecture in Greensboro.

Dr. Marcus Benjamin, editor of the Smithsonian Institution, at Washington visited Dr. and Mrs. Baskerville this week. He was accompanied by Mrs. Benjamin.

At the recent meeting of the State Historical and Literary Association Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, our Professor of the English language, was elected president.

Students who are subscribers to THE TAR HEEL are requested to pay up their subscriptions to the Business Manager at once. It is impossible for the paper to be published unless it meets its bills, and bills for publication have to be met every week. Please pay this week.

All supporters of our foot ball team will be sorry to learn of the injury of Earle Holt, last year's great full back, in a recent foot ball game in Virginia. He sustained a fracture of the small bone in his leg, which has laid him up and will probably prevent his attending the Thanksgiving game.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith goes to Davidson on the 20th where he lectures on "Oratory and Literature in the South."

The following telegram to the team was received Saturday night after the game. Hearty thanks are extended through THE TAR HEEL: "Congratulations. Praise be God. That's playing some. The Tiger is dead.—South Carolina Team."

Some Songs

Tune, "He was a bold bad man."

There is a team called "Tar Heels",
And they always do their best.
They never do any slugging,
But you bet they do the rest.
So when they strike Virginia,
They will put them out of sight.
And in the town of Richmond
We will celebrate that night.

They are bold bad men and desperadoes.
They will strike Virginia like eleven tornadoes
And they'll walk around like boom! bushaders.
And everywhere they go you'll hear their war hoop.

C. W. ROWE.

Tune: "In the Good Old Summer Time."

On this Thanksgiving Day we are going to play
With all our force and might.
We're determined to win by going right in
And staying in the fight.
We've come all this way to show Virginia today

She's up against the real thing.
We know that we've got the best team by a lot.

And that is why we sing:

CHORUS.

On this Thanksgiving Day,
On this Thanksgiving Day,
Rushing through Virginia's line,
Our team will force her way.
We don't know what it is to give up
And that's the reason why
We'll carry Virginia's scalp back home,
As sure as we Tar Heels try.

S.

We are Tar Heels born,
We are Tar Heels bred,
And when we die
We'll be Tar Heels dead.

CHORUS.

Then it's rah, rah! Carolina, etc.,
Virginia's quick,
And her line is thick,
But let them come
For like tan we'll stiock.

CHORUS.

We'll ramble around
Old Richmond town,
For to win this game
We are surely bound.

M.

A Card.

In a copy of THE TAR HEEL of a few weeks ago, there appeared an article censuring the South Carolina foot ball team on account of one of its players. We think this article too severe. To be sure one of their men slugged and he was immediately put out of the game. With this one exception the South Carolina boys treated us well, and we hope that the athletic relations between us shall remain, as they have been, pleasant. The record of this year's team has raised South Carolina College in Southern foot ball and we wish them every success in the future. G. L. JONES, Captain

The Kellogg Lecture.

The first of the star course lectures was given Wednesday night by Mr. Charles D. Kellogg, naturalist and bird-warbler. Mr. Kellogg has the decided gift of reproducing the songs of birds, in the exact way that the birds themselves sing by the use of the throat and not of the lips.

From the time he began his first selection, "A Bunch of Black-birds," to the end of the recital he furnished the audience with pure entertainment. Besides the music of his bird songs he gave many interesting and instructive facts of bird life, illustrating all with stereoptican views. As the lantern operator threw upon the screen pictures of birds and their homes, the lecturer told of their habits and reproduced the songs of each. At the close of his recital he told of a trip to a certain rock in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where he studied the numberless birds which live there. The rock rises abruptly from the water to a height of more than a hundred feet. On it live a family of five persons, whose business it is to fire bombs warning sailors to keep away. In the crevices of the rocks live the birds. Their food they get from the water below. Mr. Kellogg's story of his experience in descending the rock and getting among the birds in the crevices was highly interesting.

As an entertainer Mr. Kellogg is excellent; as a naturalist he gave to his audience new ideas and a better appreciation of nature. Everyone will see more in the song of a bird after having heard him.

Tennis Association Organized.

Last Wednesday evening at 7.30 a mass meeting was held in Gerrard Hall for the purpose of organizing a Tennis Association. Mr. Horner Winston was unanimously elected president, and Mr. Hal Worth secretary and treasurer.

The newly elected president proceeded to explain the organization: its purpose and its plan. The desire is to promote ability in tennis in such a general way that the University shall possess many good players and several with superior skill. To aid this, Dr. Venable has consented to allow as many courts as are needed, for instance, five or six, to be built side by side on the old athletic field convenient to the new gymnasium. This arrangement of the courts will make the playing unusually interesting and agreeable. The players will be enabled to take interest in each other's work, and spectators will be attracted. After the game the players can go to their lockers in the Gym. and then be refreshed with baths. And next year the University can send out to other colleges not only one but several good tennis teams.

A tournament is to be held this week on some of the scattered courts that we now have around college. In doubles strong and weak players will be put together to make even matches. To the winners there will be given handsome prizes. The admission fee to the association is at once very small and sufficient—$2.

DR. BASKERVILLE'S LECTURE

Report of the Lecture Delivered Before the Academy of Science in Chapel Hill.

In the lecture on "Fluorescence, Phosphorescence: Action of Ultra-Violet Light, Roentgen Rays and Radium Preparations Upon Minerals and Gems," which Dr. Baskerville delivered before the North Carolina Academy of Science, in Gerrard Hall on November 13th, a historical resumé of phosphorescence of various materials, minerals and decaying vegetation and products of chemical change in dead and living matter was given, illustrated by experiments.

During the past summer Dr. Baskerville carried out extensive investigations on the Morgan-Tiffany gem and Bement-Morgan mineral collections in the American Museum of Natural History in New York. This work was done with Dr. Geo. F. Kunz, the gem expert of Messrs. Tiffany and Co., of New York. These valuable collections contained some four or five thousand cut precious stones and some 18,000 authenticated minerals. About 13,000 of the latter were examined as to their conduct under the influence of ultra-violet light and many new interesting observations recorded which promise conclusions of considerable scientific interest. In addition to the above, some 15,000 diamonds and other precious stones belonging to Messrs. Tiffany and Co. were examined. During the course of the investigations a new gem material, called by Dr. Baskerville, Kunzite, after his co-laborer, was discovered.

The characteristic conduct of the different minerals was exhibited during the course of the lecture.

A number of pictures of mounted gems were thrown upon the screen from which the influences of the Roentgen rays upon gem material could be seen.

Finally, the effect of radium preparations upon gems and gem material was spoken of and demonstrated. The strongest radium preparations that have yet been had in this country were used in the experiments. Several of these preparations were passed around in the audience for their inspection. A remarkable experiment demonstrating the intense penetrative effect of radium preparations was mentioned. It had been shown that these emanations would pass through consecutively glass, rubber, silver, copper, (4 sheets), and water and cause diamonds, and kunzite to fluoresce or glow in the dark.

Slides were thrown upon the screen to demonstrate the complexity of the rays given off from radium preparations. Attention was called to the possible explanation of the tails of comets and solar radiations and those things given off from the newly discovered element radium.

Sir William Crookes' spinthariscopes were exhibited and the effect of mixing certain pulverized minerals with radium preparations of lower activity was shown. They glowed with exquisite beauty in the dark.

In closing, reference was made to the success that had attended efforts to locate fractures, mis-growths, etc., in the bony processes by means of Roentgen rays and to the possibility of locating ruptures, growths and peculiarities of the veins, etc., by means of bodies which phosphoresce under the influence of ultra-violet light, or radium preparations.

At the close of the lecture many students and visitors remained for a closer observation of some of the extremely interesting and remarkable experiments given.

"A Strong Man."

Probably the most profitable address the University has been favored with for a long time was that by Mr. Fred B. Smith, on last Tuesday night. Mr. Smith is in the Y. M. C. A. work and is known as one of the most effective speakers to men in the United States. His subject was, "A Strong Man;" and he perfectly exemplified it in his person, being a physical giant and showing himself a man of exceptional mental qualities. He said in part:

"When we hear of a strong man our first thought is of a powerful physique. This is surely a requisite; every one should develop and preserve his body. But mere brute force is the lowest thing, and is not the true test of the strong man.

"The same is true of the wealthy and the intellectual man. It is the duty of every man to get wealth and education. But even these are not the final tests of the man.

"The real strong man is that man who stands up in the strength of Christian manhood and lives the noble life. That is the man whom the world admires and who is the world's leader. It is character that is the final test of the strong man, and it is this that the young man should try to attain."

In this plain talk the speaker had reached every man in his audience. The effect on them was plainly shown in the expressions which they made. His simplicity, his sympathy, his earnestness have added a new note to our religious life. The effects of such an address cannot be short lived.

"The Hymns of the Ages."

Dr. Thomas Hume Lectures to an Attentive Audience in Gerrard Hall Thursday Evening.

The latest of the series of faculty lectures was that given by Dr. Hume in Gerrard Hall last Thursday evening on "The Hymns of the Ages." A good-sized audience was present and listened attentively to Dr. Hume's presentment.

Dr. Hume said in substance:

"The Hymns of the Ages represent critical momenta in the development of religious thought, and are often great doctrines molten into feeling. Many a popular ballad must have sprung from the storm-tossed Israel which has died away on the sands of time. But the antiphonies of Moses and Miriam and of Deborah's ode reveal the great heart of the chosen people. If our survey embraced the Psalms only we could enumerate high festal and battle anthems, exiles' longings and miseres, nightingale notes, many strains writ in star-fire and immortal tears. But we could not neglect the mysterious chant of half-inspired Balaam or Messianic rhapsodies in Isaiah. [The classification was so elaborate that this report will not attempt it or the striking review of the formative and inspiring influence of the Biblical lyrics on much of the noblest literature. How much poetry there is in the New Testament had not impressed us so distinctly.] Outside the canon of Scripture the forms and life of early hymns were suggested by the parallelism and concrete imagery of the Bible. The Te Deum and the Gloria are examples. From the processional hymns of through Ambrosian and Gregorian chants the lecture bore as in its sweep through Bernard of Clairvaux's passion hymns which have so impressed Moravian, Wesleyan and other praises of Christ. Of especial interest was the appearance of symbolism and quaint conceits ever recurring even beyond George Herbert's fantastic melodies. We were led to note luscious and pathetic grace of the Stabat Mater, the thunder-tones of the Dies Irae, the haunting cadency and trills of Jerusalem the Golden, the mystic fervor and evangelical simplicity of the German songs. How far art may help sentiment and true religion, what effect the Latin hymns had on the development of English rhythms and rime-schemes, how we may test the popular hymns, some estimate of the weird African chants, were amongst the subjects methodically and instructively discussed. Recitations helped us to feel that certain hymns are great poems and while we were still under their charm the lecturer made his effective close in a summary that proved the essential unity of thought and life in the invisible church of the ages as expressed in our great hymnals.

Dr. Baskerville went to Greensboro Monday.

Dr. Smith Just Like Folks.

The comment man is proud to acknowledge publicly that he has a great fondness for Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, Professor of English at the State University, who made an address at Davidson College the other day. Dr. Smith is one professor who is very much like folks. There may be other professors like this, but they are generally at the bottom of the barrel. Dr. Smith is quite on to his job and can discourse in the genuine Chaucer—the bloom-in' chancleer part and all—but he is not foolish about it. He has a quality of horse sense that is priceless, and he picks the banjo. No piano, or guitar, or violin, but a banjo that gives out old fashioned negro melodies and allows an unctious, unmeaning carol of the cotton field. The fact is noted merely in passing. Dr. Smith has a reputation outside of North Carolina and he deserves it. He is a big man in his profession and he will grow bigger. All the ultraisms that there may be in his craft he has at his tongue's end; and yet it is good to think that he is an artist with the banjo—good to think that students are under the supervision of a man who, however learned he may be, has the heart to turn away from the dryness of book lore and knock a banjo silly. Yes, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith is nicely like folks.—I. E. Avery in Charlotte Observer.

The Schubert Quartet.

The Schubert String Quartette, of Boston, appeared in Gerrard Hall last Wednesday night for the benefit of the Musical Club. The crowd out was very small and as a result the latter organization came out badly behind. The Quartette was composed of Messrs. Walter E. Land, violin; H. Faxon Graves, violin; Edward J. Schiller, viola; and Frederick Blair, violincello. These musicians are all artists and their renderings were first class. It is a matter of regret that our students do not appreciate good music more and it is hoped that the next time this company appears it may have a larger house.

There is, however, each year in our foot ball history one game which means as much if not more to Virginia than all the rest, and that is the Thanksgiving Day contest with our friends from Chapel Hill. They have, it is true, suffered a number of defeats at the hands of Virginia but they have on several occasions overthrown our calculations and turned the trick on us and have always proved foemen worthy of our steel.

We are not believers in overconfidence and while we look for victory at Richmond next week, yet we would see nothing left undone to make it certain. To this end, then, rooting is necessary. Good, hard, systematic Virginia rooting.—College Topics, Nov. 21st.

It is customary to omit the publication of THE TAR HEEL the week before the Thanksgiving game but we decided to come out this time as a sort of foot ball extra and to print several things heretofore forced out. THE TAR HEEL will be issued as soon after the Virginia game as possible.

Thursday we go to Richmond for the game of the season; the game most talked of and looked forward to, during the foot ball season. All other contests are looked upon but as preparation for this and it is this game that decides whether the season shall be called a success or a failure. If we lose it will be the last straw on the already oppressive load of defeats; if we win, it will be a glorious ending to a season that once looked gloomy and forbidding for the White and Blue—it will be the sunlight bursting out above the lowering clouds and rendered all the more brilliant by contrast.

The Virginians are reported to be absolutely confident. Though they have learned to look for surprises from Carolina, their tie with Carlisle Saturday after the Indians had piled it up on Georgetown and Pennsylvania, has caused them to look forward to the Carolina game as a star resplendent of victory that shall shine on a wreath of laurels already won. Though they caught the Indians on the down grade Saturday, as they did last year, the game showed that they have a great team and one that Carolina must do her best to defeat. It is pretty certain that the boys in Blue and Orange are vastly puffed up over this Carlisle game and a little stubborn opposition on Carolina's part would be unexpected and somewhat discouraging and thus give the White and Blue the chance they will be looking for. Then let them go in and win.

As the team leaves this time on its last trip for the season, let its members remember that they are the representatives of their Alma Mater; that the eyes of the Southern foot ball world are centred upon the Richmond gridiron and what happens there will become history to be talked about in later years. Let them remember that they carry with them the hearts of all lovers of the White and Blue and of all loyal Tar Heels everywhere. Let them remember that whatever happens elsewhere, that in Virginia they have the reputation of being fighters to the last inch. We have a great deal of confidence in each individual member and in the man who has coached them and we deem these few words sufficient.

To the student body, also we have a few words to say. The rooting during the Clemson game, the only big game we have had on the Hill in several years, was pitiful. Only a few spasmodic yells here and there and an occasional song that dwindled off weakly at the end served to break the monotony. It is a matter of history now how Carolina's rooters drowned out those of Virginia last year but some new life must come in if they wish their voices heard this time. Virginia is making great preparations for rooting during the coming game. Leaders for the cheering have been chosen and they intend laying Carolinians back in the shade. If our rooters intend that this shall not be, they must get together and keep together during the game and the noise they make cannot fail to have some effect on the way the game goes.

Let everybody go to Richmond and let everybody root.

We acknowledge receipt of the first number of "The Binghamite," official organ of the General Athletic Association, Bingham School, Mebane, N. C. It is a bright, newsy little sheet, and we congratulate the editors on their initial venture into college journalism.

CLIPPINGS.

Items Which will Probably be of Interest to our Readers.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 19.—The recognized representative here of the University of Virginia team gave out a statement today, declaring that the North Carolina team was the heavier, and that Virginia was fearful of the result. He puts the combined weight of Virginia at 1,970 and that of Carolina at 2,051. He says further: "While the Virginians are stronger this year than last they believe that Carolina also is stronger, and refuse to be beguiled into thinking that the Tar Heels are weak. Carolina has a veteran team returned from last year and has lost only two men, while Virginia has lost four." The entire statement was declared by a foot ball authority here tonight to emanate from the University of Virginia, and intended solely to influence betting.—Charlotte Observer.

Carolina's showing has been of such erratic nature this season that any forecast seems lost in the sea of doubt. Virginia won from V. P. I. 21 to 0, which team in turn defeated Carolina by the same score. Carolina then rallied and won from Clemson and if their squad rounds into good condition the White and Blue may hold Virginia close, but Virginia should win easily with at least three touch downs to spare.—Atlanta Journal.

There is a story about an old broke and broken-down sport who had a passion for racing, and who had contrived to hold on to a stable of old broken-down ribs of race horses which somebody said were so feeble that couldn't even beat one another. These North Carolina foot ball teams might see if they can beat one another.—Charlotte Observer.

Virginia's line is composed nearly altogether of men who learned the game farther South. Davidson, Clemson and Auburn are all represented—Red and Black.

Yes, but the men who really do the work for them are Tar Heels from U. N. C.

It is said there's a balm for a lover crossed,
Or a candidate defeated;
But the only balm for a ball-game lost
Is to swear the referee cheated.—Ex.

In a place called Chapel Hill,
In a place called Chapel Hill,
The score to them will surely be.

An awful bitter pill,
It seems a sin
They never win,
And that's a very good sign
There'll always be a few sad hearts
In the land of Turpentine.

College Topics.

Last Saturday's scores came as quite a surprise to the Southern foot ball world. That Georgetown should beat Carolina 33 to 0, was as unthought of as that Virginia should score 21 points against V. P. I. Georgetown again demonstrates her ability by defeating the Naval Academy 12 to 5; a score which seems to indicate, when taken in connection with the Va.-Navy score of 5 to 6, that Georgetown and Virginia have teams in a class by themselves and far superior in the South. Virginia should defeat North Carolina, judging from the scores to date, and yet the Tar Heels are always slow in developing a team, but never fail to have one on Thanksgiving Day which is able to give a good account of itself. Virginia's teams develop more rapidly for the reason that she plays more important games, and while North Carolina is playing the smaller colleges practice games, Virginia is defending the title of State champion against such teams as Blacksburg, V. M. I., Washington and Lee and others, and also playing teams in the class with the Naval Academy and the Indians.—College Topics, Oct. 31.

University Sermon.

The University sermon for October was preached Sunday night by Rev. Dr. H. W. Battle, of Greensboro. Dr. Battle is a splendid preacher and he interested his audience. His subject was, "Men with visions." The text was from Acts 26:19: "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."

He began by saying that the greatest gift of God to man is a great man. Each epoch of history has had at its centre a man. These great men have not been all of life, but they have chiefly directed its events.

Dr. Battle spoke of Abraham, Isaiah and others as men with visions who stayed the tides of human nature at critical times. Paul, he said, stayed the drift of humanity and saved doctrinal Christianity to the world. He was of noble ancestry, and accustomed to polite society. He was always conscious of his ability to adapt himself to his situation. Such was the man selected by the divine Founder at the needed time. The religion of today needs men with intellect and individuality; men who have had unusual opportunities for culture should consecrate their lives to Him who endowed them with such.

Paul had strength of conviction. His human vision showed him a power that would humiliate the great Roman empire and restore Jewish authority; but when the vision of God flashed upon him, his character was melted and fused into the greatest man perhaps since Christ. We need such men today, men who have visions of purpose to die for.

The greatest thing a man can do is to find, take and keep the place God has made him for. Paul never regretted giving his life to the service of Christ. Call him mad, crazy or what you will, but he will live, gathering power and splendor as the ages roll on. He was blessed in time and is blessed in eternity. The religion of Jesus Christ develops all that is good and great in man. Young man, "the Master cometh and calleth for thee."

It is said that North Carolina has little hope to win from Virginia this year at Richmond. Bets are now made that Virginia will not defeat the Tar Heels by 20 points. The odds as to a victory are all the way from 3 to 5 to 1 on Virginia. The magnificent game with the Indians on Saturday has given Charlottesville's stock a big boom. Before the game the betting was 3 to 1 on Carlisle to win.—Columbia State.

Randolph prevented several touch downs by heavy tackling at the eleventh hour.—College Topics. New way of tackling.

LOCAL NOTES.

Miss Frances McRae, daughter of the dean of the Law School, was married Tuesday morning to Mr. John C. Lamb, of Williamston, at the Episcopalian church in this place. Particular will be given next week.

The King's Daughters will hold their annual Bazaar Friday, Dec. 4th, 1903, next door to Hearndon's, from 3:30 to 10 P. M. The public is invited.

THE TAR HEEL, the weekly paper issued by the University of North Carolina, is probably the best college paper in the State. It comes out weekly, and in it we find many things interesting to all who keep up with school life. THE TAR HEEL is ably edited, and we congratulate the Athletic Association of our State University of which this paper is the organ.—Oak Leaf.

Many thanks.

Their name is on the lips of every one in town;
You hear about them every day, you've heard their name no doubt,
For every time they play a game, folks get an extra out.

CHORUS.

For Carolina, for Carolina,
They're the greatest team Virginia ever saw,
For Carolina, for Carolina,
Hah, Hurrah, Hurrah Hurrah, Hurrah!

II.

Our boys never will forget, we never will
The way we're going to beat the team that came from Charlottesville.
Although they got some credit for a fierce and hard fought fray,
The men who deserve it all: the team who won the day.

CHORUS.

Were for Carolina, for Carolina.
III.
Virginia had a team of strong and healthy men,
She sent them up to Richmond and then sent them home again;
When they were up, why they were up, on that I'll bet a crown,
That though Virginia sent them up, Carolina took them down.

This was the reply:

Alumni Get Behind the Team.

A large number of Charlotte men who are University alumni and had about decided to go to Richmond Thanksgiving day to see the game between the University of North Carolina and the University of Virginia, will probably stay at home. There was much interest here in the game between the University team and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute eleven yesterday, and when the score of 21 to 0, in favor of the Virginians was bulletined there was a good deal of ejaculatory whistling and disappointment. When Carolina has a chance to win there is a good deal of amusement in attending the annual foot ball game but no man from this State who is interested in the University cares to be very close to the victors or the vanquished when the Virginians defeat the Carolinians. 'Tis a most dismal experience.—Charlotte Observer, Nov. 8th.

VIRGINIA BEATEN

Blue and Orange No Match for the Tar Heels.

Carolina Springs a Surprise and Wins a Magnificent Victory—Team Work of the White and Blue Eleven a Feature—Both Teams Great on the Offensive—The Game Given in Detail.

Thanksgiving Day dawned clear and cold, as they say in the story-books, and about the streets of Richmond, Va., there was a tension in Virginians mingled with the sharp, staccato "Yackety-Yack" of the hopeful North Carolinians.

The two teams came out one after the other, the Virginians looking easy and confident, the Carolinians quiet and resolute. Their appearance was greeted with wild yells and cheers from the supporters of both teams and there was a mad rush for cars to the park.

The people streamed in at the gates by the hundreds and by the thousands. They filled all four sides of the field and saw the game from tops of houses and neighboring box-cars. All kinds of vehicles poured in at the large gate, the most of them decorated in flaunting orange and blue. Occasionally a tally-ho would arrive, covered with the beloved white and blue which brought forth a riotous storm of cheers from Tar Heel rooters. Says the Times-Dispatch:

"A more magnificent musicastic crowd was never assembled within the gates of Broad Street Park, and never were the colors of the old rivals so evenly divided in popularity and in display as yesterday. The grand stand and the uncovered stand were swaying billows of bedecked humanity, in which fair women, the flower of the two states, were liberally and brilliantly represented. Many notable men were present as spectators but notables were obscured for the nonce. No one had glances for aught save the field on which the gladiators were struggling in such stubborn battle.

"No matter how great the emergency, how supreme the necessity the Virginia boys just could not stop the Carolina rushes and run. A few notable exceptions sufficed to show what the team had been capable of, for now and then a Virginian would break through and throw the blue and white runner for a loss; but these occasions were too rare to figure in the result. A moment later the Carolinians with superb strength and dash would make up the lost ground. Five substitutions made in the Virginia line to one in that of the Carolinians show how much greater was the fitness of the men from Carolina for the fierce, hard, gruelling struggle. The victory of Carolina was fairly earned and well deserved. The team won on its merits because it played better foot-ball than did Virginia. Whether Virginia has played or can play better ball than the miserably feeble exhibition of yesterday, is quite another question and does not alter the fact. On the other hand Carolina played a steady, cool, consistent game at all times; was more careful and much surer in handling the ball, outpointed Virginia every time and was able to make gains in almost every attempt. Her backs circled Virginia's right end several times for good gains, and finding the spot vulnerable frequently tried it. Her three heavy backs and pair of tackles were hard line-hitters and generally gained their distance whenever they were in danger of being held for downs. Whatever may be said in extenuation of Virginia's disappointing appearance, still it must be said that the Carolinians played steady, consistent, straight foot-ball, and won the game on their merits. They were in perfect condition for the game, played with coolness and with fine team work, were vigilant in seizing opportunities and while there was little brilliant or sensational playing there was some that could almost be called brilliant."

After the third touchdown, Jacocks kicked clean to Virginia's goal-line and the Virginians braced and made a last despairing rally, making good gains, but lost on a fumble. After two big gains by Newton and Berkeley, time was called and then all hearing was lost in one mighty yell of joy that went up from Carolina cohorts, for Carolina—old North Carolina—had won the game and Virginia had been shut out! The Tar Heel rooters rushed upon the field, seized the gallant warriors in white and blue, and lifted them upon their shoulders high into the air, while the frenzied multitude of rooters danced and howled around them and made the air shake with mighty "Yackety-Yacks" and "Boom-rah-rays" in honor of their beloved University.

Thus was Virginia defeated, and the sun went down in a red, indulgent smile upon the multitude of joyful, exultant Tar Heels who yelled and whooped, threw their white and blue ribbon high into the air and cheered themselves hoarse as they watched the score put up in huge figures in different parts of the town—Carolina, 16; Virginia, 0.

The following detailed account is taken from the Richmond Times-Dispatch. It gives the Virginia side of it, of course, but it is clear and readable, and we print it for that reason:

It was a few minutes after two when the officials of the game and Captains Johnson and Jones met in the center of the field and tossed the coin for choice of goals or opening play. Virginia won the toss and chose to kick off. Carolina was spread over the territory in front of the west goal, and the Virginians lined up along the up against the pride of Virginia in their blue and orange. The streets were crowded with handsome women and well-dressed men, some displaying long streamers of orange and blue ribbon, others proudly wearing the white and blue so dear to every Tar Heel's heart. Around the hotels all was riot and confusion, for the time had arrived for the two teams to enter their carriages and depart for the gridiron. Swirling, seething streams of college men whirled in and out of the doors, around the corridors, back and forth across the streets. The sonorous "Wah-hoo-wah" of the confident center line. The whistle blew, and Elmer sent the ball spinning to Foust on Carolina's eighteen yard line, and he ran the ball back fifteen yards before he was thrown. On the first line up Mann was given the ball, and circled the Virginia end for eight yards before he was thrown. The next attempt in the line netted no gain. With the ball on Carolina's forty yard line, it was passed to Roberson, who plunged five yards. Virginia was too anxious and was penalized ten yards for holding. With the ball on Carolina's fifty yard line, Elmer broke

If one wishes to enjoy this great victory thoroughly, let him get out last week's issue of THE TAR HEEL and read the clippings from various papers containing predictions as to the result of the Thanksgiving game. The exultant feeling arising therefrom is enough to make every true Tar Heel get up and give a "Yackety-Yack" all by himself.

The victory last Thursday was a magnificent thing. We can't find words to express ourselves and our pride in our plucky eleven. Indians or no Indians, fumbles or no fumbles, Carolina's great team won this victory—won it fairly, won it squarely, won it on its merits as a team. With disastrous defeats behind them, with a team in front which athletic critics were already ranking with the great elevens of the North, with what seemed certain defeat staring them in the face, Carolina's valiant sons went into the game with undaunted spirits and inflicted on the proud Virginians the most signal defeat they have suffered in years. Such an overwhelming score was of course, not looked for, not even hoped for; but every one knew that this was the same team that played Virginia 12 to 12 last year and every one knew that the team, in spite of bitter reverses, was composed of gritty men and were able to spring surprises.

Well, the first surprise came in two minutes, when Carolina fell on the ball for a touch-down, and after that it was perfectly evident to all—and painfully evident to those looking for a Virginia walk-over—that Carolina had the better team. The Tar Heels simply played better ball; that is the whole story.

Of course, excuses are in order and a plaintive tale of woe about the Carlisle Indians arose soon after the game. Well, a mistake made twice in succession is not condoned by anybody. Virginia played the Indians four days before the Carolina game last year, and as they used this as an excuse for that 12 to 12 score last year, what did they want to go and make the same mistake for?

In 1900 Georgetown beat Virginia 10 to 0. Virginia then beat Carolina 17 to 0. Four days after this defeat, Carolina played Georgetown 0 to 0. Why couldn't Virginia do likewise this time? The Carlisle game very probably explains the weakness of Virginia's defense but it cannot account for the great superiority of Carolina in every department of the game. The gallant Tar Heels won their victory honestly and their glory cannot be detracted from. All honor and glory to them. May their names go down in our athletic history as men who never gave up.

In conclusion, we wish to say that we have nothing but admiration for the way in which our old rivals conducted themselves on this occasion. They fought fairly, they accepted their heavy penalties without a murmur, they took their unlooked-for defeat quietly and manfully. Finally, we hope that the pleasant feeling existing between the two universities may continue indefinitely and may the Virginians continue to play the Carlisle Indians four days before the Carolina game for many years to come. Peace to their ashes!

We would like to quote the editorial which came out in College Topics the day before the game but Topics always speaks of us so fairly, that we will refrain and not rub it in too much. We would like to ask one question, however: Is Carolina now entitled to membership in that class you made some-time ago with only Virginia and Georgetown as members?

For four of the cuts in this issue we are indebted to THE VIRGINIAN-PILOT, who kindly lent them to us with expressions of good will. We wish we could print a cut of every man on the team but it was impossible to get them all on time. We assure those left out that they fully deserve a place on our pages and it was through no fault of theirs that they were left out.

Virginia Beaten.

through and threw Newton for a loss, amid Virginia cheers. The next plunge netted two yards, and, with three to go, Jacocks punted to Pollard on Virginia's forty yard line.

Then Virginia started in with the stride that has marked all her games this season until yesterday. Watkins hit the Blue and White line for three yards; Wall found a hole for four yards, and on the next try advanced the ball ten yards. It was lost, however, for Virginia was again penalized ten yards, and, with the ball near his own forty yard line, Watkins dropped back for a punt.

FIRST TOUCHDOWN.

The pass was a bad one, and

Watkins missed it completely, and it bounded toward its own goal. Donnelly, the Carolina left tackle, and the Carolina ends were upon the full back, and as he failed to fall on the ball it bounded nearer to the goal line. In the scramble the ball seemed to be greased, and in a series of attempts to gain possession of it the ball was rolled and rushed over Virginia's line, and Donnelly fell on it. It was a touchdown and five points for Carolina; first blood as it were. The Carolina players were undisguisedly jubilant. It was a delightful surprise, for at that time they had not tried and did not know Virginia's strength or weakness. The ball was brought out for a trial at goal, but it was a poor attempt, ending in utter failure. This somewhat appeased the Virginians, but not wholly.

Then Virginia went to defend the east goal and Carolina the west, and Watkins kicked off to Foust on his twenty-five yard line, the wind being against him. He ran the ball back ten yards before being thrown. Mann hit the line for two yards, and in another try circled Virginia's left end for a similar gain. Newton then added two yards, making first down. A fumble followed, but

ALBERT OOX.

Carolina luckily regained the ball. The next instant Virginia incurred a ten-yard penalty for off-side play and the ball was near the center of the field. Newton got around Zinn's end for twenty-one yards, and the ball was on Virginia's forty-three yard line. After another first down had been made Virginia took a brace and Council broke through and threw Mann for a loss.

A PUSHING MATCH.

On the next play a pushing match developed, in which the Virginians pushed the Carolina runner back ten yards, amid wild enthusiasm on the part of their supporters. Forced punt, Jacocks had his kick blocked, but the ball fell between the contending lines, and a Carolinian fell on it on Virginia's fifty-one yard line. Newton got around Virginia's right end for fifteen yards, and the ball was on Virginia's thirty-seven yard line. On the next play a Virginia man broke through and downed Mann for a loss. Mann was slightly hurt, but soon resumed. Newton then tried the Virginia right end for eight yards, and with the ball near Virginia's thirty yard line Jacocks made a beautiful drop kick for goal. The wind was with him and the ball sailed over the bars high above it mid wild applause. The goal was disallowed, however, Carolina not having the requisite number in line. It was still Carolina's ball.

JOHN DONNELLY.

Conner broke through on the next play and threw Mann hard. The same runner, however, made five yards through left tackle on the next try. Newton added two yards, and a moment's delay was caused by the injury of Elmer, who soon resumed play. The ball was on Virginia's forty yard line. The next play resulted in a fumble, but Carolina regained the ball without losing ground. Mann made three yards and a first down, and then Newton, by hurdling the Virginia line, went twelve yards, dragging men with him. This brought the ball close to Virginia's twenty yard line.

Five yards were made on a dash into the line, and then Virginia was offside and lost five yards more. Newton worked the fake kick for eight yards, and then got away with a twenty-yard run on a quarter back play, which was disallowed, the ball being outside the twenty-five yard line. Carolina was penalized twenty yards for the play, taking the ball nearly to the center of the field. Carolina then made ten yards through right tackle, and Mann added three more, bringing the ball to Virginia's forty-yard line. Roberson, Mann and Newton made gains of four, two and six yards, and then Virginia yielded five more on a penalty.

Then luck broke Virginia's way, and she got the ball on a fumble on her eighteen yard line. Council made five yards and the other tackle duplicated the feat. Then Council hit the line for eight yards; Wall for eight more, and Watkins for three, and then Virginia got a ten-yard penalty. With about eight yards to go, Pollard made three, and then Watkins dropped back and punted to the center of field. Here the half ended with a score of 5 to 0 in Carolina's favor. THE SECOND HALF.

After a brief rest and consultation with the coaches, Jacocks kicked off to Watkins on his five yard line, and he ran the ball back fifteen yards. Captain Johnson hit the line for eight yards; Randolph for two and Johnson for three, and the ball was on Virginia's twenty-six yard line. Fisher, the Carolina end, was disabled and gave way to Townsend. Then Captain Johnson, on a tackle play, plunged through for nine yards. Virginia was now playing desperately and irresistibly. Randolph got through for a beautiful twenty yard sprint and the ball was in Carolina territory. The same player then added twelve yards more and Bass two yards. Council, in a tackles back formation, broke through for four yards and Johnson added two more by hurdling the line. Randolph made it a first down and Wall tore off three yards more, landing the ball on Carolina's twenty yard line. Council could get but two yards, but made it first down on Carolina's seventeen yard line. And that was as near as Virginia ever came to scoring; the end of her gamest rally. On the next play the ball was fumbled and Carolina got it on her twelve yard line, whither it rolled. Virginia's great rush had ended, and ended miserably, with a touchdown in sight.

Carolina had the ball and Newton broke through for five yards and Foust for two more. Roberson got away with six and Newton's seven landed the ball on Carolina's thirty-seven yard mark. The next two downs landed the ball on the forty-two yard line. Newton was hurt, but soon resumed. On the next play Randolph broke through and tackled Jacocks for a loss of eight yards. Newton made it up, however, by a ten yard dash around Virginia's right. Failing to gain on the next three downs, Jacocks punted from the thirty-eight yard line to Virginia's three yard line. The ball the line. Spates was fagged out and McColl replaced him. Two yards were made on the next down and with two feet to go, Virginia spoiled her chance to get the ball by offside play. With the ball on their five yard line, it was but a moment's work to carry it over, Newton making the touchdown. Stewart landed an easy goal. Score: Virginia, 0; Carolina, 11.

At this point Council played out and White was sent in. Carolina kicked to Pollard on his five yard line and he ran it back 18 yards. Bass gained 3 yards and was then thrown for a loss. Watkins muffed the punt and was thrown on his 20 yard line. It was Carolina's ball on downs. The Carolina backs and tackles then alternately hit the line for 3 and 4 yards, Foust making the latter gain. Mann added 3 and Roberson 2. It was a first down on Virginia's 5 yard line.

Newton and Roberson carried it to half a yard of the goal and Newton plunged over for the last score. The try at goal was a failure. Score: Carolina, 16; Virginia, 0.

After that Virginia made another rally; but sacrificed all she had gained by penalties; and finally after Pollard had made some fine gains, lost the ball on a fumble in the center of the field just as the whistle blew.

A Ballade of Victory.

Loud swell the shouts and clangs the bell,
And in that sound what feelings mix—
The Tar Heels paean but the knell
That tolls Virginia o'er the Styx!
The luckless Freshman roars and kicks,
The gleaming bon-fire leaps in view;
The hoarse mob roars like lunatics—
"Victory to the White and Blue!"
With thundering drum and furious yell,
Our rooters hailed the Tar Heel bricks
As forth they rushed to break and quell
Virginia's pride—her team transfix.
Alas, what grief that team afflicts
Instead of palms to wear the rue!
Her flaunting flag the low dust licks:
"Victory to the White and Blue!"

Old Richmond town ere long shall tell
How on November 26
The Tar Heels gave Virginia h—
And showed her proud eleven some tricks.
Your boasting's o'er, poor derelicts,
And bitter is the pang to you
That our exultant shout inflicts—
"Victory to the White and Blue!"

ENVOI.

Hail Carolina! Hail Victrix!
All honor to your team is due.
Mid blazing stars your name we fix:
Victory to the White and Blue!

After the celebration Friday night, the Varsity and scrub teams were escorted to Pickard's Hotel to the banquet given to them complimentary by Dughi, of Raleigh. The spread was unusually nice and was greatly enjoyed by the two teams. Each man was served a block of ice cream with the score in blue cream frozen in it. There was a large number of courses, and were served in Mr. Dughi's characteristic style which the public knows so well. While the banquet was on the manager read telegrams of congratulation from alumni clubs and from numerous colleges and universities.

was fumbled but regained. Virginia found the Carolina line hard and punted out of danger. Watkins kicking out of bounds at the Virginia thirty yard line.

ANOTHER TOUCHDOWN.

Randolph got the ball after it had been declared down and created a diversion by running the length of the field for an apparent touchdown, but it was not allowed and the ball was brought back, and Carolina's on the Virginia five yard line. Then Newton through for five yards. The ball was ripped through

Around the Gridiron at Richmond.

Says Foust to Council, "You've been a good wagon, old boy; but you've done broke down."

Poor Bo was heard to remark during the game: "I wish it to be distinctly understood that I am from the University of North Carolina. I am a Tar Heel." Here Poor Bo's feelings gave way beneath his feet at the very thought of it, and he sat down and shed tears of gratitude.

Says Wheze: "I teks back all dat I eber said 'bout Mistah Newton. He's er gem'man an' er scollard. I knowed dat after de Clemson game dat we wuz gwineter heah f'um 'im agin. Lawd, man, j' see 'im huddle dat man Pollard? Yessah, huddled him."

"But after all," said a large gent with fiery head and nose of the same hue, the main fac' is Carolina! Carolina! Carolina!!! 'Schuze me, ol' man; I didn't mean to scare you. C-come have somethin' with me."

"Is Jacocks any kin to DeWitt?" inquired a man with blue and orange colors. "No, not exactly," replied Fowle, "but he used to help coach him."

A Richmond paper stated that Carolina's substitutes were Ramsey, Carr, Staton, Engle, F. Cox, Moore, Rountree.

A reporter to Foust, "Sir, what is your name?"

Foust—"My name is Donnelly, but I just want you to watch that man Foust play ball to-day."

A Virginia admirer of Carolina to Pharr, "I want you to point out those men who are ripping up Virginia's line so much."

Pharr, "There, did you see that man hurdle Pollard? That is Newton. One man is not in his way; it takes from two men to a whole team to stop him."

Before and After Taking.

It is not expected that the usually large number of University alumni in this city will go to Richmond to see the big foot ball game Thanksgiving Day. The University eleven may defeat the University of Virginia, for Carolinians have a surprising fashion of developing unexpected strength at the last crucial moment, but from this distance, dismal as the forecast may sound, it doesn't look as if the home team had one chance in 50 to win. The betting, they say, is merely as to the amount of Virginia's score. What a game for Carolina to win! What a glorious opportunity for eleven men to win immortality! Talk of Leonidas would be forgotten.—Charlotte Observer, Nov. 23.

It will be exceedingly gratifying to all good Tar Heels to know that in the encounter yesterday afternoon on the Richmond field between the ancient enemies, North Carolina defeated Virginia in one of the fiercest football games of the season. The Observer gives its compliments and accords all praise to the University of North Carolina boys. It had about despaired of their doing anything to their credit, but lo! they close the foot ball season with one of its most signal triumphs. They must feel very proud of themselves this morning, as all of their fellow citizens feel proud of them. They have atoned for all previous defeats and covered themselves with glory.—Charlotte Observer, Nov. 26.

Another Precinct Heard From and More to Follow.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 26.—With the defeat of the University of Virginia by the University of North Carolina today, the Kentucky University claims the championship of the South. Kentucky University suffered its only defeat from Virginia, by a score of 6 to 0, and defeated North Carolina, 6 to 5.

Was This a Premonition?

Experience teaches many things and especially that comparative scores don't count when the Tar Heels go in to win.—College Topics, Nov. 25th.

The Annual Inter-Society Debate is Won by the Representatives of the Phi Society

The annual Junior-Sophomore debate between the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Societies took place in Gerrard Hall on the night of November 25th. The query was as follows: "Resolved, That the Railroads in the United States Should be Owned and Operated by the Federal Government." The representatives of the societies were Messrs. C. J. Hendley, '05, and W. B. Love, '06, of the Dialectic, and E. A. Daniel, '05, and S. T. Stancell, '06, of the Philanthropic. W. W. Eagles, '04, presided and B. H. Perry, '06, was secretary. After an interesting debate the committee, composed of Drs. Smith and Alexander and Prof. Gore, finally decided in favor of the Philanthropic.

Mr. Love argued as follows: "It is a function of government to develop the people's interests in the way that will give the best results. Since the railroads are a part of such interests, it is a function of government to develop them. Private control has not given the best results. It is tending to concentrate the wealth into the hands of the few. Smaller institutions are being destroyed. Government regulation has been ineffective, and has allowed great discriminations. Since they have been entrusted to private control, it must have a tendency to foster the present evils. A change in ownership would change the manner of control. Their influence in politics is too great and is increasing. National ownership would relieve this position."

Mr. Hendley's argument was as follows: "The government would be successful in its own exercise of its function to provide adequate railroad transportation. Sufficient proof of this are the facts: that the government would make stable railroad capital and reduce the fixed charges on it, would have the advantage of economies amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, and would inaugurate non-partisan management of the railroads, and that other governments have been successful with this policy. And this policy would certainly promote the general welfare of the country; because it would eliminate the present evils resulting from the present policy."

Mr. Stancell's argument ran as follows: "It is not a function of government to own and operate the railroads, because they cannot be best managed and controlled by political forces. Our government is essentially a political compact to protect private rights, to maintain equitable conditions in all pursuits, and to promote the general welfare. The railroad problem is an industrial problem and must be owned and operated by the business world. "The policy, if adopted, would be a source of political corruption.

No two sections of our country are alike, hence no one railroad policy that the Federal government or any political party could devise would meet the requirements of the various sections.

"It would weaken the efficiency of management. Each railway has an industrial bureau whose business it is to look into the interests of the various sections through which it passes. They advertise our railroad resources and help to develop new sections. Our system has its source not in the social or political world. Spurred on by American genius and American invention and business talent it has won the admiration of the world."

Mr. Daniel for the negative spoke as follows: "Our ground of contention is: Do unavoidable abuses arise in the railroad system under private ownership? I purpose, first, to show that the present system is effective, and second, that government ownership would not cure existing evils, but new evils would be added. In the past the government has performed its function by regulating, and has left the individual to perform his function by owning and operating. Has the individual performed his function? Under private enterprise, we have developed a railroad system almost perfect in its operation, well deserving the name of American system. The government couldn't give as cheap rates of transportation as the individual without running at a great loss, a thing it couldn't possibly afford to do. Discriminations arise in three ways: personal, local and class discriminations. As to personal discrimination, law prevents. As to local and class discrimination, we see the same principle demonstrated in every phase of our industrial life; we see it in the postal system, first, second and third class mails. Thus in putting the railroads in the hands of the government, you merely inflame the spark you would quench. Evils would arise under government ownership unknown to private enterprise. Our Federal constitution prevents an individual from suing the government. Again, if the government has the right to own and operate the railroads, where is the end, and where is the limitation to government ownership? With one bound we leap into paternalism."

Need of Southern Colleges.

Work will soon be begun on the gymnasium at the University of North Carolina for which Judge Bynum, of Charlotte recently gave $25,000. This sum will supply a handsome and modern affair with first-class equipments. It is a great pity that all our Southern colleges have not thoroughly equipped gymnasiums and it is encouraging to know that such a liberal donation has been made for this purpose in North Carolina.—Columbia State.

Meeting of Philological Club.

The Philological Club met and held its monthly meeting in alumni building Tuesday evening.

Dr. Hume presented a paper on "Some Characteristics of Wycliff's Version of the Bible." The introduction sketched the life and character of Wycliff, scholar and organizer of a great religious movement. His was the first complete Bible in English, and it prepared the way for Tyndale's and many successive versions down to our King James Bible. Striking selections from Wycliff were read and commented on. The vocabulary was noted, with its direct borrowings and imitations of the Latin Vulgate, which was its direct source and model, and the numerous French derivatives in several chapters were presented. The ecclesiastical and theological dialect which had been growing up was defined and added to by this version. The coloring of the social life of the England of this day was imparted to many passages. Some interesting words are now obsolete. Many others are used now in a different sense. The felicitous phrasing which charms the ear and the soul in our great version is in numerous passages transmitted to us from Wycliff. Purney's Revised Version improved his diction and his syntax here and there. It is well that we have escaped some of his Latin-like participial constructions. His quaint marginal glosses on Ecclesiastes, 12, are often touched with an over strained allegory. Men lived by and died for this great Bible, and the author's personality and work have quickened all our thought and life.

The next paper was by Dr. Smith on the subject: "Is it True That 'Where form remains Anywhere Function Remains Everywhere?'" Dr. Smith took the dictum of Professor Gildersleeve quoted above and subjected it to the test of usage in several languages, particularly Latin, French, and English. In other languages he found the usage to agree with Professor Gildersleeve's dictum, while in English a number of examples were quoted in which a single noun was used in a sentence, performing the functions of both nominative and objective.

Form remains in English pronouns, but in function an English noun may be in two cases.

The Gymnasium.

The condition of our gymnasium is miserable. Since a new one has been donated, no effort has been made to repair breakages in the one we have. The new one cannot be finished before next year. Until then the present one has to be used, and should be kept properly. At present nearly all the most useful apparatus is out of order. Only two of the chest weights can be used; the basket ball courts need rings and nets; there are not enough dumb bells or Indian clubs for large class drills; one of the parallel bars is broken and cannot be used; other troubles are as bad.

No effort whatever is made to remedy these things. To do so would require but a slight expense. We realize that the University treasury is not over-stocked, but we do believe the gymnasium fee paid on registration should be so applied as to furnish the best gymnasium possible. That this is not done, is shown by the fact that the present troubles have not always existed. Will the proper authorities please give the gymnasium some attention?

Dr. Smith in Fayetteville.

Dr. Smith lectured in Fayetteville last Saturday evening on Italy. The lecture was given at the request of the Book Clubs of Fayetteville, one of which is making a detailed study of Italian history and art. The Wilmington Messenger of December 2d refers to the lecture as follows:

"The writer has had the good fortune to attend series of lectures at Chataqua meetings through the country, but has never been so charmed, so delighted, and so instructed as by the lecture on Italy by Dr. Smith of the University of North Carolina. It was in faultless literary taste, with easy, graceful delivery, and of oratorical effort not a trace. But there was the true eloquence in the expression of ripe ideas and rich ideas and rich thought, with the simple classic diction of choice English.

It was a flawless gem sparkling in its own lustre, without garnish setting and ornamentation, and the auditors carried home little treasures of valuable information for future use.

The Observer has received from a student at the State University a rather unique letter, which reads, in part, as follows: "I noticed in your columns of Friday that you had received photographs of Miss Madeline Besley, of 'The Mocking Bird,' scheduled to play in this region Tuesday evening. Could you oblige a poor college chap with one of those photos? I am rather a late arrival and desire to furnish my cage * * * ." The extract from the letter is amusing and yet there is something about it that touches a responsive chord. If Miss Besley doesn't object, the young man shall have a photograph of her for his cage; even if he should be a terrible, gay Lothario, who may turn from the photograph on his mantel to say sorrowfully to his mates: "Alas, poor girl. I fear I was not as kind to her as I might have been. But then, women are such foolish, tender-hearted creatures. How she did love me, to be sure!"—Charlotte Observer.

At a meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society at Raleigh last week, Dr. A. S. Wheeler was elected President of the society.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Monday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

With this issue THE TAR HEEL appears the last time before the Christmas holidays. The fall term is practically ended and from now on through the next ten days examinations will hold full sway and naught will be heard save the low, moaning sound issuing from class rooms as the luckless student engages in the unaccustomed labor of thinking.

Several things have happened during this term to make the heart of the loyal University man rejoice. Judge Bynum's magnificent gift of $25,000 for a gymnasium came at the right time and is highly appreciated. The total enrollment of students, including the medical department at Raleigh, is close to six hundred and those entering after the holidays will probably push the registration well up over that of last year. The movement to raise money for a Young Men's Christian Association Building has taken on a new impetus and the building is now an assured thing. This building cannot fail to have its influence on the religious life of the University as the new gymnasium will have on its physical life. In athletics we have done well; with an old rival beaten, the college is content. In many other ways the University has taken on new life. It is becoming more and more a factor in the upbuilding of the State. The large number of University graduates in the graded schools of the State is a significant fact.

Then, too, our faculty is becoming more and more known as being composed of men who are among the very best in their departments. They are constantly in demand for lectures and papers before various meetings and societies. The fact that four of our faculty are now presidents of different well known organizations shows that they are recognized as leaders. The University is growing steadily and surely. May its progress continue uninterrupted. Our parting word is, a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all.

Some of the matter we print this week has been crowded out heretofore and if any of it seems a little behind time, we beg the indulgence of our readers.

The October Magazine.

The October number of the University Magazine, the first issue of the year, is well up to the standard of former numbers. It shows that the new editors have gone into their work to make their publication a creditable one, and that they are the right men for the place.

The opening article is the oration of Mr. C. E. Maddry, which took the Mangum medal at the last commencement. In "The Duty of the South to the Country Boy," Mr. Maddrey makes an eloquent plea for rural education. He shows that as the South is an agricultural section, it must draw its strength from the country. To make this strength of the proper quality the rural population must be fitted for better citizenship. This can be done only by educating the country boy and girl. The distinction this oration received at Commencement, makes useless any further praise we might add.

"The Radio-Activity of Matter" is a discussion, by Dr. Davis, of the radio-activity of Uranium, Thorium, Polonium, Actinium and Radium. The greater part of the article was given to work done on Radium. The paper is an interesting one on a live subject, and contains much valuable information compressed into a small space.

In "Four Letters from Sonny Jones, Student" the author, Mr. R. M. Harper, gives four types of mind found in college. The letters of Sonny to his girl, Susianna, are in turn the effusions of the verdant hopeful Freshman, the sapient Sophomore, the doubting Junior, and the self important Senior.

"Yankee," by F. McLain, is a romance of a Union soldier and a young girl of the South. They meet in '65, when she is but a child and he a young trooper. In 1885 she finds him sick by the roadside and takes him into her home, where she identifies him by finding in his pocket a locket she had given him twenty years before. That the matrimonial knot was tied we can only infer.

The other articles are short anonymous ones. "The Two Hands of the Watch" is a quaint story translated from the German. "Good Bye" is a well handled dialogue, giving a summer love scene of a University student. "The Hypocrite" is an amusing storiette of child life. The title of "Do Walls Have Ears?" another summer love story, suggests the plot. All these shorter pieces are good, as storiettes go.

The Alumni Editor has collected information as to what the class of 1903 and the law class are doing. This is of interest to us all.

THE TAR HEEL congratulates its sister publication on this issue, and extends its best wishes for a good year.

We have no hesitation in placing our own team and Virginia's at the head of the list of Southern foot ball teams for this season—The Tech. (V. P. I.)

Well, for utter coolness and audacity this takes the cake. Virginia defeats V. P. I. 21 to 0; we defeat Virginia 16 to 0; and then we are given to understand that North Carolina has no place at the head of the list of Southern foot ball teams for this season." In other words, we are still not in the same class with Virginia and V. P. I. Words fail us. We have no further comment to make on the astonishing statement quoted above.

The faculty of the University of Michigan has expelled an upper classman for attending a fancy-dress party given by co-eds. He was dressed as a negro mammy. The co-ed who assisted him and smuggled him in was also expelled.

Professor (in Chemical Laboratory)—"Oh, Mr. McIntire, please scrape out this crucible for me."

(Junior) McIntyre—"Sorry, Professor, but I've a splinter under my finger nail."

Professor—"H'mm, must have been scratching your head, Mr. McIntire."—Red and White.

LOCAL NOTES.

Those men who have not made N. C. sweaters and who have the distinction of "making" the '03 champions were this week awarded their "N. C.'s." These men are Roberson, Seagle, Engle and Townsend.

The Historical society met and held its regular monthly meeting in the history room Monday night. Papers were read by Dr. Battle, Messrs. J. H. Winston, H. W. Littleton and N. J. Orr.

A pleasing event in the celebration of the victory over Virginia was a six o'clock dinner given the team Saturday evening by Prof. and Mrs. Gore. Besides the members of the team, there were present Dr. Venable, Manager Smith and the substitute players. This is a fitting expression of loyalty and hospitality on the part of Prof. and Mrs. Gore and one that is appreciated.

Nov. 28.

A Short Sketch of a Distinguished Alumnus.

Hon. Samuel Field Phillips, of Washington City, died there on the 18th of November last and was buried in the cemetery at Chapel Hill on the 21st. Rev. Dr. Ephraim Harding, of the Presbyterian church, officiated at the funeral. Dr. Harding delivered a most feeling discourse, prefacing it by the statement that his father and the father of the deceased were intimate friends and he himself had been privileged to be a friend of all the members of the family.

Mr. Phillips was born in Harlem, New York, on the 18th of February, 1825, but was brought to Chapel Hill when one year old, his father, Rev. Dr. James Phillips becoming Professor of Mathematics in the University. He graduated from this institution at the age of seventeen, in 1841, obtaining the first distinction with three others. He then studied law and settled in Chapel Hill, practicing in Orange and adjoining counties. He also taught the law classes as assistant to Judge Battle. He was sent to the Legislature as a Commoner (now Representative.) During the session he was Speaker of the House. He was Reporter of Supreme Court decisions and during the war was one of the Commissioners of Claims against the State, and later Auditor. In 1867 he removed to Raleigh and was associated at one time with Hon. A. S. Merriman and later with Hon. Richard H. Battle. He was offered by Governor Caldwell a Judgeship of the Supreme Court but declined it. He accepted, however, the nomination of his party, the Republican, for the Attorney Generalship, but failed of election because of the very unpopular movement of Governor Holden in declaring Alamance and Caswell in a state of insurrection and arresting prominent citizens by armed soldiers. He was then advanced to the distinguished office of Solicitor General of the United States and removed his family to the seat of the Government. He held this position from 1873 to 1885, and afterward opened a law office in Washington and did not retire from the law until two years before his death. He was a deeply learned lawyer and a most forcible speaker.

er. He had also a wide acquaintance with literature, ancient as well as modern. In recognition of this this University conferred on him the degree of L.L.D. in 1879.

Mr. Phillips had a deep fondness for his Alma Mater, and contributed liberally to its revival in 1875. He had an abiding love for the people among whom he spent his early years, and requested that his body be laid to rest "in the woods of Chapel Hill." It is impossible to find one more beloved and loving in his family or one who had warmer friends and admirers.

A dozen or more men gathered about The Observer's bulletin board yesterday afternoon just after the final returns from the football game in Richmond had been posted. Prof. Alexander Graham came along and moved up to see what was going on. He put on his glasses, and craned his neck over the backs of the crowd until he got a focus on the board. He was heard to say as if talking to himself: "North Carolina 16; Virginia 0." Then all at once the greatness of the thing that had come to pass dawned upon him "Whoopie!" he shouted, at the same time picking up the man in front of him by the shoulders and waving him in the air. "Whoopie!" Then Prof. Graham dropped the amazed man and walked on.

Many flags and hats were waved in North Carolina yesterday over the great football victory but perhaps in no other place in the State was a man picked up and waved in lieu of either hat or flag. The man was a big fellow and a stranger, and as he afterwards explained has a reputation as a college athlete. "But let me tell you," he said, "when that old chap gave his whoop right behind my ears and lifted me into the air, I thought of cyclones and tornadoes, the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds. I am somewhat of an enthusiast on football myself, but next time I line up at a bulletin board in Charlotte I will watch out for the Professor Graham of yours, and make room for him between myself and the man in front."—Charlotte Observer.

Another claimant for the Southern championship is Texas. She bases her claim on comparative scores and in their list in The Texan they put the score, North Carolina, 5; Clemson, 6. We would like to inform The Texan that this score should read North Carolina 11, Clemson 6.

The student body of Georgia Tech. recently requested six students to leave because they attended the Georgia-Auburn game on Thanksgiving Day, instead of the Tech-South Carolina game.

But the biggest surprise of the season was Carolina's crushing victory of the haughty Virginia team Facing odds of 5 to 1 and not even considered in the betting at these figures the blue and the white rallied gamely and snowed Virginia under to the tune of 16 to 0, the most overwhelming defeat ever administered to the orange and blue by their ancient rivals. These scores show how little dependence can be placed upon comparative scores. Virginia defeated V. P. I. 21 no 0. V. P. I. in turn defeated Carolina by the same score, leaving the comparative score of 42 to 0 in Virginia's favor. Georgetown won from Carolina 23 to 0, the Indians crushed Georgetown 28 to 6 and Virginia tied the Indians. All these early season results had led the followers of the old Dominion team to expect a 30 to 0 victory when in fact they were roundly whipped.—Atlanta Journal.

Base Ball Schedule.

Interesting Series Prepared by Manager Worth.

The base ball schedule for this spring is given below. Manager Worth is to be congratulated on account of his success in securing so many games that are worth winning.

There is only one regret. The schedule printed below is not as complete as it was at first. We had an engagement to play Yale in Norfolk the day before Virginia plays the same team there, but the date has been cancelled. Why this was done we know not. It could not have been because we were afraid of losing money on the trip, for a man who would go one hundred miles to see Virginia play Yale would certainly go a few miles further to see Carolina play Yale also. Nor could the game have been cancelled for fear of losing the game. For, Virginia does not seem to be afraid to try her hand, and our record last year will not let us be. Carolina showed, for instance, in her game against Georgetown, in what class the University of North Carolina belongs in base ball. And when she refuses to keep an engagement with a team such as Yale's, one that will give Carolina a chance to show her ability and to gain prestige, a mistake is made, we think.

He was on his way to accept the position of curate in one of the large churches of New York City. It must be galling to an old graduate to be called a "Christmas gift" on his first return to his old haunts.

The first American to receive a Cecil Rhodes scholarship is Eugene Lehman, Yale, '02.

Dr. Baskerville.

The Carnegie Institute of Washington, D. C., has granted Dr. Chas. Baskerville $1,000 for his work in science this year. This institution has an income of about $500,000, which is divided among the worthy scientific men of the country.

Dr. Baskerville is deservedly one of the fortunate ones, as his work during the past year has attracted wide attention throughout the country.

At the St. Louis meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science the report on research carried on by Dr. Baskerville, assisted by a grant of $50 from the Association was accepted. The grant was increased to $100, so that Prof. Baskerville may continue his investigation of certain of the rare earths occurring in monozite sands.

Answers to Correspondents.

Spr-n-t N-wt-n: No, we have no knowledge of a complexion cure guaranteed to straighten out the features and restore beauty to the face. You might try Pear's Soap.

T-m H-ll: The sensation of general lassitude and disinclination for work is a very common complaint. It is said to arise from a lack of gray matter in the brain. Try Conic Sections for "that tired feeling."

R. M. H-rp-r: Electricity is said to be a good tonic for the scalp and often puts a stop to falling hair. You might get treatment from Dr. Utley at the Power House or connect up with a lightning-rod during a thunder-storm.

H-ll-t-n: The following has been recommended to us as a good recipe for permanently curling the hair: Soak the hair for half an hour in any good, strong glue. Then taking up each lock one by one, curl them gently but firmly over the finger and tie with pink ribbon. Then set aside to cool and harden. When treated in this way, the hair is said to remain curled almost indefinitely.

B-ll-y J-n-s: We are at a loss to tell you what to do to make your figure light and graceful, since you state that you wear a No. 10 shoe and a 48-inch waist. We note by the advertising departments of the magazines that R. & G. corsets are the thing for stout figures.

A. M. N-bl-, Jr.: No, we shouldn't think one of these little derbys everybody is wearing would become your style of beauty, if your description of yourself is accurate. We think that a high silk stove-pipe and a Prince Albert's what you want.

Billy looked at Mary—
Oh, what a pretty Miss!

BASE BALL PROSPECTS.

Coach Curran Gives a Line as to the Prospects for a Winning Team This Year.

U. N. C.'s base ball prospects for this spring are very promising indeed. The base ball material in college makes us think that we are going to have a nine of winners that shall cause us to feel just as proud as we were of the team which last spring ruined Virginia and Georgetown. The situation is made clear by Coach Curran:

"Carolina is going to have a good team this spring, one that the students will be glad to support. Of course, though, you know we have lost several fine players since last year—Holt, Carr and Smathers. But their places will be taken, and we may express the hope that their positions will be filled as well as they were last year. And then, you know, we have back this year a good big bunch of last year's nine. Let's see, there's Donnelly, Oldham, Cheshire, Hart, Noble, Green and Giles. Giles' arm is well again, and we are expecting him back any day now. And so, when we go up against Georgetown, George Green will have practically the same old team behind him that is, if he does something like taking a B.L. By the way, we have some last year's scrubs back, who are going to shine this year if they keep up their good work. I recall Hal Worth, Faison and Buck Harris.

"Among the new men who have played ball before they came here are Mowen and Hobgood. The latter, I judge from the reputation he has made for himself as pitcher for Wake Forest, will no doubt do even better with a better team behind him. We expect Worth Murphy to twirl it still faster than he did for Georgia Tech. now that he is at his own State's college. Besides, Pace, who held down first bag for Wake Forest last year is in college, and you know we need a man to take Earl Holt's place.

"So, I think, considering the old and the new men, that there is no reason why we should not turn out a winning team this spring. The boys have already begun to take snatch practices on the old athletic field, and in about three weeks I am going to start regular practices with ginger to make this good team that I have been telling you about."

The Lemmert Cup.

Our Athletic Association has just received a beautiful solid silver Loving Cup. It is the gift of Mr. John R. Lemmert, the famous clothing man, of Baltimore. The cup is made of solid silver and bears the inscription: "The Lemmert Cup."

Mr. Lemmert has given this cup with the intention of encouraging and stimulating all general athletics. It is a thoughtful and appropriate gift and we are sure that it will be appreciated by the entire student body.

Mr. Lemmert has left it to the discretion of the Advisory Committee to determine how it shall be used so as to most nearly accomplish his purposes. It has not yet been decided how the cup shall be used but it is thought that it will be used to stimulate an interest in Track Athletics. This is to be done by placing the cup in the library and allowing the class which wins the most points in field meet to have its name and the date of the victory cut on the cup. We are sure the cup could be given to nothing that could come any nearer bringing about the design of Mr. Lemmert. Our track athletics have for a long time needed some kind of encouragement. Too much interest has centered around foot ball and base ball, while too little attention has been given to track athletics. We trust that this cup shall create a new interest in this direction and that the result of such an interest shall be improved until it shall occupy a place in Southern athletics as high as that of our other two teams. If this is done we are sure that the purpose of his gift will be realized.

Mr. Lemmert has been very successful as a business man. On the streets of every city in the South you will see men wearing clothing bearing his mark. The students here are deeply grateful to Mr. Lemmert for his generous and fitting gift and trust that the business of this open-handed and broad-minded man shall grow with the years.

Knocker's Column.

TO THE EDITOR:

The writer has heard indirectly but positively, that an engagement on the base ball schedule was broken without the wish of the Base Ball Manager, and that there are some instances on this year's schedule of engagements made without knowledge of the manager. Almost everybody in college has heard the above instances and several similar ones characterized as imperial by the students. But, still the students stay peaceful while they lose the power that belongs to University men in the management of their own athletics. It seems that the athletic association, the advisory committee, the manager, etc. are all being quietly made figure heads, and the power is being assumed by the superior authority.

Nothing has been said so far by our athletic organ—the reason can easily be inferred. A general kick is coming though, if this sort of thing continues. It is perfectly right that a kick should come, for the students know that it would be hard to point out any other college or university in the country where the students are getting under the thumb so fast as they are here at U. N. C.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Monday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We wish to announce that we have installed in this issue a department called the "Knocker's Column." This term "knock" is a good word. It is something like "kick," but is more vigorous and forcible. To knock means to object strenuously, to oppose vigorously. There are certain abuses around college that need correction and probably all that is needed is that attention be called to these things; we have no doubt but that reform will follow. We urge the student body to contribute to this column. When they have "a kick coming," let them write it out or send it to this department; it will be printed gladly. All communications may be signed or not as the contributor sees fit; but in every case the editor-in-chief must know the name of the writer, with the understanding that it shall remain a secret with him. However, the editor-in-chief is not to be held responsible for anything that appears in this department and does not care to be called to account for any communication therein. This column is intended to reflect the sentiments of the student body. Probably some of the articles printed under this head will be written by various members of the editorial staff, but the institution is intended to be of, for and by the students of the University.

It seems like imposing on the season to be talking about base ball with the wind whistling round the corners and skating going on all around us; but it is well to commence getting ready, since time for regular practice is but a few weeks off. We are sure all will rejoice over our prospects as discussed in another column and there seems to be no reason why we should not have another great team this year.

Speaking of base ball, why can't we have other sports to occupy the dull season? Other colleges turn out first-class lacrosse, hockey and basket ball teams during the winter season, why not we? We confine ourselves too much to the two games, foot ball and base ball, and become wrapped up in them to the neglect of other valuable sports. With as large a gathering of students as we have here on the Hill, we should broaden out and diversify more. Then "the dull season" that is now on would be talked of no more, and athletics would have a part in the lives of the many instead of the chosen few.

With this issue THE TAR HEEL makes its first appearance for the year 1904 and herewith extends New Year's greeting to all its readers and wishes them all happiness during the year that is now on.

We all come back to the Hill after the holidays with mingled feelings. With some of us it is the last time as undergraduates and this gives a little tinge of sadness to our return, perhaps. Some are suffering from a reaction after too much Christmas gayety, and to them for a few days probably, the Hill seems about the dreariest place on earth. But as soon as the hum of University life begins, time passes quickly and Commencement comes all too soon. Some, too, have been privileged characters at home as college men. They have feasted high; lived on the fat of the land and the sudden return to Commons makes them groan in spirit. Then there are others upon whom the Christmas turkey still weighs heavily, giving them a gloomy outlook on life and things in general. Well, "life depends on the liver" in more senses than one and perhaps things will come around in due time.

We enter on the new year with prospects most roseate. Many new students have matriculated, pushing the registration up about the 600 mark and later arrivals will boost the total enrollment perhaps considerably above this. The athletic outlook is good. For both base ball and track teams we seem to have the best of material. The schedule is exceptionally good and there is no reason why the season should not be most interesting, and we trust, victorious.

Great things happened to the University in the year just gone by; let us hope for even better things in 1904.

Mr. John R. Lemmert did a very generous and gracious thing when he gave the University the beautiful cup described in another column for the stimulation of its athletics. He may be sure that his gift will be used in the best way to carry out his purpose. He has the thanks of the entire student body. May his business increase.

College Items.

The University of Calcutta, India, claims to be the largest institution of learning in the world. Ten thousand students take the examination every year.

The dailies are the most profitable college papers. The Harvard "Crimson" nets an average of about $5,000 a year, and the Yale "News" $4,000. A senior on either of them often receives over $400. There are 14 college dailies.

The Princeton Club of New York recently debated as to whether it should give a dinner in honor of Mayor George B. McLellan and finally decided not to because Mr. McLellan "is not a good Princeton man."

LOCAL NOTES.

Dr. Thomas Hume spoke in Clialotte, December 13th, on "Culture and Worldliness," and lectured on December 16th before the Oxford Shakespeare Club on "Shakespeare's Personal Experience in his Works."

W. K. Battle, ex-'01, was on the Hill last week.

The News and Observer of Friday contained the following item: "Rev. Lindo Brigman, of Rockingham, was in the city yesterday on his way to Chapel Hill."

Mrs. Chas. Baskerville and children returned from a visit to Raleigh last week.

Dr. Venable left Saturday for New York to be present at a meeting of the Southern Education Board, held in that city Monday. On Monday night the members of the Board were given a banquet in the Waldorf-Astoria.

Messrs. Stewart for the Di and Stern for the Phi have been chosen to represent the societies at the Washington Birthday exercises.

In the Phi society Saturday night the question for debate was "Resolved, That labor unions are inimical to our industrial development." The committee decided in favor of the negative, and reported Mr. Simmons as best debater.

The query in the Di Society was, "Resolved: That the Federal government should own and operate the railroads." The negative won, and Mr. Gordon made the best speech.

Mrs. George Howe returned Friday night from a visit to her parents at Columbia, S. C.

Mr. D. P. Stern, '02, who has been in the law school of Columbia University for a year, has returned here to complete his law course.

Prof. M. C. S. Noble left Wednesday morning for Raleigh.

Prof. Collier Cobb was in Raleigh Sunday.

Christmas gifts and professional students have increased the total registration to over 600.

Rev. Hight C. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church at this place has resigned the pastorate and accepted the State Sunday school secretaryship. Rev. Mr. Moore has only been with the church here for about a year, but in this short time he has made a lasting impression on students as well as on members of the congregation, and we all regret to lose him. The State board of missions is to be congratulated on obtaining Mr. Moore for this work, as he has long been associated in Sunday school work and is well qualified in every respect.

At the 151st meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society last Tuesday night Dr. Chas. Baskerville lectured on "Elements: Verified and Unverified." This was a paper presented at St. Louis by Dr. Baskerville as Vice-President of Section C of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. We will print a synopsis of this paper next week.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith delivered a summary of his lecture, "Literary Attractions of the Bible," Tuesday night before the Young Men's Christian Association. Gerrard Hall was filled and the lecture thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr. N. W. Walker Married.

An event that should be of much interest to TAR HEEL readers was the marriage of Mr. Nathan Wilson Walker, THE TAR HEEL's editor-in-chief last year, to Miss Eva Hortense Pritchard, on December 29th at Scotland Neck, N. C. Under Mr. Walker's chieftainship THE TAR HEEL assumed a leading place among Southern college journals and he has been equally successful as principal of the Asheboro Graded Schools. THE TAR HEEL acknowledges an invitation to the wedding, regrets that its entire force was unable to attend, and wishes the couple all happiness and joy in the years to come.

New Firm.

Messrs. Robins and Harper have formed a partnership for the further pursuit of philosophical studies and are now located at the lower office in Battle's Park. It is reported that one of the firm's hose disappeared during their slumbers the other night and the next morning three dead rats were found near the house. The coroner pronounced their deaths as caused by acute indigestion.

Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest.

A movement has been set on foot to institute a system of oratorical contests between state universities, to culminate in a final contest to be held in the Hall of Congresses at the St. Louis Exposition. Our literary societies are now considering the question with a view to entering the contest. We think this a good thing, from the point of view of the University, and from that of oratorical training. Carolina will very probably be represented in these contests.

The plan for these contests is to have district contests in different parts of the country, the winners in which are to compete at St. Louis for a prize offered by the Exposition. It is intended to put these contests in advance of oratorical competitions of the familiar type, where only rhetoric and an easy speech are required, and to make them such as will test the original thinking powers of the speakers. Form will give place to thought. This will more nearly approach our ideas of debating.

The dignity of state institutions, the publicity of the St. Louis Exposition, and the incentive of national distinction, unite to give eminence to the proposed contest. Let us consider these things and act accordingly.

Phi Beta Kappa.

For some time the Alpha Theta Phi has been making efforts to be made a chapter of the college honor society of Phi Beta Kappa. These efforts seem now about to be realized. To secure a chapter requires the endorsements of five other chapters. Three of these we already have, from William and Mary, the parent chapter, Wesleyan and Vanderbilt. Johns Hopkins, Princeton and Yale have been written to and will very probably give us their endorsements at the next meetings of their chapters. Our application, together with the endorsements, will go before the National Council of the Phi Beta Kappa at its triennial meeting next fall to be acted upon. There is small doubt that we will secure the chapter.

The Phi Beta Kappa was organized at William and Mary College in 1776. Other chapters have been instituted until now there are fifty. They are associated under national officers and a National Council, composed of a Senate and delegates from each chapter. Membership in the society is considered one of the highest of college honors.

The requirements for admission are about the same as those for Alpha Theta Phi. If the chapter is secured all Alpha Theta Phi members will be made members of Phi Beta Kappa.

DR. BASKERVILLE LECTURES.

Subject Was "The Elements: Verified and Unverified."

At the regular monthly meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society Tuesday night, Dr. Chas. Baskerville presented his paper on "The Elements: Verified and Unverified," read at the St. Louis meeting of the American Chemical Society.

The first portion of the address was concerned with the development of the idea of atoms by which a definition of the term element was arrived at. An extended table of elements which have been proposed was submitted. The following statement was made after reference to the work of Lodge, J. J. Thomson and Crookes: "If the electrons of all elements are exactly alike, or, in other words, if there is but one matter, just as there is but one force, and if the elements be but the various manifestations of that one matter, due to a different orbital arrangement of the electrons, it would seem that we are fast returning to the conceptions of the middle-age alchemists. The transmutation of metals involves but the modification of the arrangement of the electrons."

The reasons for the large number of proposed elements were given and especial emphasis was laid upon the difficulties in proving their claims. For instance, the extreme minuteness in which they occur, difficulty of their extraction, and the attendant cost, with the usual scientific poverty. Furthermore, if anything new is had, the difficulties confronting chemists in proving positively that the substance is truly new, were pointed out. Reference was made to the deficiencies of the spectroscope, the lack of uniformity in observations; difficulties to be overcome in comparing absorption spectra, the advantages and disadvantages of phosphorescent and reversion spectra. Without doubt the spectroscopic criteria are the most valuable we have in judging finally the elements, and mayhap will remain so, but in his humble opinion, such have not alone sufficient authority, as yet, to usher the aspirant to a place among the elect. The contention frames itself, however, in an expression of the need for uniformity.

Reference is made to suggestions as to the variability of atomic weights and the grounds upon which atomic weights were accepted. The speaker, however, quoted from Berthelot "La Critique est facile, mais l'art est difficile," but especially emphasized that all our laws have their limitations.

It was suggested that some such institution as, for example, the Carnegie Institution, should establish a commission for judging the claims of all novel materials as elements.

Having dealt with the speculations of others, the speaker indulged in a novel speculation of his own, that whereas the density of the earth is about twice as great as the average density of the shell of the earth ten miles, the possible existence of elements with very high atomic weights was suggested. Following out the general idea of the genesis of the elements, he stated that the logic of Larmor's theory, involving the idea of an ionic substratum of matter, the support of J. J. Thomson's experiments, the confirmation of Zeeman's phenomenon, the emanations of Rutherford, Martin's explanations, cannot fail to cause credence in the correctness of Crookes' idea of a fourth state of matter.

These and the facts that most of the elements with high atomic weights, in fact, all above 200 (thallium not reported on), exhibit radioactive properties, are doubtless closely associated and have to do with the eventual composition of matter. He had unverified observations which go to show the existence of at least one element with a very high atomic weight. If it be confirmed, then we have them now or they are making, and probably breaking up, as shown by that marvellous class of radio-active elements in the discovery of which the Curies have been pioneers.

In conclusion he said: "If our ideas, that all known elements come from some primordial material, be true, then it stands to reason that we are coming in time perhaps to that fixed thing, a frozen ether, the fifth state of matter. I may make use of dangerous analogy and liken our known elements, arranged in a perfected, natural system, as the visible material spectrum, while electrons, etc. constitute the ultra-violet and cosmyle composes the infra-red, either one of the latter by proper conditions being convertible into perceptible elemental matter."

Mr. W. L. Allen Heard From Again.

The Roanoke, Va., Times, of last Tuesday has the following about a gentleman we will recall:

"W. L. Allen has mysteriously disappeared from Roanoke, and there are several business men who would like very much to ascertain his whereabouts, and with the aid of the police they expect to find him soon. Allen came to Roanoke first on Thanksgiving day as the coach for the Davidson College foot ball team, and will be remembered as being a tall, thin young fellow wearing a light gray suit of clothes and a college cap. He came back to Roanoke about five weeks ago and engaged room and board at one of the leading hotels. He left his hotel bill unpaid, and in addition passed what is alleged to be a worthless check for $50 on a leading haberdasher, receiving a $40 suit of clothing. He also secured 500 miles of transportation from the publisher of a weekly newspaper under the pretense that he would go out of the city to adjoining towns and secure advertising matter. There are probably others whom he has worked, but no complaint has yet been made to the authorities. Allen claimed that he was a native of Michigan, and it is more than likely that he has gone there. He left Roanoke about the first day of this year."

This man Allen is the same guy that signed the affidavit for Clemson College containing a scurrilous reflection on the officials in the Clemson Carolina game.

Quips on a Modern Novel.

The pieces of the girl who burst into tears have been put together again and she is now as whole as ever.

The youth whose face fell immediately picked it up again and after dusting it, restored it to its former position.

Water was thrown on the burning gaze of the villain, soon extinguishing it, but it was grossly insulting to the villain.

The remains of the man who exploded with laughter were collected in a basket and sent to a repair shop.

The piercing eye of the old gentleman went clean through a fool one day without hurting him in the least, but the point was so dulled that it hasn't been used since.

The man with the grating laugh is now employed in a restaurant and uses the laugh in the preparation of coconut pies and pineapple custards.

The bitter smile of the heroine has been diluted with water and sugar added till it is now quite pleasant to the taste.

Something fell into the open countenance of the hero one day, closing it up so effectively that he hasn't spoken a word since. Some say it was her father's fist.

The woman whose lips curled got so angry because her hair wouldn't do likewise that she committed suicide.

The lowering brow of the old man kept on lowering until it struck the floor, exploded and blew his head off.

The men all said that the eyes of the heroine were like diamonds, her lips like rubies, her teeth like pearls. The women all said that they were only cheap paste imitations.

John—"Do they refer to the law schools as their alma mate?"

Sam—"No; they call it their mother-in-law."

A Reply to Mr. Caspar Whitney's Charges.

We read in the January issue of Outing a severe criticism of athletics as conducted at the University of Virginia and at other Southern colleges. Mr. Caspar Whitney in his review of the foot ball season of 1903 says: "Cumberland appears with a pair of summer-nine ball players. The same is true of the Virginia and North Carolina teams—which, however, have been always a law unto themselves." As a prelude to his "Foot Ball Ranking," he says: "No college is eligible for consideration here whose disregard for wholesome sport is patent and persistent." In the long list of teams which follows, Virginia, North Carolina and Blacksburg are omitted.

In answer to the first charge in regard to the playing of summer-nine players, we will say that if this is a sin against athletic morals it is shared by Virginia with such institutions as Princeton and Yale. No one can say that players from those colleges have frequently earned their board during the summer months by playing on teams in the Adirondacks and other places.

Secondly, we wish to inquire of Mr. Whitney in what ways Virginia has shown a patent and persistent disregard of wholesome sport. If he refers to rowdyism in play, we will refer him to that prominent Yale athlete who stated that the Virginia-North Carolina contest was the first real foot ball game he had ever seen, terming the Northern foot ball games mere fights. If he refers to the playing of men tainted with professionalism, it is sufficient to call attention to the Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Association, which watches this matter with all the jealousy that rivalry can inspire. We will add, however, that he reflects directly upon a member of our Faculty who has been appointed to guard the University's honor in this matter.

There is some complaint among Southern colleges because North Carolina refuses to give them any games either in football or baseball. It seems to us that we do neglect our neighbors to the south and west of us most too much. The colleges to the north of us receive the greater part of their athletes from the northern states and in playing these institutions with more men and more means, we always place ourselves at a disadvantage. It is to be wondered at that we are so successful in these contests with our northern neighbors. But games with our fellow Southerners would help to bring about more friendly relations between our neighbors, and besides it would give us valuable training for the northern events which we consider more important. It might be well for our managers to think about this matter.

Mr. Caspar Whitney, an athletic critic, is in the habit of writing reviews of athletics in America from time to time in the magazine, Outing. This month he states some of his views on Southern athletics, being especially censorious towards Virginia and North Carolina. Mr. Whitney's opinions so evidently proceed from bad digestion and complete ignorance of Southern athletics that we gave small attention to his charges. The Virginia colleges, however, have taken him up on the subject and we print in another column an extract from a recent editorial in College Topics, which will probably be of some interest.

The setting aside of the Lemmert Cup as a trophy in track athletics seems to us a good move; and it is to be hoped that the different classes will answer the call of the gymnasium instructor to turn out for training. We seem to have excellent material for a track team this spring and with the increased interest that the class contests will bring about, track work should assume a high place in our athletic life. In track athletics there is small danger of personal injury as in football and more can take part than in baseball. The indoor preliminary work should help in breaking the monotony of this the dull season and thus make our athletic life more diversified.

On January 3d one of the foremost and most widely known Presbyterian ministers in the state went to his reward. Dr. R. E. Caldwell was an alumnus of this University and his name was known and loved by the entire section in which he dwelt. Grief at his death just in the prime of life was expressed in all parts of the state. The University need not fear for itself as long as it turns out such men as Dr. Caldwell.

Philological Club.

At the meeting of the Philological Club, January 19, 1904, the following papers were presented and discussed:

"You All," as Used in the South, Dr. C. A. Smith. Dr. Smith spoke of a series of letters appearing in the N. Y. Times Saturday Review, which discussed the use of this expression. Some of these letters attempt to show that it is Low German, another suggesting a French origin. Dr. Smith showed that the usage was much older than Low German or French, occurring in the writings of King Alfred who died in 901 A. D. By numerous quotations it was shown that "all" added to the plural of pronouns has been used from King Alfred's time until now.

The most distinctive thing about this expression as used in the South is the accent, which a Southerner places on the first word, whereas a Northern man may use the expression placing the stress on all. To follow the pronoun with "all" is perfectly good English, but to make the two words one word and accent the first syllable is colloquial.

Two sentences from Shakespeare were quoted in which "you all" is used in a sense approaching its use in the South.

"You all" is used by a Southerner as a plural or in a representative way, but never as a singular pure and simple. Northern people claim that it is used as a singular in the South.

Note on the Te Deum. Dr. E. Alexander. After speaking of the grand character of the hymn, some account was given of its composition. Reference was made to the story of its having been composed by St. Ambrose and St. Augustine on the occasion of the latter's baptism. The hymn is of composite nature, some of its clauses being closely connected with the Eucharistic hymn of the liturgy of Jerusalem, some being taken from the writings of St. Cyprian of Carthage, some from the Morning Hymn found in the Alexandrian Codex, others from various Psalms.

The first notice of its use as a whole was in 527 A. D., but it must have been used much earlier than that.

It has always been regarded as a hymn sung to the Holy Trinity.

Fire Saturday Morning.

Last Saturday morning about 9 o'clock our little village was aroused by the ringing of the fire bell. Immediately thereupon the students and citizens of the village rushed for the scene of alarm.

It was soon learned that the fire was in the D. K. E. fraternity hall. The fire company was soon on the scene with reels and other implements for fighting fire. The quick response of the students and citizens made it unnecessary for the fire company to turn water on the building.

The fire was in Mr. Louis Rountree's room on the first floor of the building. About 8 o'clock Mr. Rountree closed his room and went to breakfast, returning about nine. When he opened the door smoke gushed out of the room, and the alarm was then given.

A coal fire had been left burning in the grate and a coal must have popped out on the rug or a large chair which was near in front of the grate. Students rushed into the room and threw the burning chair and rugs out the windows, and extinguished the burning carpet by water.

The estimated loss is $50, consisting of a large chair, rugs, carpets and sofa pillows.

LOCAL NOTES.

Mr. F. D. Ross, of Charlotte, visited his brother, Otho Ross, '05, one day last week.

Mr. Frank Drane went to Greensboro Saturday.

Graham Andrews, '03, came in for a short visit Monday night.

Prof. Noble returned Thursday from attending the Masonic meeting held at Raleigh last week.

Mrs. H. H. Williams spent the day in Raleigh Friday.

Messrs. C. C. Barnhardt and C. W. Miller of the Di, and J. K. Wilson and H. S. Lewis, of the Phi, were elected Saturday night to represent the societies in the commencement debate.

At a meeting of the Junior class Saturday Mr. Hubert Haywood was unanimously elected chief marshal for commencement. He appointed the following gentlemen as assistants: Messrs. Rountree, Lewis, Wilson, W., Ross, Boone and McLean, F.

In the Di Society Saturday night the query debated was: "Resolved, That deportation is the best solution of the negro question." The committee decided that the negative won and that Mr. Robins made the best speech.

In the Phi the same night the question for debate was: "Resolved, That a higher educational and property qualification be required of immigrants to the United States." The affirmative won and Mr. Wright made the best speech.

At the election for chief ball manager for the Senior commencement ball, Mr. A. L. Cox was elected chief and the following gentlemen were appointed subs: Messrs. Dunn, Brenizer, J. R. Moore, Ben Lassiter, Jones, and John Cheshire.

A small fire occurred at the D. K. E. Hall Saturday morning. The damage was slight, only the furniture of the room being injured. It caught from a spark from the grate.

Dr. John H. Eager, of Baltimore, representative of the Southern Theological Seminary, of Louisville, visited Dr. Hume last Friday. For sixteen years in Florence and Rome he studied the work of Protestant Missions and with his fine culture assimilated both the life and the art of Italy. His familiar discourse to the Y. M. C. A. Friday night was the rich result of his varied experience and very delightful. A charming gentleman and lecturer as he is, we hope to have him with us when a full University audience may greet him.

Mr. A. D. Browne, the gymnasium instructor has made the following announcement in regard to the Lemmert cup: the cup will be competed for by the different classes in the following events: one mile relay, 100 yard dash and 1-3 mile run; running high and broad jump, and standing high and broad jump; pole vaulting putting shot and hurdles. The instructor will be in the gymnasium at 3 o'clock every Saturday afternoon to begin the training for each of these events.

The December Magazine.

After a long, but unavoidable delay the December Magazine made its appearance after the holidays in good form. It is always with pleasure that THE TAR HEEL reviews her sister publication; and this issue makes surely no exception.

Three Conceptions of Joan of Arc, by W. C. Rankin is a study of how the character of Joan has been understood or rather misunderstood, by different nations and at different times. Henry VI gives us the low prejudiced view of the English at a time not far from that of Joan herself. Schiller, in his Maid of Orleans, represents the liberty seeking of the revolutionary period centering about the 1800. His Joan is an idealized heroine of liberty. In his Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc, Mark Twain gives us another view, that of the nineteenth century American, with a scientific desire for the truth. His is probably the truest view, that of a great heroine, and without the prejudice of Shakespeare or the glamour of Schiller. The notable thing about this article is its clearness and care of execution.

A Pioneer in Anglo-Saxon is a reprint of a contribution of Dr. A. A. Kern to the Sewanee Review. Preceding it is a Prefatory Note by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith. The product is Edward Dromgoole Sims, who graduated from this University in 1824. He was a student and teacher of foreign languages and gave some time to study in Saxon. Manuscripts of an Anglo-Saxon dictionary and grammar, which he prepared about 1845 have been recently found. He died before finishing them, but the fragments that remain show work of a high order. Sims was the first man to write such works in America. Much of Dr. Kern's article is given to a review of the manuscripts.

N. R. G. contributes to the Magazine a sketch of Hunter Lee Harris, B. S. 1889, in whose memory Dr. Wyche, of St. Louis, has recently presented to the Magazine a medal for the best short story.

The Library in College Work is a paper by Mr. W. S. Bernard. He says that the student reads for three things: recreation, culture and research, and he shows how the library helps him in each. Through the article runs a pleasing vein of humor.

The Hand of the Lord, by H. H. Hughes, is a story of how two moonshiners fooled the revenue officers and at the same time turned the joke on a troublesome sky-pilot. They became very penitent for their misdeeds and wished the parson to destroy their still for them. As he was preparing to do this, the officers, who had been watching for the moonshiners, arrested him for one of them, to the great delight of the real moonshiners in a near-by tree. The story is well planned and well written.

Turtle Hunting in America and Comparative Diagnosis are pleasing stories. A Humble Cupid is an amusing story of two mis-sent love letters.

In the Book Notes Department we find representative notices of Dr. C. A. Smith's new English Synthetical Chemistry.

Dr. A. S. Wheeler delivered an interesting lecture on "Synthetical Chemistry," in the chapel last Thursday evening. An abstract of the lecture follows:

Urea was the first organic compound made in the laboratory, the discovery of Wöhler in 1828. Acetic acid was synthesized in 1845. After 1860 the development in making substances produced in nature was wonderful. Salicylic acid was the first organic compound to be manufactured on a commercial scale. Formerly obtained from oil of wintergreen, it is now made from carbolic acid. Vanilla is now being made in Germany and it threatens to supplant the natural product. Caffeine, the active principle of tea and coffee can now be made by a complicated process, too expensive for practical purposes. Synthetic camphor is now manufactured in our own country, and the Japanese who control the camphor industry are much worried for fear the days of the camphor tree are numbered. Alizarin is one of the great achievements of the synthetic chemist. It was formerly obtained from madder root, the cultivation of which was a great industry in many European countries. It is used for dyeing cotton Turkey red and other shades and is remarkable for its brilliance and fastness. The chemist studied out its chemical nature and in 1869 began to manufacture it from anthracene, a coal tar product. The madder industry is now extinct and over twenty million dollars a year are saved, so cheaply can alizarin be manufactured. A greater achievement was the artificial production of indigo, success being realized in July, 1897, after a struggle for nearly twenty five years. Indigo is the most beautiful and valuable of blue dyes. It is manufactured by one company in Germany with a capital of four and one half million dollars and it produces in one year as much indigo as one quarter of a million acres in the home of the indigo plant. Synthetic indigo is much better than vegetable indigo. It is absolutely pure, it dyes brighter shades and the dyeing is not guess work. The Germans lead the world in the manufacture of synthetic compounds. Notwithstanding the great achievements of the past I think still greater ones are in store for us.

LECTURE BY PROFESSOR COBB.

Professor Collier Cobb Delivers An Interesting and Entertaining Lecture.

Prof. Collier Cobb gave a most interesting and instructive lecture in Gerrard Hall Thursday evening on "The Fossil Fields of Wyoming." This is a subject on which Professor Cobb speaks at first hand, since he was an officer of the Union Pacific expedition to the fossil fields of Wyoming and has spent much time in that region, besides making a careful study in the laboratory of some of the fossil forms discovered there.

The first half of the lecture was devoted to a discussion of the many ways in which the record of plant and animal life is preserved in the rocks. The remains of a large fish from Wyoming, showing every bone and even the eye, preserved in a calcareous shale; the tooth of a mastodon from Fort Barnwell, N. C., and shells and bones from the marl beds of our coastal plain, were shown to the audience as types of the actual organism itself preserved. The foot-prints of reptiles in sandstones from the Connecticut valley and of unknown animals in the shales of Cummock, N. C., and impressions of leaves on the shales and sandstones of several different localities showed how even the mould of a creature may be just as good as the creature itself, so far as a record of his existence goes. The two valves of a clam shell may have the space between them filled with clay, and then on removal of the shell by solution we have a cast of the interior of the shells, as illustrated in some forms from Wilmington, and these casts are also recognized as fossils. Again, we may have a replacement of the original material of wood or bone with lime or iron or silica, as in this wood from near Chapel Hill, or this vertebra from Wyoming, in which case this petrification has preserved for us a fossil. Thus you see, we may have the original thing, the cast, or the petrification, as four forms of fossils.

The muds and sands and gravels worn from the land by the weather are borne by the streams to the oceans and seas and lakes, and as these sediments are deposited in layers over the sea-floors and lake-basins, they entomb and preserve the remains of creatures in one or more of the ways just described. The geologist tells from the character of the fossils whether the strata were deposited in bogs or lakes or inland seas or in, the open ocean. Fresh-water formations are usually very limited in area, and the absence of many fossil forms usually met with in marine strata afford a useful negative indication of the fresh-water origin of a formation. For example, there are no sea-urchins, no crabs, no chambered shells, such as the nautilus, nor microscopic foraminifera in lake or river deposits.

In freshwater deposits, too, the number of individual shells is often as great as in a marine stratum, if not greater; but there is a smaller variety of species and genera. It is in the lowest strata, the oldest rocks that we find the simplest forms; and these come up to the present time almost unchanged. More and more complicated types are successively introduced, and the forms found in the newest rocks extend back for a relatively short time.

Some years ago a cowboy named Reed, riding over the Wyoming plains, had his horse stumble on a bit of bone which awoke a new train of thought in his mind and brought a new interest into his life. He knew the name of but one scientist in the world and he sent to Prof. O. C. Marsh, of Yale, the fragments that he gathered in the Como Bluff near Aurora. The cowboy became a collector for Yale University and the Yale professor extended his brilliant discoveries of unique importance in the field of organic evolution. Were all other evidence lost or wanting, the law of evolution would still have a firm foundation in incontrovertible fact through the discoveries of Professor Marsh.

In 1899 there was renewed activity in the region. Prof. Knight, of the University of Wyoming, Prof. Osborne, of the American Museum of Natural History, our friend Dr. Holland, of the Carnegie Museum, and Mr. Riggs, of the field Columbian Museum, got to work with a will in that region. The Union Pacific Railroad then invited a hundred geologists from all parts of the world to spend the summer of 1899 in the field, and our lecturer was so fortunate as to be one of that number.

The lecturer then gave an account of the expedition and of its personnel, illustrating it with stereopticon by numerous photographs. Flanking the plains of Wyoming and Colorado are lines of dark red sandstone bluffs which everywhere form striking landmarks. Just above them runs a second series of bluffs of white sandstones and hard clays. These latter constitute the Jurassic formation, famous for its deposits of the remains of extinct reptiles. The whole thickness of this formation is nearly a thousand feet, and it is divided into a lower or marine series of strata. The marine strata yield only the swimming ichthyosaur, a fish-lizard, while in the fresh water Jura there are to be found throughout nearly the whole depth the remains of the immense dinosaurs, or land lizards.

The lecturer then described the methods of prospecting for fossils, "hunting dead lizards underground," as he termed it, and the means of preserving and transporting fossils from the field to the laboratory. He showed photographs of the bones and restored skeletons of some of the dinosaurs. "In comparison to a mammoth many of these animals were in size as a horse to a dog; and this expedition unearthed the largest one known to science, a Brontosaurus, whose incomplete femur measured 69 1-2 inches. The entire animal must have weighed in life about sixty tons; he had a neck thirty feet in length. His ribs are about nine feet in length and a tail perhaps sixty feet in length. His ribs are about nine feet in length, and the cavity of his body with the lungs and entrails out would make a hall thirty-four feet in length, sixteen feet in width, and arched over probably twelve feet in height. Such a space, if properly arranged, would seat at least forty people. A set of fours in cavalry could easily have risen abreast between his front legs, provided he had not objected. Every time he put his foot down it covered more than a square yard of ground and must have shaken the earth." This is Mr. Reed's own description of the animal.

The largest of these saurians were herbivorous and found forage in the vast tracts of succulent reeds and cycads so abundant then in that region. The cycads are the forerunners of our modern palm, for Wyoming had then a sub-tropical climate.

Numerous other fossil forms were described and pictured; but your reporter found it impossible to follow the lecturer through his words and illustrations, becoming too greatly interested to take notes in a darkened hall brilliant with great pictures.

Knocker's Column.

TO THE EDITOR:

Please allow me a short space in your Knocker's Column. It is rumored around the Campus that the Advisory Committee has been warned not to offer our next fall's foot ball coach more than $650 and his expenses while here. If this is true and it comes pretty nearly straight, it means that the record of the '04 team will not be that of our past season's team. For we positively cannot get a good man for so small a salary. Good coaches have put us in the very fore front of Southern athletics; bad ones will put us in a class with minor colleges and prep schools. This is a pitiable sum to offer when a sister institution with no more men and no more money pays $1700 per year for their coach; many prep schools offer salaries to their coach which equal the one we are about to offer. Why don't we put out our money and get a first class man? It is simply because one man says, "No." It is time for the students to exercise their rights in the matter of athletics; for the students form the athletics of any college. Let us all raise our voices for what we think is right and cease to bow to the imperial commands of any one man.

A STUDENT.

SAUL OF TARSUS.

The Wendling Lecture on Tuesday Night a Brilliant Production of a Masterful Orator.

The lecture of Mr. George R. Wendling on Tuesday evening was one long to be remembered by all who heard him. His lecture of last spring on "The Man of Galilee" was still fresh in the minds of his audience. His masterful presentation of that subject brought out a crowd Tuesday night that filled every seat in Gerrard Hall. This time his theme was "Saul of Tarsus." For an hour he held his large audience in unbroken attention to a well-nigh marvelous delineation of the greatest character in human history. His eloquence, his vividness of description, his knowledge of the Bible, and his earnestness of speech place Mr. Wendling at the head of lyceum lecturers. Surely his equal has not been to Chapel Hill for some time.

"Saul of Tarsus" is one of Mr. Wendling's most famous lectures. In it we see not the divinely guided apostle of a great religion, but the man of genius, the orator, the martyr, the hero. We behold a man of profound intellect, suffering numberless persecutions, but through them all holding fast to an unshakable faith.

The substance of the lecture was as follows:

I shall speak to you tonight of the man we call Saint Paul. But we will look not at the divine nature of Paul the Apostle, but rather at the man, Saul of Tarsus. We shall measure him not by divine standards, but by human measures. We shall consider him only on the human side, and see what position he holds as a genius, as a thinker, and as a man of achievement. How does he stand as an orator, a martyr and a hero?

To understand these things we must first know the social condition of the times in which Paul lived. We will stand on the summit of Cheops and survey the centuries that had preceded him. Great civilization had lived and died. Persia, Egypt, Troy, Greece and Carthage had each been the mistress of the world and passed away. The great Roman Caesars now stretched over the world and ruled all. In the midst of this political history we find another force. As the Gulf Stream tempers the continents of North America and Europe and renders them fit for high civilization, so was there a stream running through them and to a great extent making them what they were. This stream was the Jewish race. This people had been through bondage, had enjoyed a strong national existence and had suffered captivity. Now they had lost their nationality, but held out merely as a religious body, disdaining to mix with other races about them.

While the world stood breathless after the fall of Caesar, waiting for

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Monday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

In the last issue of this paper before the holidays there appeared a short article, not designed to reflect upon anyone, but intended simply to call attention to the gymnasium. A great deal of the apparatus had been broken and rendered useless, and what remained was dangerous to use. Examination proved that there was need for repairs and accordingly the broken apparatus was mended as far as possible and things toned up in general. During the holidays some unthinking ones broke into the building, maltreated all the repaired apparatus possible and left the gymnasium in a worse fix than before.

We do not know whether this destruction was done by the students or by small boys from the town; but we mention this incident simply to call attention to the fact that a great deal of wanton destruction is going on around this University all the time. Those who are concerned in this work do not stop to reflect on the fact that the money the University receives from all sources barely suffices to pay its running expenses and keep it going. A great deal of the destruction going on cannot be repaired from the damage fee, and this means that the college must pay out money that is sorely needed elsewhere, to repair wanton breakage and thoughtless destruction.

We have more than once heard this remark: "What do I care for my damage fee? It's out of my hands and I'm going to get the worth of it." And then this independent youth proceeds to break down a door to show how wild and brave he is. What if the damage fee is nothing to him with his monthly allowances from home and his unlimited credit? Does he think of the fact that there are others who get through college by the sweat of the brow? To them this two dollars is no paltry affair. There are very few of us millionaires and so we urge those who have been concerned in such work to let their better selves come to the front and put a stop to such petty acts that look so out-of-place in a great University.

While we are on this subject we might mention another incident along the same line. Some time ago a party of ladies visited Memorial Hall, now used as a gymnasium, and were shocked and horrified beyond expression at the profanity and indecency scribbled on the walls. On a pure white stone appeared the name of some good and great man and near by was scribbled some expression unfit for the eyes of womankind. We hate to have to mention a thing of this sort; it is with an effort that we put the words down, and yet we feel that such things should be called to the attention of University men.

The other day one of our professors, who is a close observer of men and things, happened to mention the fact that one never sees these things on the walls at Harvard and Yale; at the prep. schools, on the other hand, it is a common sight.

Now we are not at all sure that students are responsible for the disfigurement of this the most sacred of our buildings, small boys of the town being well-known frequenters of the place, but anyhow, this is too big a University to tolerate such things in its midst; and the only way to put a stop to such practices is for the sentiment of the student body to be against them. We need to cultivate a better and broader spirit at this University. We ought to make it a place where small, petty deeds and malicious acts cannot thrive. Such things do not accord with the atmosphere of Chapel Hill and it is time we were recognizing the fact. We have a great deal of faith in the desire for the higher things pervading the University as a whole. Let us think on these matters.

We sympathize with our sister institution, the State Normal, in the severe loss it has recently sustained. State institutions seldom suffer from the effects of too much money and any loss is just so much gone. President McIver, however, is a University man and a hustler. The loss will doubtless be made good in time.

Meeting of Athletic Association.

A meeting of the athletic association was held at 2:30 Saturday, by Vice-President Johnston. As Mr. Ramsey will not be in college this spring, the first business was the election of president of the association. Mr. A. H. Johnston, the present vice-president, was nominated and unanimously elected. Mr. W. Dunn was elected vice-president to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Jones then stated the object of the meeting, which was to raise funds for the equipment of this year's base ball team. After strong speeches by Dr. Mangum and Prof. Graham a collection was taken, amounting to $155. This amount, though small, did very well considering the small number present, and those who were not present will surely do their part when the committee solicits them for subscription. The further business of the meeting was the appointment of a committee to take action in regard to the disposal of the Lemmert cup.

Yale's foot ball association has cleared $50,000 from this season's games.

Boston University has dropped Greek from the requirements for the A. B. degree.

LOCAL NOTES.

Prof. E. K. Graham spent the day in Raleigh Friday.

Mr. R. M. Harper went to Wake Forest Saturday morning, returning Monday.

Mr. N. R. Graham went to Charlotte Friday to have his eyes treated.

Dr. C. L. Raper went to Hillsboro on a business trip Saturday.

Mr. G. L. Jones went to Durham Monday evening.

Miss Millie Archer is at home from the Normal, on account of the recent fire there.

In the contest held Monday night to decide the Di's representative in the Carolina-Georgia debate the decision was given to Mr. A. H. Johnston.

Miss Annie Barringer, of Charlottesville, Va., arrived Tuesday night to be the guest of Miss Louise Venable.

Rev. Martin D. Hardin, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church in Charlotte, will preach the University sermon next Sunday.

Messrs. Perry, '06, and W. Robinson, '07, were chosen Saturday night to represent the Phi society in the Fresh-Soph debate.

As the Sophs had not elected a captain for their basket ball team; the Soph-Junior match game was not played Saturday as scheduled.

A great deal of interest is being taken in basket ball at present by the different classes, all except the Sophomores having elected captains: Seniors, Lockhart; Juniors, Barnhardt; Freshmen, Singletary; Second Year Meds, Patterson.

The question debated in both societies Saturday night was: "Resolved, "That capital punishment should be abolished." In the Phi the negative won and Mr. W. S. Robinson made the best debate. The Di decided in favor of the negative and reported Mr. Barnhardt as best debater.

Rev. Dr. Moss has been called to serve the Presbyterian church of Chapel Hill as pastor. Dr. Moss has been preaching here during the past month, and we are very glad that he is to continue through the year. He will reply to the call in his sermon Sunday morning.

Action was taken in the societies Saturday night in regard to inviting Hon. W. J. Bryan to speak here some time during his tour of North Carolina next month.

The Y. M. C. A. mission class had its regular monthly social in the Long building Friday night. Music was given by members of the class, and refreshments served, making the time pass pleasantly for all.

As a result of the sudden changes in the weather during the past week quite a number of students are confined to their rooms with slight attacks of the grip. Messrs. Jones, H., Mills, Kuttner and Plummer are confined in the infirmary with the measles. Mr. Simmons is also in the infirmary with a mild case of diphtheria.

Historical Society Meets.

The regular monthly meeting of the Historical Society was held in the history lecture room Monday night. The meeting was called to order at 7 p. m by Dr. Battle and the minutes were read by Secretary Raper and approved. Mr. Vaughan read a paper on "The Instructions to Proprietary Governors of North Carolina." "The instructions were divided into four classes, namely, Governors, Governor's Council, Lower House and General Assembly." Mr. Vaughan's paper dealt with each of these classes and their functions.

Dr. Raper next gave a report on the 6th edition of John Lawson's History of North Carolina. "This book, says Dr. Raper, "was printed in the first part of the 18th century." In 1700 John Lawson lands in Charleston, S. C., and with a party sets out on a thousand mile tramp through the Carolinas. The first part of this history is a narrative of the tramp. The second part deals with the plant and animal life, and the manners and customs of the whites and Indians.

Prof. Noble spoke concerning the value of the spirit of the "historical society." "Become interested in the history of your own state," exhorts Prof. Noble.

Dr. Battle followed with a few remarks on the colony of Transylvania. "This colony was headed by Richard Henderson and was settled west of the Alleghany mountains. It desired to be admitted as the 14th colony, but was not considered strong enough. This colony later became known as Kentucky." Dr. Battle stated that he would continue the story of this colony at the next meeting of the society.

All those who would like to receive THE TAR HEEL from now until June 6th will send the Business Manager 75 cents and keep up with the college news. And there are some new men and old men in college who ought to be taking their college paper instead of beating on their neighbors. Let us have your names.

Here's to the love that lies in the summer girl's eyes.
And lies—and sighs and dies.

some great wonder to take place, there lay a babe in a manger in Bethlehem, whose birth, it is said, was heralded by angels. In the name of that babe suffered martyrs; and first of them Stephen. In the mob that stoned him there was, among the leaders, a man who himself should suffer persecution for this babe, Saul of Tarsus.

His father was a Pharisee of the tribe of Benjamin, and like all good Jews of the time taught his son a trade. At the age of thirteen the boy was sent to Gamaliel to study for the position of rabbi. His life was rigidly in accordance with Jewish laws. "After the strictest of the sect he lived a Pharisee."

He was present at the stoning of Stephen and helped to injure the new religion in every way possible. In his zeal for his faith he journeyed to Damascus. That journey, in its effect on human affairs, is the most momentous in history. I shall not tell you of that wonderful conversion. The words of Saul there, were at once a conversion and an enlistment for service: "What shall I do, Lord?" Saul of Tarsus became Paul of Tarsus.

My idea of Paul is that of a large handsome man, his face covered with beard, and possessing large, tender gray eyes. I believe he was married, because he was a member of the Sanhedrin, to which only married men could belong. But his wife doubtless died before his conversion; he died a childless old man. Paul passed through persecutions that would try the soul of any man. But never for a moment did he lose faith in the great truth to which he clung. Never for a moment did he believe his great conversion a sun stroke. As he comes to die he exclaims: "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith." Never for once does he falter. He was the bravest man that ever trod the earth.

The primal condition of a great orator is a great soul on fire with a great cause. Paul had all these things. He had self-consecrating, self-consuming earnestness. He could use personal invective without sacrificing personal dignity. Only nine sentences of his speech on Mars Hill have come down to us, but the world considers it a masterpiece. He is a consummate master because his soul is in what he says. He is every inch a gentleman. He was courtly before Agrippa and plain before the peasant. The world has not yet seen Paul's equal as an orator, and the earth yet vibrates with his speech.

The Second Year Medical Class met last Friday at 12:30 P. M. and elected Mr. Joe Patterson Captain of the basket ball team and Mr. A. L. Plummer, Manager.

The maiden sorrowfully milked the goat,
And pensively turned to mutter,
"I wish you would turn to milk, you brute,
And the animal turned to butt her.

TO THE EDITOR:

In THE TAR HEEL of January 28th was a card relating to a "rumor around the campus that the Advisory Committee has been warned not to offer more than $650 and expenses for a foot ball coach." This is a mistake. The committee has not been warned but only suggested to offer $750. This amount is not the limit but only a "starter."

The article says also that "we positively cannot get a good man for so small a salary." Coach Olcott was paid only $600 and expenses the first year.

So far as putting ourselves in the class with minor colleges and prep schools by offering 650, we are already below the class of minor colleges in the subscription line. V. M. I., whom we consider a minor college, has only 280 students while we have over 600, gets $1,400 in subscriptions, while we get $250.

Now if we must "put out our money and get a first class man" we have first got to get the money. We offered Coach Olcott $900 this year without expenses and luckily were able to pay it on account of tickets to the Virginia game.

If we had not been able to get it from the games where was it coming from? This "one man who says no" with the three other members of the Faculty who are on the Advisory Committee would have had to dig down in their pockets and pay it. So it seems to me that if they haven't the right to suggest the salary of the coach then tell me who has.

Instead of raising our voices for what we think is right, let us raise the money to get a good coach and then we can name the salary.

Magazine Editors Entertained at Professor Cobb's.

The Magazine editors were given a most enjoyable reception Wednesday evening, January 27, by Miss Penelope Cobb at the home of her brother, Professor Collier Cobb. Professor Cobb is chairman of the faculty committee on the Magazine, and this happy method was taken to bring about a closer relation to one who brought the Magazine to such a high standard not so many years ago and those who at present are working toward that same end. The few hours were thoroughly enjoyed in the talkative game, Pit, and—not unnaturally, perhaps—a young lady bore off the prize. To Miss Hume was given a box of Huyler's, which she generously meted out to the company, and after a long and exhausting contest Mr. Rankin finally won the consolation prize, in the shape of a balloon, which makes a noise when you blow it.

Those present were as follows: Misses Barringer, Charlottesville, Va.; Alexander, Cobb, Hume and Venable. The editors present were Messrs. Dameron, Johnston, McLean, Graham, Harper and Rankin;

University Sermon.

Rev. Mr. M. D. Hardin, of Charlotte, preached the University sermon for January last Sunday evening. He spoke very interestingly. His text was from John 18:37.

Mr. Hardin told the story of the creation as the scientist understands it. He gave the theory of the formation of the earth and the beginning of life upon it. How through gradual evolution one animal became separated from the rest. The animal is man. Man who was separated from all other forms of life and differing from them in that he had a soul.

"In broad terms," said the speaker, "the scientific and the Biblical stories of the creation are the same. In it all there is one purpose—the development of man. God must have had man in his idea from the beginning. Step by step, man has developed until he has become united to an unseen spirit world. He yearns for light, for life, for God."

Mr. Hardin then spoke of Christ as a man who felt only the spiritual and the divine upon his life; a man who knew that his life was not an accident. It was to fulfil God's purpose in making a divine revelation of supreme love and truth; the truth that man is a spiritual being, and, destined to live forever; that Christ is the controller and maker of this world's destinies, and is bringing it to completion. The outlines of his plan of completion are found in the Bible. Man was born so that his life might be a part of this plan. However, he may throw himself athwart the plan, but he does not change it; he destroys himself.

God is rational and employs himself in things that are worthy of his power. So ought man; otherwise life is a failure. It is a failure if it ends in a race like India's, or if it ends in a life of ease and wealth, a life neglecting the soul and the spiritual powers. Man's life should fill a part of God's great purpose; its chief end should be to glorify Him. This is the only free life. Freedom means the spontaneous adjustment of one's self to law.

Yackety-Yack.

The editors and business managers of the Yackety-Yack ask for the hearty cooperation of all the students and other friends of the University. They will do their part, but the editors cannot do all the work. There is something for every one to do—won't you help the board? The success of the annual for 1904 depends, in a great measure, upon the encouragement and support that it receive, from those, as it were, without.

Let all, therefore, show a special interest in the book and manifest that interest by contributing to the material for selection. The editors beg you not to be indifferent; indifference is one of the worst of handicaps. Kindly remember that you can help and whatever you do will be as thoroughly appreciated as it is earnestly solicited.

Drop a drag in the Drag Box!

Be sure to contribute something toward the success of the 1904 Yackety Yack!

A Yackety Yack will be given, free of charge, to the contributor of, respectively: the best short story; the best poem; the best "drag"; the best one-page drawing or cartoon; and drawings or illuminations amounting in all to one page.

The following is the board of Yackety Yack editors elected by the societies and fraternities:

Editor-in-Chief—N. R. Graham, Di.

Business Managers—W. W. Eagles, Phi, and G. S. M. MacNider, Sigma Nu.

Associate Editors—C. C. Barnhardt, A. W. Haywood and Grier Miller, Di; E. A. Daniel, B. K. Lassiter and Frank McLean, Phi; L. S. Holt, Kappa Alpha; W. H. Smith, Zeta Psi; A. C. Dalton, Beta Theta Pi; J. G. Wood, Delta Kappa Epsilon; J. P. Stedman, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; J. E. Pogue, Alpha Tau Omega, Sam Klutza, Phi Delta Theta; C. W. Rowe, Pi Kappa Alpha; L. A. Tomlinson, Kappa Sigma.

Athletic Need.

The patriotism and loyalty of college men, outside of a few cranks—are beyond question, but surely those qualities were as evident in the Civil War, when college athletics were in their infancy, as at any time since. Everything that tends to the growth of strength, courage and self command is to be encouraged; and we heartily believe in college athletics. But we don't believe in that fierce, and sometimes ungenerous rivalry, that mad desire for victory, that spirit of pettifogging, that intemperate hullabaloo over success, and that childish grief after a defeat that show themselves too often in intercollegiate athletics. The college athlete has not learned that external calm in victory and defeat which is rightly regarded as necessary. Where is this calm when men boohoo like babies when they are beaten? Where is the external calm of the young maniacs who celebrate an athletic victory by defiling property or rioting in the street? The college athletes need external and internal calm. They and the great mass of followers need to set smaller store on victory. We hope to see athletics more generally diffused in the college world instead of being sporadic and spotty.

"It was built in a time of famine."

We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

We are glad to have on our editorial table the first number of the North Carolina Journal of Law and we peruse its pages with the greatest interest. Its appearance and contents speak well for the future welfare of the magazine. A better fitted and more scholarly editor than Judge Jas. C. Mac Rae, of the University Law School, could not have been obtained and we have small doubt that under his able direction the Journal will soon become indispensable to members of the North Carolina Bar. The business manager is Jas. C. MacRae, Jr., and the committee from the State Bar Association is composed of Messrs. C. W. Tillett, E. W. Timberlake and J. Crawford Biggs.

The Journal contains forty-eight readable pages and is attractively bound and printed. It is filled with matter interesting to the layman as well as to the practicing lawyer. We wish for it a successful career.

The University Record, containing the Report of the President, is out and contains much interesting reading. The Unification of the Degree, Preparation for the University, and the Report of the Committee on Self Help are especially interesting sections. 107 men, or about 18 per cent. of the total number of students of the University, work during the college session in order to pay a part or all of their expenses. At Yale last year, only 156 men were reported, including those who worked during vacations. And it is greatly to the credit of the University that no form of honorable labor injures a student's standing among his fellows here. We all know this to be a fact and it speaks well for the University spirit.

It should be gratifying to all that we are to have another Yachety Yack this year. There has been so much misunderstanding and so many financial difficulties in the getting out of the annual heretofore that considerable opposition grew up against the publication of a new one; but an agreement was finally reached, stipulations drawn up, nearly $200 subscribed, and things gotten under way. Let us all leave out factional spirit and misunderstandings and help to make The Yachety Yack the best we have ever had.

A week or two ago we attempted a little original stuff under the heading, "Quips on a Modern Novel." Our old friend, The Red and Black, of Georgia, takes several squibs out and credits them to "Ex." The "bitter smile" of the heroine is reprinted: "The batter of the heroine has been diluted with water and sugar added until it is now quite pleasant to the taste." Wonder what sort of a pie that would make.

DR. BANCROFT LECTURES.

The Eminent Cornell Professor Speaks to the Scientific Students.

On Friday night Dr. Bancroft, of Cornell, lectured in the Chemistry lecture room to the scientific students of the University. Dr. Baskerville, in introducing the speaker, called attention to his wide reputation as a scientist, and spoke of him as the leading physical chemist of America.

The subject of Dr. Bancroft's lecture was "The Relation of Chemistry to the Other Sciences." The other sciences considered were Physics, Engineering, Geology, Physiology, Botany and Medicine. The speaker spoke of the relation of Chemistry to each of these, and illustrated these relations by certain problems met with by other scientists, which can be settled only by the chemist.

In concluding Dr. Bancroft said that the sciences, instead of tending toward a large number of isolated facts, as is often supposed, are really becoming more unified. There has been this tendency, it is true; but from the various facts thus obtained, the scientist is coming to derive general underlying laws. What were once thought separate facts are now seen to be interrelated and conformable to certain general principles. So that instead of the future scientist's being informed only in his particular branch of a particular science, he will and must have a general view of the whole field of science.

Gimghoul Banquet.

The Order of Gimghouls gave a banquet in honor of the visting young ladies last Friday down at their lodge in the woods. Those present were:

C. M. Carr with Miss Boyden, of Salisbury; A. Cox with Miss Maud Battle, of Warrenton; F. A. Cox with Miss Flynn, of Columbia, S. C.; G. Berkeley with Miss McNeely, of Salisbury; M. C. Staton with Miss Barringer, of Charlottesville, Va.; G. H. Kenan with Miss Bridgers, of Tarboro; W. L. Sheep with Miss Moore, of Washington; H. McMullan with Miss Wood, of Edenton; H. McR. Jones with Miss Venable, of Chapel Hill; H. V. Worth with Miss Nash, of Tarboro; J. H. Winston with Miss Flynn, of Columbia; H. Skinner with Miss Capehart, of Edenton; Mr. Bernard with Miss Flynn, of Columbia; Dr. Ruffin with Miss Placide Bridgers, of Tarboro; Prof. Howell with Miss Alexander, of Chapel Hill.

Chaperones: Dr. and Mrs. Henderson, Dr. and Mrs. Mangum, Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Alexander.

Sewanee Versus Carolina.

It was stated yesterday in the Vanderbilt notes in the Banner that the University of North Carolina defeated Sewanee in 1900. An investigation of the record shows that this was an error, as the two teams played to a standstill in Atlanta that year, the score being 0 to 0. They also played 0 to 0 in 1895. Their next game was in 1897, when North Carolina won by 12 to 6. In 1899 Sewanee won by 5 to 0. They have not played since the tie of 1900. From this it can be seen that North Carolina, which has a great reputation because of her defeat of Virginia on Thanksgiving, has not been such a terror to Tennessee colleges as might be supposed.

Meeting of Historical Society.

The Historical Society met in the History lecture room last Monday evening at 7 o'clock, Dr. Battle presiding. The following papers were presented:

Mr. R. G. Lewis—"Social Life in England in the Time of William of Orange."

Mr. William Dunn—"The Battle of Sharpesburg, Pa., or Antietam."

Dr. Kemp P. Battle—"The Colony of Transylvania." The paper presented by Dr. Battle was a continuation of the same paper presented by him at the last meeting, a month ago.

The programme was interesting and instructing throughout, presenting some new ideas. It was highly enjoyed by the members of the society.

It is well to make hay while the sun shines, but if the sun should shine all the time you would never make hay.—Lariat.

The Lemmert Cup.

The Athletic Advisory Committee, which met the other day to decide as to the disposition of the Lemmert Cup, drew up the following resolutions and conditions as follows below. A copy of these resolutions have already been sent to Mr. Lemmert, and it is thought that the conditions in regard to the giving of the cup will accord with his wishes.

The committee decided that the Lemmert Cup shall be offered in the following way:

1. The cup shall be offered for the purpose of creating interest and a spirit of rivalry in track athletics.
2. It shall be contended for in a contest between the classes on Field Day.
3. Each year the class team making the best record shall have its name and the date engraved upon the cup and shall possess the cup for that year.
4. The cup shall remain in the University and be displayed in the trophy room or some conspicuous place.
5. The contest shall be held under the supervision of the director of track athletics.
6. The expense of engraving shall be borne by the Athletic Association of the University.

Mr. John R. Lemmert,
Baltimore, Maryland.

Dear Sir:—
We, the undersigned committee, beg to present the following resolution in behalf of the Athletic Association of the University:

Resolved, That we deeply appreciate the interest shown by Mr. John R. Lemmert in the athletics of the University;

That a note of thanks be tendered him by the association for his generous and timely gift of the Lemmert Cup.

That a copy of these resolutions be published in The Tar Heel and a copy sent to Mr. Lemmert.

Georgia's Debaters.

Athens, Ga., Feb. 10.—Alvin G. Golucke, of Crawfordville; William Patterson, of Columbus, and J. M. Hull, of Augusta, alternate, will represent the University of Georgia in the debate with the University of North Carolina next April.

The three young men were selected after a contest held last night before the committee of the University faculty.

Real Worth of a College.

President McIver, of the Normal and Industrial, U. N. C. '81, outlines his conceptions of the real worth of a college as follows:

"The worth of a strong college to a student is not, as some suppose, the mere fact that it gives the opportunity to a student to perform systematic literary tasks assigned by teachers, or that it gives opportunity to work in laboratories and libraries. These are necessary and important, but the student's greatest advantage at college is the spiritual and mental atmosphere of the place. It is intangible but you can feel it. It cannot be measured, but its effect is everywhere manifest. The love of truth for truth's sake; the belief in equality before the law; the belief in fair play and the willingness to applaud an honest victor in every contest, whether on the athletic field or in the class room or in social life; the feeling of common responsibility; the habit of tolerance towards those with whom one does not entirely agree; the giving up of small rights for the sake of greater rights that are essential; the recognition of authority and the voluntary, dignified submission to it when the reason for the policy adopted by the authority is not apparent, the spirit of overlooking the blunders of others and of helping those who are weak; the contempt for idlers and shirkers; the love of one's fellow workers even though they be one's rivals; patience in toil; self-reliance; faith in human progress; confidence in right and belief in God—these are the characteristics of the atmosphere of a great and useful college. The young man or young woman who by association with faculty and fellow students becomes imbued with these principles gains what never can be secured in the same degree in the best homes or small schools, or anywhere else except in a college."

Elisha Mitchell Society.

The 152nd meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was held Tuesday evening. Dr. Coker gave an interesting account of Mendel's remarkable Law of Heredity, which is now creating so much discussion. Dr. Wilson in his paper on Incomplete Division in Vertebrate Animals showed how monsters can be produced simply by constricting the embryo. Some two headed turtles were exhibited. Prof. Cobb discussed the "Composition of Crystal Plain Sands in Relation to Distance from Existing Shore Lines."

President Abercrombie has invited Mr. William Jennings Bryan, the great Democratic leader, to make an address before the student body of the University some time during the latter part of this week. Mr. Bryan has accepted the invitation, and will probably come down from Birmingham about Thursday night.—The Crimson-White, U. of Ala.

Cornell has abolished the honor system and hereafter will keep students on examinations under surveillance. We agree with our contemporaries, The Virginia Tech, College Topics, and The Red and Black in thinking that Cornell has made a mistake. The system of putting students on their honor while standing examinations has been in use at the University of North Carolina for several years and it has not yet been condemned as a failure. It is true that there have been several cases of cheating during this time but those found guilty of it were invariably found to be of a very low order morally and mentally or they had come from prep. schools where cheating on examinations is open and flagrant.

There is only one thing to be done with a man caught cheating—the student body should place him on the next train and tell him to leave.

"There is some complaint among Southern colleges because North Carolina refuses to give them any games either in foot ball or base all. It seems to us that we do neglect our neighbors too much. The colleges to the north of us receive the greater part of the athletes from the northern States and in playing these institutions with more men and more means, we always place ourselves at a disadvantage. It is to be wondered at that we are so successful in these contests with our northern neighbors. But games with our fellow Southerners would help to bring about more friendly relations between our neighbors, and besides it would give us valuable training for the northern events which we consider more important. It might be well for our managers to think about this matter."

We copy the above from THE TAR HEEL, with the statement that the manager of the North Carolina base ball team offered Manager Clary $85 for a series of three games in Chapel Hill.—Vanderbilt Hustler.

And we copy the above with the statement that what the manager of the North Carolina base all team did do was to offer Vanderbilt $75 for a single game at Chapel Hill or 60 per cent. of the gate receipts at Durham, N. C.

The February number of the North Carolina Journal of Law is on our table and we are glad to note that it gives evidence of soon becoming an established institution. The frontispiece presents the likeness of Hon. Clement Manly, a well-known lawyer of the Winston bar. The first article in the Journal contains interesting comment on his paper. "The Jury System-Its Administration," read before the State Bar Association. Mr. Whitehead Klutz, one of the most gifted of young University alumni, contributes a forceful paper on "The Next Step in the Evolution of Punishments," a plea for the abolishment of capital punishment. "Leaves from a Lawyer's Note Book," by Mr. Chas. W. Tillett, of the Charlotte Bar, should be of interest and helpful to the practicing attorney. Mr. R. L. Gray presents some decisions by the Supreme Court, Fall Term, 1903. "The Judicial System of the Proprietary and Royal Governments in North Carolina to 1776," by Mr. R. W. Herring, U. N. C. '03 and Law '04 is a continued article that shows research of the highest order. The diction is good and the paragraphing excellent. This paper will doubtless attract attention: "Notes and Clippings," give some interesting legal comments. We sympathize with Judge MacRae in his failure to get the Journal through the postoffice at second class rates. The matter is first-class and certainly is entitled to second class rates.

Our readers are requested to read the advertisement in this issue of Gwyn & Horton, State Agts., for the Michigan Mutual Life Insurance Co. These gentlemen can give what they advertise.

A feature of the Charlotte Evening Chronicle last Thursday was a large cartoon drawn by the Chronicle's artist, Mr. G. D. Jones, representing a husky looking athlete with a C on his breast, regarding tacked up on a nail an "Invitation to be in Field Day with Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Chicago." Underneath was the label, "North Carolina Attracting Outside Attention." The idea was a good one and the drawing first-rate.

Virginia is to have three coaches at work on her team this Spring. Mr. Walter Curley, head coach, was 2nd baseman on Virginia's '97-98 team. He has also played with Springfield, Mass., and Chicago Orth, the Washington League pitcher, will coach the pitchers for two weeks, beginning on March 7th. Mr. A. H. Hopkins, "a Southpaw," will be the third coach and will also devote considerable attention to the pitchers. Our old rival seems to intend leaving no stone unturned to prevent Carolina's repeating her little stunt of last year.

Zeta Psi Reception.

The Zeta Psi fraternity gave an informal reception Saturday night in honor of the young ladies on the Hill for the February german. Those present were:

M. C. Staton with Miss Boyden, of Salisbury; C. Carr with Miss Flynn, of Columbia, S. C.; A. W.

Haywood with Miss Flynn, of Columbia, S. C.; T. Dortch with Miss Barringer, of Charlottesville, Va.; P. Faison with Miss Venable, of Chapel Hill; H. M. Jones with Miss Battle, of Warrenton; Lewis with Miss P. Bridgers, of Tarboro; W. H. Smith with Miss R. Bridgers, of Tarboro; T. Cheshire with Miss Capehart, Avoca; J. Cheshire with Miss McNeely, of Salisbury; Dr. and Mrs. Mangum; Dr. and Mrs. Howe.

Couldn't Have Been Council

The evening of the last Carolina game a bunch of U. Va.'s, happening to be passing a dark corner near Murphy's lumped into a limp object wailing dolefully to itself the following, to the tune of "When the Harvest Days Are Over, Jessie Dear."

"When the second half is over, O'lina dear,
And the ref'ree's lil' whis'les blowst sho clear,
We will keep er wor' w' said,
F'r, po' thing you'll be quite dead,
W'en er shecon' h-half sover, O'lina dear.

Taking him softly into their arms they gently broke to him the fact that it was getting near time for breakfast, and made a chop taste good quite as well as a nice cold bath.—College Topics.

Other colleges should follow this excellent example: Cornell will give a formal banquet to her debating teams this year, in order to create interest in literary work. Heretofore all attentions have been showered on athletic teams. The athlete, while good in his way, has become too much "the man" in college circles.

A Bottle of Beans.

We have a bottle in our room which is filled with beans of various sizes and shapes. For each dollar traded with us this Spring will be given one guess at the number of beans in the bottle. Are Rich Men's Sons Really to be Pitted?

A friend of THE TAR HEEL sends us the clipping below which we take great pleasure in publishing. We have always felt sorry for rich men's sons, and join with Mr. Carnegie in the deepest commiseration for those born with a superabundance of filthy lucre.

The clipping follows:

"Oh, how I pity the boy who is born the son of a millionaire!" cried Mr. Carnegie at a recent dinner. And the exclamation has started an interesting debate on the relative advantages of wealth and poverty in youth.

It depends largely on the boy, of course.

Riches are not good for the lad who is not endowed with energy of character. Such a one takes the line of least resistance, lives in idleness and will be fortunate if he does not go to the bad. Had he been born poor the necessity of supporting himself might have developed in him industry, self-reliance and a desire to amount to something.

On the other hand, a boy of unusual ability is not to be pitied by Mr. Carnegie or anybody else because he has parents who can give him education, remove obstacles from his path and let him have all his time for the cultivation of his powers and the pursuit of his career.

No doubt many men who have won success, owe it to the goad of early poverty, to the struggles which sharpened their wits, strengthened their wills and enabled them to measure themselves accurately, through competition with rivals.

Between Mr. Carnegie's commiserated "son of a millionaire" and the son of bitter poverty, however, there are a good many degrees. A home of want may be a good school for genius, or very great talent, but the world is full of men who would have reached a much more comfortable plain had they had better opportunities in boyhood. The exceptional lad whose parents are very poor will find ways for mental improvement, but the average boy in such circumstances, like the commonplace son of the millionaire, will accept things as he finds them. He will do his daily drudgery for bread and remain in the station wherein it has pleased Providence to place him. That is, he will "assimilate to his environment."

Each state has its disadvantages, but the judgment of most men of common sense is against poverty as a desirable inheritance.

Bring the question home to yourself: Would you, if you were rich, like your boy to be deprived of the chances you money is able to offer him? And if you are poor, would you not like to be well-to-do so that you might give your son a better start in life than, because of your poverty, he can have?

Boys with the right kind of stuff in them, whether rich or poor, will manage to make men of themselves.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1904.

No. 19.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

THE PASSING OF COUNCIL.

The Hero Unaccountably Disappears from Virginia and Seeks Another Clime

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 17. — Somewhat of a stir was created in athletic circles at the University of Virginia at the opening of the present session when Karl C. Pritchard, of Huntington, W. Va., formerly of Lafayette College, Pa., and one of the star college pitchers of the country, suddenly withdrew from college and left for Philadelphia to enter a medical school in that city. Now comes another loss to Virginia athletics, even more severe. Walter W. Council, acknowledged to be the best all-round football player in the South, and alike proficient in base-ball, has suddenly taken French leave and gone to parts unknown. His associates in college are puzzled at his departure and are at a loss to assign any cause for his sudden leave-taking. His baggage was at the depot and he was in the act of purchasing his ticket before any of his fellow students became aware of his intentions. When last heard from he was in Palm Beach, Fla.

Council had made nearly all of his tickets, and would have easily graduated in medicine next session. He was an unusually good student, despite his active participation in every form of athletics.

Council came to Virginia from the University of North Carolina in the fall of 1901, and played on both foot-ball and base-ball teams of that and the succeeding sessions. His record on the gridiron during the past season was such a brilliant one that he was unanimously chosen captain of the 1904 eleven. On account of his father's objection to foot-ball, his selection to the captaincy of the team was never made public, in the hope that parental objection would be withdrawn before the season rolled round.

Some trouble in this connection is believed to be the reason for his withdrawal from the University.

Mr. Council's father is a wealthy lumber dealer and merchant of Wananish, N. C.—Richmond Times Dispatch.

Alas for the passing of old "Bull." How often has thy name been appended to nine 'rahs from countless exultant throats on many a tramped field! How often in a critical moment has thy burly form been upreared and hurled into an opponent's line with a rattling crash while the side-lines resounded with the echo, "Council, Council, Council!" How long has thy name been a terror and thy mighty muscles contemplated with awe! But now gone is thy glory and thy fame vanished even as the summer zephyr is lost in the long low murmur of the pines.

How is the mighty fallen! Once the hero of all Carolina's contests and the bull of many an arena decorated with white and blue, Walter could not withstand the blandishments and seductive wiles of the athletic directors belonging to Carolina's ancient rival; he deserted bag and baggage to the ranks of the enemy. But the fast and furious life of U. Va. was not suited to the placid temperament of Council. Amid the flowing of the bowl and the sounds of revelry, he began to sigh for the plain flesh-pots and cornbread of the good Old North State. His athletic fame did not expand as was expected. His old comrades had an exasperating way of developing surprising strength at the same time least expected and shoving old Bull clean off both diamond and gridiron. This was not what he had come to Virginia for, so silently and swiftly, even as a thief in the night, Bull packed his duds of blue and orange, and purchased for himself a ticket to Palm Beach, Fla. Perhaps even now on some desolate coast by the sad sea-waves sits the fallen hero, gazing far into the distance. At his feet the wavelets lap monotonously; overhead the sea-gull croaks in mournful fashion while the sea-breeze whispers plaintively among his tangled locks. Before the eyes of the late lamented swims a misty blue cloud and on it inscribed in letters of spotless white: "Carolina - sixteen, Virginia - nothing;" and the wild waves answer, "Nothing!"

Fresh Medals Awarded by '06.

The following medals were awarded, with appropriate ceremonies, to the representative members of the Fresh class, at 12 o'clock on the night of the 22nd. The fact that no more were awarded was not at all due to a lack of material in the Freshman class and it is hoped that none feel slighted.

February University Sermon.

Rev. Mr. Horsefield, of Goldsboro, preached a very pleasing sermon last Sunday evening in the college Chapel. His text was from Matthew, 12:20, "And smoking flax shall he not quench." The speaker compared man's spiritual life to the wick in a burning lamp.

"The wick sometimes becomes clogged and burns low, when it is cleaned up grows brighter and brighter until it shines clearly. Just so when man's spiritual lamp burns low the Lord does not quench it, but guards and cares for it.

"All round us is destruction. Out of the struggle of life comes the survival of the fittest. This is true in the animal life and in the busy life of man. A cruel and pitiless lesson it is. Then there is the struggle for mastery. Man is never satisfied. He wins high place and to that degree he is master of his life.

"God stands by the weak. He uses tenderness instead of power, love instead of cruelty, and instead of the survival of the fittest the Master raises up the weak. He reawakens the melody of real manhood and spiritual power. We let impure desires and worldly cares clog and dim our light.

"All things begin small, so does faith, but sometimes we let our intellect interfere and our faith grows weaker. Man has this light in him, and the love of God saves and fills him with light and life. As this weak light in man is made to grow, he becomes a new creature in Christ.

"Many face Christianity at a wrong angle. A Christian is not artificial. He is a normal man. He is right with the world. He has all the beauty and power and dignity of manhood. The Master makes his life grow brighter and purer.

A canner exceedingly canny,
One morning remarked to his granny,
If a canner can can Anything that he can,
Then a canner can't can a can can he?

We are sorry to see some of the hazing spirit showing itself around college again. We had entertained hopes that we had outgrown this sort of thing. All the leading colleges have done away with the practice and it seems childish and medieval to have it in our midst again.

A year or two ago there came to the University a freshman who had evidently been the petted and spoiled darling of a doting household. He seemed a quiet, inoffensive kind of young fellow and he lived in deathly terror of being hazed. There was little hazing going on at the time but night after night he begged, implored, beseeched to be permitted to sleep on a couch in the room of a certain upperclassman where he knew he would not be molested. In this way he passed his freshman year unharmed.

A year later, on hearing a disturbance out in the hall, this upperclassman opened his door to investigate. In a ring of Sophomores who were exultantly tossing a pale and frightened freshman in a blanket, he beheld his one-time freshman, now a Sophomore, loud-mouthed, blatant, the ringleader of the gang. He was enjoying himself hugely, when he suddenly caught sight of the upper-classman in the doorway. His expression changed, he forsook his crowd and slunk off into the darkness like a cringing, beaten hound.

The pitiful cowardice of it all!

This sort of spirit is what makes the practice of hazing appear so small and contemptible. But not all the hazers are cowards. We have seen many good, self-respecting men in hazing gangs and it is always with surprise that we behold them. Though we know them to be men of real ability, we never can think the same of them for being mixed up in a crowd, the majority of whom they know to be thorough cowards at heart.

We are not denouncing hazers so much for treating freshmen roughly. Life is not all a bed of roses and a little rough treatment is not going to hurt the right kind of man. There are some men who come to college who have been reared in luxury and ease, and a little bumping up against the hard facts of life will give them a new outlook on things. We all have something of the bully in us. It seems to be a tendency of animal nature to dominate and impose on an inferior.

But hazing is not a square and manly thing. It is putting one's self on a level with the fighting-cock, the bull dog and the town bully. It is an evil in our University life and there must be an end to it sooner or later.

"Princeton, N. J. Feb. 16—Princeton's "honor system committee" today submitted to the undergraduates its report on the recent exposure of cheating in examinations. The report says: "It has been found necessary to expel six men from college for breaking the honor system, and to suspend one for two and one half months.

The committee publicly thanked Thomas D. Dallmeyer, 1907, Pittsburg, for his assistance in securing the evidence against two residents of the town who stole examination papers."

A friend has sent us the above newspaper clipping for which we are grateful, as it illustrates our point exactly. There is a very strong sentiment here against cheating on examinations and the man who procures assistance on his paper is looked on with deserved contempt; but there is no organized opinion against his breaking of the honor system. It seems to us that there should be a tribunal composed of members from all classes and departments, and when a man is caught cheating, he should be at once tried and requested to take his departure. We have the right kind of sentiment about the matter. All we need is a sentiment so strong that a man caught in any underhand business will feel the atmosphere here too uncomfortable to stay in.

NEW BOOK BY DR. RAPER.

Dr. C. L. Raper Issues a New Book Entitled "North Carolina, a Study in English Colonial Government."

Dr. C. L. Raper's new book on the colonial government of North Carolina under the English crown is just from the press of McMillan and Company. The book is entitled, "North Carolina; a Study in English Colonial Government." It is handsomely bound in cloth, is printed in excellent type on nice paper and contains nearly three hundred pages. As a history it will easily take its proper place at the front of North Carolina histories. As a study in government it is a valuable piece of political science. Though the book will prove of value to the students and readers of any State, since the colonial administration of North Carolina was like that of the other colonies, it will be almost indispensable to the North Carolinian interested in the history of his State.

The writer was unable to make a careful reading of the book, and cannot, therefore, make an elaborate review of it. The outline of the work, however, may be given here.

We hope the University Magazine will make a careful review of it.

The first chapter is an introduction.

LOCAL NOTES.

Rev. Lindo Brigman flitted down to Raleigh Monday morning for the purpose of hearing Hon. W. J. Bryan.

Mr. J. H. Vaughan left for a visit to his home Monday.

Mr. L. E. Rudisell spent Washington's Birthday at his home near Hickory.

An account of Washington's Birthday Exercises will appear in our next issue.

Mr. William Calvin Rankin, laboratory assistant in the Germanic languages, left Friday afternoon for Durham to visit relatives.

Mr. S. Subsidy Robins was seen at large on the streets of Durham Saturday and Sunday.

Hon. John A. Parker left for his home Friday to remain over till Tuesday.

Mr. J. V. Howard left Saturday morning for Wilson to visit friends and relatives.

T. K. Sutton, '04, was painfully injured in the Chemical laboratory by the explosion of a tube of sulphuric acid, which splattered over his face and hands, causing some very bad burns. Medical assistance brought relief and it is hoped that Mr. Sutton's injuries will not be serious.

The system of lectures, public and star course, inaugurated at the University several years ago is proving exceedingly beneficial to the students as well as very helpful to the faculty and towns-people. Each season there are some splendid lectures by members of the University teaching staff and also star course entertainments from some of the best lyceum stage talent in the country. The lectures and entertainments this season have come up fully to the usual standard. Some of those yet to be given are as follows:

- February 18, Dr. C. A. Smith.
- February 25, Dr. F. Hopkins Smith.
- March 3, Dr. I. H. Manning.
- March 10, Dr. W. I. Royster.
- March 17, Dr. A. Henderson.
- April 21, The Chicago Glee Club.

There is also to be a lecture by Ex-Governor Bob Taylor and possibly one by John Fox, Jr.

tory one, giving a review of the proprietary period from 1693 to 1729, when the colony became a royal province.

Chapter II, "The Governor Under the Crown," discusses the powers and functions of the governor, and his relation to the crown and to the people. There is a brief sketch of the character and administration of each of the Royal Governors.

Chapter III explains the status, function, and administration of the Governor's Council. Its working under each of the royal governors is shown.

Chapter IV, "The Lower House of the Legislature," deals with the status and functions of this popular assembly, and explains its powers and duties relating to territory, finance and the judicial system.

Chapter V is a review of the Territorial System and Administration in the colony, both under the proprietors and the crown, as the crown allowed much of the former system to remain.

Chapter VI, "The Fiscal System," deals with the forms of money, bills of credit and other media of exchange.

Chapter VII, "The Judicial System," discusses and explains the various courts in the colony.

Chapter VIII explains the system of defense in the colony.

Chapter IX is a careful review of the conflicts between the Executive and the Lower House. These conflicts between the representative of the crown and those of the people were about the subjects of territory, finance and justice.

Chapter X is on "The Downfall of the Royal Government." This shows how these three sources of conflict led up to and caused the American Revolution. They were not confined to North Carolina, but were the moving causes of the opposition to the mother country in all the colonies. The administration of the royal governors and that of the Provincial Congress immediately prior to the war, was dealt with in a very interesting way.

It is always with pleasure that THE TAR HEEL takes notice of any literary productions of the faculty. Dr. Raper's book is by no means an exception. We would recommend it to every student of the University and to every citizen of the State.

New Football Coach.

Coach Brown, who last fall coached V. P. I.'s foot ball team, has been secured to coach Carolina's team next fall. V. P. I. hated to let him go, and offered him more money than we, but he had to refuse them as he had already signed our contract. Mr. Brown is a very fine coach of the specific part of the art that our team has for the last two years been weakest. For the last two years we have had the best offensive team in the South. For the last two years, also, V. P. I. has put up the strongest defensive game against us. Therefore it is believed that with V. P. I.'s former coach, coupled with the fine offensive training of that portion of the Varsity which will return, a very well rounded, strong team will be produced. We are happy to secure Coach Brown.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

An interesting and instructive Programme Rendered on February 22nd by Messrs. Stewart, Stern and Dr. C. L. Raper.

The annual George Washington's birthday celebration was held in Gerrard Hall Monday. Mr. Pharr presided and Mr. Stancell acted as Secretary. The exercises were good. The speeches were not only well prepared but were interesting. After prayer by Rev. Mr. Moss, the president announced the first speaker as Mr. R. S. Stewart of the Di.

His theme was: "Opportunities of the Southern Young Man."

We have met to celebrate the birthday of the one man who did most to secure to every American citizen, liberty, and on such a day, when every heart beats with a pure patriotism we do not hesitate to say a few words about our own section of the nation, the South. In order for a man to become great he must have some vital problem of life to solve. It was so with Caesar, with Luther and with our own Washington. For a man to become great he must have a stage on which to act. The South is now problematic, it is a magnificent stage for great actors. The political and the financial problems are the ones with which we must grapple. First of all the South must develop her natural resources and thus become a centre in Financial and Industrial life, for he who is ruler of the business world is ruler of the whole world. We are living in a material age. We have the resources and all we need is the brain and energy to develop them. Closely following is the political situation. We must cease to vote for parties and begin to vote for men, for principle. The parties are too narrow in their views and hence he is considered a traitor who votes against his party. Such should not exist in healthy political parties. Then, too, we must solve the negro problem. We have mistreated the negro and then cleared ourselves of crime—in other words we have entered a spirit of lawlessness. We are placing too small a value on human life. Negro education is a failure. You rarely see a negro boy as good as his father before him. No real solution has yet been formed; yet Dr. Bassett and Mr. Walter Page have broken ground upon the education and the truth lies somewhere between their views. Who is able to solve these problems and be hailed as Washington the second?

The next speaker was Mr. D. P. Stern of the Phi. His subject was: "The Young Man and the State."

It is well to celebrate the birthday of Washington. Such celebration should not consist of mere vain boasting of past glory or longing for a return of the good old ways of the fathers. It is only valuable in so far as it gives us an opportunity to stop and take a look and examine the conditions and forces about us. That phase of our life which is probably most neglected is the duty that we owe to the State. For every citizen owes a duty to the State. He can pay that duty best to-day by viewing our great problems in a larger and more liberal way, with a higher conception of National sentiment, than at present pertains. This is especially true of the great industrial problems of the day. These problems must be worked out under our party systems. A better knowledge of the proper place of the party in our government and our daily life is absolutely essential. This knowledge is to be gained, these problems solved by all men taking a lively, healthy interest in the thoughts and activities of the political world about them. Everyone should do this but there are some who by temperament and disposition and training are peculiarly fitted for the work of governing and these should devote themselves to politics as a profession and it is herein that the solution of many of our present day problems lies, the solution of which means that America shall lead the world.

The last speaker was Dr. C. L. Raper. Subject: "The Constitutional Revolution."

The following were the chief points.

The Revolution, which by many is thought of as having its origin in 1776, was in reality the work of a century or more; it was the result of several fundamental forces working themselves out through a long period. George Washington, who is reported by many as being the head and shoulders of the Revolution, was, in fact, only one of its great leaders, he did not at all create the Revolution. He was, however, able to appreciate the direction of the forces which had been at work and to lead them at the last to a great result. The real Revolution was the result of the Colonial idea in conflict with the English idea, largely on these three problems: the administration of the territorial system, the administration of the fiscal system and the administration of the judicial system. These were the causes of the great constitutional struggles and bothers of the Colonial period; these problems with the struggles which they produced were the Revolution itself. We are in the habit of thinking of these three problems as being solved when the Colonies overthrew the control of England, but this is by no means the case. These three problems, certainly finance and justice, are still the great problems of every State; they will continue to be the fundamental problems of all people whether they govern themselves or are governed by other people. These problems are surely most important to the people of the United States in the Colonial administration of their provinces—Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines.

Review of the February Magazine.

The February number of the University Magazine came out more nearly on time than the preceding issues. It is a very creditable issue.

It opens with an admirable poem by R. M. Roach, entitled "Futurity."

The next article is the speech of Mr. A. H. Johnston, which won the Bingham Medal at the last commencement. The title is "Direct Election of United States Senators." Mr. Johnston argues that the present system of election was the effect of an aristocratic feeling in the makers of the constitution and that as this feeling has given way before the democratic growth of the people, we require the more democratic method of direct election. He further shows that the change will not alter the character of the Senate, but make it more useful by making it responsible to the people; that it will still preserve State representation, and will be a blessing to both State and nation. We need offer no word of criticism of a speech which has been already so honored.

"Social Coloriug of the Book of Job," by W. F. McCausless, is an attempt to find in the book some knowledge of the people. The incidents of the book, says the writer, are supposed to have occurred between the time of the Flood and that of Moses. The people were in the patriarchal state of society. Yet many of their manners and customs were much the same as those of today. The article shows careful study of the facts and a good handling of them. Several quotations are introduced to explain and to illustrate the points.

"Carlisle's 'Essay on Characteristics' Only a Half-truth" is a criticism by W. K. Perrett of the essay. The doctrine of the essay is that "the healthy know not of their health, but only the sick." It teaches the gospel of unconscious power. Mr. Perrett denies this doctrine, showing that "to know ourselves is not conceit" and that unconsciousness is not an "unmistakable evidence of healthy condition." This seems to us a very just criticism.

"To the Lady in the Moon," by M. H., is, like other productions of the writer, a poem of a high order. It is smooth, clear, fresh and of a dignity that lifts the mind above the things around it to see the "fair and cold and inaccessible" Lady of the Moon. Such poetry as this always does credit to the Magazine.

When we come to the fiction department we feel that the stories are not what they should be. Some of them are very good; but in the main, they are confined to the love affairs of the college boy. We need more interest in story writing, and more stories of a better sort. The Harris Medal should stimulate this interest.

"Where Beauty is Dust" is a love story of a crippled college student and a consumptive co-ed. "A Spectre to the Rescue" is a somewhat amusing story of love by the sea. The writer fails in his attempt at weirdness. "The Purple Flea Mine" is a very good story of its kind. It describes the stragem resorted to to rid a mine of fleas, only to find the gold to be iron pyrites. "A Night with Grandpa" is a philosophical meditation, suggested by a fire-side scene and Juvenal's satire on old age. "Her Report of the Game" is a very laughable account of a foot ball game, as given by a rustic mother who had been to college to see her son. The writer handles his story well.

In the editorial department we note a suggestion to institute an employment bureau. THE TAR HEEL endorses this and wishes to see the suggestion become a working bureau. Nothing could be more advantageous to the man who works his way through college.

We wish to congratulate the Magazine editors on their publication. Its contents, with the exception of some of the fiction are very good. But there is one very serious trouble—there is not enough of it. The Magazine should be two or three times its present thickness. This is by no means the fault of the editorial board, but it is the fault of the student body. We need more interest in such work. Let us have it. We know there is more literary ability in the University than shows itself in the Magazine. The cause of its not being shown is a certain carelessness of such matters. Every student owes it to himself and to his college to develop his literary talents and to make the Magazine second to none. Let us have more work of this sort.

Dr. Alderman's Marriage.

Wednesday evening last, at 8 p. m., Miss Bessie Greene Hearn, of this city, was married to Dr. Edwin Anderson Alderman at the home of her parents in Audubon Place. The bridesmaid was Miss Helen Pennypacker, of Philadelphia, while the best man was Mr. Thomas Sloo, of this city. The newly-wedded couple left for Pass Christian, where they remained until Saturday night and then left on the Morgan liner "Louisiana" for Havana, where they will remain for some time. The Olive and Blue offers its best wishes to the happy couple.—Olive and Blue, Tulane University.

The Tar Heel also extends best wishes to our quondam President in his new happiness.

As warm weather draws nigh and the crack of the base-ball bat is heard in the land, we suppose it will soon be time for the track team to commence warming up. We trust that every student realizes what an opportunity we have to make a name for ourselves in track athletics this spring. Besides our annual meet with Virginia, we have been invited to take part in Penn's Field Day. If we can make a creditable showing against the big colleges we will go up against them, it will mean a great deal for Carolina. We have excellent material for a first-class team and we hope that those who have had experience in track work will not hang back nor any others who desire to heap glory on themselves, and the White and Blue. We have an opportunity; let us make the most of it.

"One reason that the writer is fond of Dr. C. Alphonso Smith is that he is like folks and he can turn from literature and play the banjo like a farm hand. Most other men of his attainment smack of the can-talk shop. Oh, this weary self-importance that makes the individual and the world so uninteresting."

Dr. Smith again comes in for mention in Mr. Avery's Comment Column.

Meantime our curiosity is becoming immensely excited. There are very few of us who have had the pleasure of hearing our honored professor perform on the banjo—that peculiarly American instrument. If the Musical Association gives an entertainment this year, we suggest, that the college make a unanimous request that Dr. Smith appear with his banjo and render a few selections. We are sure that the entire University will not rest easy till it hears Dr. Smith play that banjo.

Charlotte boys who were University students noticed that Mr. Thomas Hill led the annual February german at the University Friday and were reminded of the singular talents of that young gentleman. Mr. Hill is a cosmopolite from Hillsboro. Last June he worked his way over to Europe in a cattle ship, and met a man named Montana Bill, who used to catch cattle by the horns and throw them down just for the fun of the thing. Mr. Hill saw Europe on $150, and discovered that ladies in Paris are cultivating a mustache. Afterwards he and Montana Bill returned to America, and Mr. Hill went back to the University, where he is universally beloved. No point is made in the story, except that Mr. Hill is selected as an example for enterprise; and it isn't every day that one looks upon a man who leads a University german in work hours and fraternizes with Montana Bills and cattle during his holiday. It is not even singular that the men who can foregather with Montana Bill and Montezuma Joes do not get the buck fever at the sight of a dress suit. Mr. Hill may return to his native town and go to sleep or he may be President, as he ought to be; but he is a good sort of a spirit at the University—he and his instructor, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, who clings to the banjo and a few words that aren't of the cult of isms.—I. E. Avery in Charlotte Observer.

Well, Mr. Thomas Hill, '05, has attained immortality at last. We have been wondering for some time where he would break out next, but not once did we suspect that it would be in Mr. Avery's Variety of Idle Comment. Dr. Alphonso Smith has already his name and fame spread through the land by The Comment Man as the professor who is "just like folks"; and now Tom Hill comes in for remark. Well, Thomas deserves that his name be made famous, we think. That is just what makes him "universally beloved"—he is equally ready to lead a University german or fraternize with Montana Bill! There is no trace of snobbery about your friend Mr. Hill. He is probably a good type of University students—bold, adventurous, generous, open-hearted and he doesn't let his studies interfere with his college education.

Though Mr. Avery has hit upon two good points about the University in Dr. Smith and Mr. Hill, there are many other things around the Hill with which he is not acquainted and something is missing out of his life on that account. He has never seen Brown, who has been to South Africa and had many hair-breadth 'scapes. He has never been to Durham with the Brothers Bruti, as they sallied forth accompanied by Mallison, their valet, and a couple of white waistcoats. He has probably heard what Dr. Venable calls "the dulcet notes" of Dr. Smith, but he has never the fervid eloquence of the departed Redfern, nor was he present at the immortal lecture of Squire Patton on Shorthand; Squire alone would give him enough material to write several columns on. He has never heard the Presbyterian choir or seen Robins and Dameron as they reached way down in their in'ards for a real heavy, low note. He has never seen Bully Jones dressing to go calling, or Newton take a look at the ribbons fluttering on the side lines, draw a deep breath and make 17 yards through a tangled mass of humanity on the gridiron.

We could go on thus indefinitely, but these instances are enough to show how much Mr. Avery has missed. No, Mr. Hill and Dr. Smith are a large section of University life, but they are not all.

The Yale foot ball men have chosen as their leader for next year
James J. Hogan, the big tackle.

The lowest cost for a year at Yale was $100 by a man who spent only $550 during his whole course. The highest individual expenditure in a single year was $11,000. The maximum course for four years was $25,000.

The woman's college record for the 100-yard dash has been lowered from 14 1-2 to 13 1-2 seconds, by Miss Laura Clement, of the freshman class of Wellesly.

Caspar Whitney has given what can probably be truthfully called the most satisfactory estimate of the doings of the foot ball world for 1903 that has heretofore been written. The other great judges of foot ball ability have shown marked prejudiced opinions in nearly all cases. Mr. Whitney's rating is this: 1, Princeton; 2, Dartmouth;
3, Yale; 4, Minnesota; 5, Michigan;
6, Harvard; 7, Carlisle; 8, West Point; 9, Columbia; 10, Pennsylvania; 11, Lehigh; 12, Dickinson.
Cornell is ranked 18th with Am-hearst, Brown and Wesleyan following.

A very distinguished alumnus of the University died recently in Washington City. This Dr. Emile
A. DeSchweinitz, chief of the biochemic division of the bureau of animal industry of the Agricultural Department. Death was caused by the effects of uraemic poisoning.
Dr. DeSchweinitz was born at Winston in 1866. He was son of Bishop DeSchweinitz, a famous ecclesiastic of the Moravian Church, in that town, and Sophia Herman De-Schweinitz. He was of Moravian extraction, and it has been said that a member of his family in Europe is now serving as a special attendant upon the Crown Prince of Germany.

We have long noticed the use of a phrase that we think should be abandoned. We refer to speaking of the University as a "school." We hear this every day, and see it in every exchange except one. The noticable exception being College
Topics, published at the University of Virginia, which always, and we think in very good taste, refers to their Institution as "College." This practice seems to be but a relic of our prep school days and should be left for school boys. Let us try to realize even in common every day speech, that our University is not a school, but a college, and should be thought of and spoken of as such. It may be urged that it is but a mere matter of words, but granting that, it must be admitted that the very words we use often shape our conceptions and give them dignity or not. We think Vanderbilt University with its seven departments and 800 students deserves the name of "college" from her own best friends, and we hope in time that she will get it.—The Hustler.

We never hear the expression
"school," meaning the University around here.

Dr. Hume's Address Before the Y. M. C. A.

Dr. Thomas Hume's very strik-ing address on Thursday night was heard by a good audience. The subject was an unusual but ap-propriate one, a review of the history of the Association and the lessons to be derived from the four crises in its life. Its resuscitation from approaching death, two remark-able spiritual awakenings and the inspiring Students' Volunteer Movement in which, several years ago, the Association was the affec-tive leader were briefly and vividly sketched by one who had taken great interest in things.

Teacher—"Now, we have named all the domestic animals except one. It has bristly hair and likes mud and dirt. Do you know what it is, Johnny?"
Johnny (shamefacedly)—"Yes'm, it's me."

"Speaking of bathing in famous springs," said the tramp to a group of tourists, "I bathed in the Spring of '86."—Ex.

Tis better in your haste to state
All men are liars, than
To pick out one and designate
That fellow as the man.—Ex.

Weary Willie—Did you ever see a dog dat would eat dirt?
Frayed Foster—No; has some dog been bitin' you?—Ex.

Inter-State Convention.

The first inter-State Convention of Young Men's Christian Associ-ations of the Carolinas was held at Spartanburg, S. C., February 20-24. Among the prominent speakers present was Rev. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton. A pleas-ant reception was given to the con-vention Monday evening by the stu-dents and faculty of Converse Col-lege. About two hundred dele-gates, a third of whom were col-lege men, were present. Dr. Ven-able and Mr. Mitchener, of New York, spoke to the college men Sunday morning. Those present from the University were: Dr. Ven-able, Messrs. R. M. Harper and E. McDonald. Three more Uni-versity men were at the convention representing their respective asso-ciations, Prof. Holmes, of Elon College; Dicie Winston, of Frank-lin county, and S. E. McNeely, of Mooresville.

Base Ball.

The base-ball practices so far have been impeded by the weather. The candidates, however, have been working as much as possible; and they look like a promising lot from which to choose a team. At present the contests for the differ-ent positions are very interesting, for the fact is well established that Carolina's players make the Varsity by ability only.

The first game of the season will be played with Bingham Monday. Bingham has a good nine this year and she will make things interest-ing for the Varsity. It will be pleasant to see the White and Blue on the diamond again, and to hear the yells as the contest proceeds. The opening of the season is greet-ed joyfully.

A Knock.

There is very little rooting at the base-ball practices, except an oc-casional laugh or jeer. Whenever a player happens not to stop a ball he is laughed at by on-lookers who couldn't stop a hoky-poky go cart in August. Such jeerings by the weak may be natural and unavoi-dable. So the writer urges very ten-derly that all who must laugh and jeer when they see a superior's er-ror will kindly, for the sake of the team, keep away from the prac-tices.

The University man watches these practices critically, and when he sees a good play he "opens up" to support the work with his appro-VAL. New students will please take notice.

The recent terrible fires in Chicago, Baltimore and other places are making folks wake up and look about them. Experience is a hard teacher but her lessons are never forgotten. It might be well for us to look at our own buildings a bit. The Carr, South and Mary Ann Smith buildings have hallways through them and in case of fire in one end, the inmates can escape in safety from the other. But then let us turn our attention to the Old West and Old East Buildings. Suppose fire should break out in one of the entrances. There are no hallways between and the inmates would have to descend the way they came up—down a narrow stairway. Suppose fire should break out in one of the thousand mysterious ways habitual to the devouring element; the draught from the doors below would sweep the curling flames and dense smoke straight up the chimney-like hallways; and the suddenly aroused inmates on the third floor would have their choice of descending through a roaring, seething mass of flame and smoke, or diving out of a third story window.

It is not for us to blame any one or suggest any remedy; but we just say—suppose.

Our first game for the season of 1904 comes off next Monday with Bingham. In regard to this game and other games we wish to speak a word or two.

At most of our base ball games our side-line and bleacher artists are in the habit of indulging in witty remarks and other merriment at the expense of the opposing team; teams from the preparatory schools seem to be special marks for the withering satire of the fans. Now in the first place this is not the way to help the Varsity; what it needs is some good, honest, throaty yells. They will help the men in White and Blue and discourage opponents as no scattering jokes and jeers can do. There is far too little cheering at our games anyhow.

In the second place it is beneath our dignity as students of the State University to get into a war of words with prep. school base ball nines. This is not meant as any reflection on our prep. schools, but simply as a reminder that a University man is supposed to be of more age and dignity than a prep. school student.

In the third place let us remember that our preparatory schools are direct feeders on the University and our Varsity athletic teams. Many of the teachers in the State's preparatory schools are University graduates and naturally their influence turns their pupils toward their Alma Mater. But on account of the jibes and jeers with which he is received the prep. student is apt to carry away resentment in his heart, and probably in this way many a good man is lost to the University and the Varsity.

Let us think over this matter a little, and hereafter treat the members of all athletic teams who come to contest with us as gentlemen and worthy opponents.

We note that a reception was recently given to the editors of the University of North Carolina Magazine. Truly, the prophet is honored more at Carolina than at Virginia. We are afraid the editorial board of our Magazine would die of heart disease if they were given any credit for their work.—College Topics.

A school of Journalism has been started at the University of Virginia.

We cannot refrain from saying a personal word about Bishop Coke Smith who is to be with us from Friday till Sunday. Those who attend his talks and sermons are not going to be bored by any hackneyed guff or worn out platitudes. Bishop Smith is a keen observer of life and he says things like nobody else says them. We feel pretty sure that those who attend his lectures will be glad they went.

We acknowledge receipt of the first copy of The Albanite, a little weekly from St. Alban's School, Va. We find the familiar name, "Earle P. Holt," at the head of the editorial column. We wish The Albanite all success.

Winning More Than National Fame.

It is good to see any man, and particularly a North Carolinian, succeed in an undertaking. Dr. Charles Baskerville, of the State University, is winning more than national fame in his chemical researches. The lay mind doesn't propose to understand all about his experiments and his success therein, but he is succeeding in making a great reputation for himself and being an ornament to his State. And that is quite enough for one man to do.—Idle Comment in Charlotte Observer.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

Excavation Begun—The Structure to Cost $11,000 and Will Be Rushed to Completion.

Excavations were begun Friday for the Young Men's Christian Association Building at the University. From now on the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The excavation work and the laying of the foundation will be under the supervision of Professor Gore, who is Chairman of the Building Committee, and Mr. Frank Pickard. The remaining work will be given out to a contractor. The lowest contractor's bid for the entire construction of the building is $10,500.

Plans and various attempts toward securing this building have been made and remade within the past ten years. These efforts up to last summer resulted in securing about $1,200 in cash which Major Patterson, treasurer of the Building Fund, has in a far sighted way deposited in banks so it might draw interest.

At the beginning of last summer an issue of five thousand TAR HEELS was gotten out, giving a write up of the Association work and of its supreme need for a building here. After this a partial canvas of the State was made, chiefly through the work of Mr. Z. V. Judd, '03. This effort raised the Building Fund to about $8,000 in cash and in subscriptions in the form of notes.

At the beginning of last Fall the Building committee decided to begin work at once trusting in the student body and in the people of Chapel Hill and outside friends to contribute enough for the building's completion. Several prominent architects had been consulted and Mr. F. P. Milburn who drew the plans for the Alumni and Mary Ann Smith buildings made a proposition to the committee which caused a delay in beginning work. The final result of this was that Mr. Milburn made an outright gift of his plans—a gift of practically $500. The plans are now in the hands of the Building Committee.

The building as seen in this cut is hardly done justice. No shading could be used, only the outlines giving an idea of the size, dimensions and style are given. The building will contain two stories with an auditorium at the rear reaching to the roof. An idea of the auditorium is gained by observing a small section of it on the right hand side of the picture.

As one goes into the building through the front entrance he enters a short passage on the left side of which is a small cloak room or office, on the right a stairway. This passage leads into a reception hall having two rooms on the right and two on the left. Passing through this reception hall one enters the auditorium. On the second floor are four rooms and a Secretary's office.

The rooms on the first floor will be utilized for a parlor, a reading room, a game room, and a clearing house room. These rooms will be supplied with games, with music and with many other forms of healthful recreation imbued with the atmosphere of home and home life. The last named room will be a veritable clearing house for in this room headquarters will be provided for the University publications such as the MAGAZINE, THE TAR HEEL and and people of Chapel Hill are again called on to have a part in the erection of this building which seems absolutely essential for the true type of University life.

At the University of Virginia the Young Men's Christians Association is going to erect an elegant $60,000 building. A canvas just made among the student body resulted in the students contributing $4,000. The contributions ranged from $150 down. Besides this the YACKETY YACK. The Press Association and other such organizations will be greatly helped by having a place which will be the centre of college life. The convenient location of the building will cause the literary societies, the fraternities, and other such prominent organizations of the University to use the Association rooms for committee meetings and conferences.

All of the first floor will be so arranged that it may be thrown into one whole room for special occasions. Folding chairs will be placed in the auditorium so even this may be used along with the rooms for receptions to men students, or to the student body and the people of Chapel Hill, or to the Alumni and friends here at Commencement.

The building as thus planned will cost about $11,000. Of this amount about $8,000 have been raised. Within the next few days a committee of the student body will begin a canvas among the students, the faculty and the people of Chapel Hill for the amount necessary to complete the building. This canvas has been purposely deferred until work on the building was begun, because several efforts have been made in the past for this building and they have been unsuccessful. Never was it the fault of the faculty and student body, however, for each time they have made liberal subscriptions and stood ready to redeem their pledges provided the effort elsewhere had been successful. The alumni and friends throughout the State have helped first in this new movement and now as the foundation is being laid, as the movement is an assured success, the student body and the faculty, amount and the amount which the Alumni are going to give Virginia has already received a $40,000 gift for the building.

The alumni and friends of the University have responded nobly, the students and faculty of the University of Virginia have contributed nobly to their building, what shall the students and faculty of the University do for ours?

Carolina, 15; Bingham, 3.

The University ball nine defeated Bingham here yesterday afternoon by a score of 15 to 3. The three runs of Bingham were well earned. No runs were made by the visitors while Noble was pitching, but when Harris was in the box Bingham scored twice, and to this score was added one more run while Hobgood was pitching. These three runs more than anything else caused the excitement of the game. Otherwise the game can be judged from the following tabulated incidents.

BISHOP SMITH PREACHES.

Bishop A. Coke Smith Delivers a Series of Three Sermons Before the University Student Body.

On Saturday night and Sunday the students of the University were favored with three sermons by Bishop A. Coke Smith. Each of them was a masterful talk. On Saturday night he spoke in the chapel and on Sunday morning in the Methodist church. The sermon Sunday night was the regular University sermon for this month. The text was from Hebrews, the eighth chapter and fifth verse: "See that thou make all things according to the pattern showed thee in the mount." The speaker said in substance:

"All lives individual and national center about one idea. Without one central purpose no life can become great. The life of Greece centered about the idea of beauty; and Hellenism is today a synonym of beauty. Rome stood for law, and built up a great political and economic organization which ruled the world because it was subservient to law. So Israel stood for religion, for monotheism. This idea was dominant over all others. It controlled Jewish life and determined Jewish history. The successes of Israel were due to her adherence to this principle; her disasters are traced to her sins.

"This purpose of Israel was peculiarly God's purpose. Not that the purposes of Greece and Rome were not God's. They filled an important and necessary position in the building up of civilization. But Israel's purpose, being a religious one, was peculiarly God's own. They were his chosen people and he intended them to produce the Messiah. In them God cultivated a people who were to combine the highest fruits of humanity with the divine. This was his purpose; its development he left to Israel. So God has a purpose in every individual; the development is left to him. But in order to develop this purpose the idea needed incarnation. The religious life of Israel centered about the tabernacle. Hence in building the tabernacle everything must be done according to the divine pattern.

From this idea we get four lessons. The first one is that God has a purpose in every one. His purpose is not restricted to the great men, the leaders in the world. There must be the great bulk of the people before the leaders can accomplish anything. Lincoln said that "God must love the common people as he made more of them." Both the leader and the ordinary individual have a place in his great purpose. The working out of this purpose is left to the man, but is to be in accordance with the pattern of God.

"As the pattern for the tabernacle was shown to Moses in the

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Monday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

Within the next few days a committee of twenty representative men from the Young Men's Christian Association, the Fraternities, the Literary societies and from every phase of University life will begin a canvass in Chapel Hill for funds to complete the Y. M. C. A. Building. On another page we are giving a summary of the work done thus far.

It is hardly necessary for THE TAR HEEL to emphasize the need for such a building here at the University. There is no man in Chapel Hill who objects to such a structure on our campus; there is hardly a man in our college community who is not in sympathy with this movement; there are many who realize that this building is an absolute necessary for our University type of life. As much as we pride ourselves in having such strong college spirit, we cannot fail to see an element in which we are lacking. Our student life has no focus, no centre, no place where we all may meet together as in a home. We have no regular plan of meeting for our religious interests; we have no place where all may meet in a social way; we have no headquarters for our college publications and other college organizations, thus bringing about a closer relation between them and the student body.

One of the first things a stranger in Chapel Hill notices in the large number of men lounging around in the postoffice and in the stores of Chapel Hill. This seems to us to be explained in part by the fact that our college life has no centre.

If there be any good in University life we must not hide it; we must place it where it can best be assimilated. This assimilation is helped only by our direct contact with each other. And our central place of contact during rain or sunshine must necessarily be such a building as is now being erected for this purpose.

THE TAR HEEL desires to give its strongest endorsement to this movement and trusts that, as is now contemplated, the building will be completed during the coming college year.

James Lynch has been elected captain of the Cornell eleven. He has played only one year and then as a substitute quarter.

mount, so must our working out of God's purpose be in a high plane. It must be done according to his pattern. Everything, the small as well as the large, must be done in accordance with his purpose. This is shown in the workings of natural laws. The same law of gravity draws the tiny leaf fluttering to the ground, and holds the planets together. For the law to fail in its action toward one atom would throw the whole universe into confusion. It is to the little things of life that we must attend as well as to the great.

The last idea we get from this text is that we see the effects of our work only on completing it. The effect of Israel's working out of its religious purpose was seen only when Christ became its fruit. So it is with life. Its reward is had only when its aim is reached. The makers of costly tapestries sit on the wrong side of their cloth and work for years, putting in every thread with the greatest care, and never seeing the patterns they make. It is only after the work is finished that it is unfolded and they see the cloth on its right side. Every man has a part in God's purpose which he must fill as best he can by attention to all things. He will see its results and find his reward only when his work is finished.

Think twice before you speak and then talk to yourself.

Verily, in the midst of life we are in debt.

The man who tells you of all his troubles becomes one of yours.

LOCAL NOTES.

Mr. H. M. Emerson went to Raleigh Friday afternoon.

Mr. T. H. Haywood spent Saturday and Sunday at his home.

Dr. C. L. Raper failed to meet his classes Friday on account of sickness.

Mr. G. D. Vick returned Tuesday night from a several days' visit at Selma.

Mrs. J. R. Hiatt of Clinton visited her son Mr. H. B. Hiatt Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. C. W. Rowe spent Saturday in Greensboro.

Rev. J. T. Gibbs, presiding elder in the Methodist church, spent Sunday in Chapel Hill.

The regular exercises of both societies were postponed, that the members might attend Bishop Smith's lecture.

There was a contest in the Phi hall Monday night between the debaters of the Georgia-Carolina debate and the scrubs.

The Y. M. C. A. was led Tuesday night by Rev. M. T. Plyler.

Dr. C. L. Raper has been invited to deliver a series of lectures on North Carolina history before the Summer School of the A. and M. College, at Raleigh, in July and August.

Dr. W. I. Royster was unable to keep his appointment last week on account of indisposition. He lectures tonight in the Chapel at 8 o'clock on "Civilization and Nervous Prostration."

Carolina vs. Oak Ridge.

Oak Ridge will cross bats with U. N. C. this afternoon. This game is expected to be one of the most exciting of the season. For Carolina is getting in trim and Oak Ridge is a formidable opponent. On the visitor's nine are such old players as Cook, Stafford, Benbow and Bennett. Although Carolina does not expect such a surprise as the University of Virginia received at the hands of Woodbury Forest the other day when the former was white-washed by the preparatory school, yet those who know the strength of the two teams that are to play here this afternoon say that Carolina will have to exert herself to the fullest. At any rate, the game will be very interesting and well worth the price of admission.

Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

The 153rd meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society met in the Physics room Tuesday evening March 8th, at 7:30 P. M. The meeting was an interesting one and highly entertaining to all present. There was a large attendance of faculty and students.

The first paper presented was by Dr. A. S. Wheeler on "Mercuration." He showed that the process was discovered about thirty years ago by John Mercer. He explained what Mercerization was and showed some Mercerized cloth, he also gave some interesting figures concerning the reduction in prices in fine cloths as a result of the use of Mercerization

The next paper, "The Work of the Digestive Glands," was Dr. I. H. Manning. Dr. Mangum gave an interesting review of some recent work by Pofton and showed that the functions of the digestive glands was not very well understood. Therefore the treatment of the different forms of indigestion was largely empirical. This work of Potter throws much light on the functions of the digestive glands and promises to make the treatment of indigestion more rational.

"Kunzite, the New Gem; Its Unique Properties," with demonstrations, was the subject of a paper presented by Dr. Charles Baskerville. He pointed out a number of the rare properties of the Kunzite in an interesting manner by experiments. The effect of Radio-activity on Kunzite was also shown.

The Historical Society.

The North Carolina Historical Society met in the History lecture room Monday evening, March 14th, at seven o'clock. The following papers were read and discussed:

First, a paper by Mr. E. L. Sawyer, on "The Relation of the Crown to the North Carolina Colonists." This was an interesting and valuable discussion of the points of conflict between the Crown and Colonists.

Prof. M. C. S. Noble then read a paper on "The Downfall of Royal Power in North Carolina," in which he traced the diverging forces during the last two years of Royal government and showed how the Battle of Moores' Creek Bridge was the turning point which settled the Revolutionary destiny of North Carolina. This extremely interesting and instructive paper will be published in full in the April number of the North Carolina Booklet (issued from Raleigh) and should be read by Tar Heels.

The following students in the Pharmacy department went down to Raleigh Monday evening preparatory to taking the examination of the State board of Pharmacy which was given on Tuesday: Messrs. E. W. Barnes, J. D. Brown, H. W. Cook, B. Y. Graves, P. O. Hall, J. T. Howell, J. E. Hudson, C. H. Hind, N. W. Lynch, C. E. Moore, R. H. Parker, Fred B. Parker, J. W. Pike, J. A. Pope, L. B. Ring, H. B. THE TAR HEEL.

Vol. 12,

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1904.

No. 23.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

OAK RIDGE VERSUS CAROLINA.

The University Team Wins the Second Game of the Season by the Score 16 to 2.

The second ball game of the season, between Carolina and Oak Ridge on Thursday afternoon resulted in a score of 16 to 2 in favor of Carolina. The visitors did not play their old "stand by" as was expected, and they failed to score until Hobgood lost his control and let them walk. And so the afternoon passed slowly—and cold. The minutes follow:

Carolina goes to bat first. Hart hits a fly to left and is caught out. Cheshire hits to second and is thrown out at first. Oldham hits hot to third and is safe at first. Donnelly hits a pop fly and is out.

Grantham hits to pitcher and is thrown out at first. Taylor fouls to Worth and is caught out. Fletcher hits to Worth and is out at first.

Worth fans. Engle knocks a fly to center and is caught. Mowen walks. Mowen steals second. Noble hits to short who fumbles and throws wild over first. Mowen scores and Noble goes to second. Oldham hits to right for two bags, scoring Noble. Hart flies out to left.

Whitaker hits to Hart who throws wild and Whitaker is safe on first. Wescott flies out to left. Warren does likewise. Kizziah fans, and Whitaker is left on third bag.

Third inning: Cheshire knocks a fly to right fielder who muffs and Cheshire makes second. Oldham hits to short stop and gets to first. Cheshire goes to third. Oldham steals second. Donnelly goes to first on balls. Worth makes nice hit over short stop and Cheshire and Oldham score. Engle hits slow ball to third and makes first. Donnelly scores on a beautiful slide and Worth goes to third. Mowen bunts and Worth scores, Mowen getting to first safe. Engle goes to third. Mowen steals second. Noble strikes out. Oldham, G., fans. Hart hits to short stop and is out at first.

Holt hits to Mowen and is out at first. Sloan hits to pitcher and is out at first. Grantham walks. Grantham steals second. Taylor hits to Worth and is out at first, leaving Grantham on second.

Score: Carolina 6; Oak Ridge 0.

Fourth inning: Cheshire hits hot through third and makes first safely. Cheshire steals second. Oldham sacrifices and Cheshire goes to third. Donnelly knocks the ball over left field fence, but it proves to be a foul. Donnelly walks. Donnelly steals second. Worth hits a two bagger over right fielder scoring Cheshire and Donnelly. Engle hits to third baseman, who throws wild to first, Worth going to third, while Engle is safe at first. Engle steals second. Mowen fans. Noble hits safe to third, scoring Worth and letting Engle go to third bag. Harris goes to bat in place of Oldham, G. Harris hits to infield and is thrown out at first.

Fletcher fans. Whitaker flies out to Mowen. Wescott hits a slow ball to Harris, pitcher, and is out at first.

Score: Carolina 9; Oak Ridge 0.

Fifth inning: Hart gets base on balls. Hart steals second. Cheshire hits pop fly to pitcher, who catches it. Oldham, W., gets base on balls. Donnelly flies out to short stop. Worth knocks a beauty hit to right, going to first and scoring Hart, and Oldham goes to third base. Worth steals second. Engle flies out to center.

Warren hits to Engle and is out at first. Kizziah makes a hit between third and short stop and is safe at first. Holt hits fly to Oldham who hugs it. Sloan hits to short and Holt is forced out at second.

Score: Carolina 10; Oak Ridge 0.

Sixth inning: Mowen gets base on balls. Mowen steals second. Noble hits to short and is safe at first, Mowen going to third. Hobgood goes to bat in place of Harris. Hobgood hits over short stop and goes safe to first, Mowen scoring. Noble goes to third. Hart hits to center field, scoring Noble and Hobgood. Cheshire sacrifices and Hart goes to third. Oldham hits to second and reaches first safe, but Hart is put out in home. Donnelly flies out to center.

Grantham gets base on balls. Grantham is caught napping at first by quick work that characterizes Hobgood. Taylor walks. Taylor goes to second on passed ball by catcher. Fletcher fans. Taylor goes to third on another passed ball. Whitaker strikes out.

Seventh inning: Worth places another hit between first and second and is safe at first. Worth steals second. Engle gets a hit through third and short, scoring Worth and making first base. Engle steals second. Mowen knocks to short stop and is out at first. Noble makes a beauty base hit; gets two bags and scores Engle. Hobgood fans. Hart knocks fly to second and is caught out.

Wescott walks to first. Wescott is caught napping on first and is out at second. Warren makes a clean hit over first and is safe. Kizziah walks to first and Warren is forced to second. On passed ball the two men on bases move up a bag. Sloan walks and Warren is forced in, scoring the first run for the visitors Grantham fans. Sloan is caught napping on first.

Score: Carolina 16; Oak Ridge, 1.

Eighth inning: Cheshire hits to pitcher and is out at first. Oldham flies out to second. Donnelly knocks a liner to short stop and is out at first.

Taylor strikes out. Fletcher gets base on balls. Whitaker hits to Hobgood, who throws to Cheshire; but Cheshire, without touching runner, throws wild to first and Fletcher goes to third. Whitaker flies out to infield and is safe at first. Fletcher scores. Kizziah fans out.

Ninth inning: Worth a long fly to center and is out. Engle hits a fly to right fielder, who muffs, allows Engle to go safe to first. Mowen sacrifices and Engle goes to third. Noble drives another base hit by third bag and goes to first, Engle crossing home plate. Hobgood hits to second and is out at first.

Grantham hits to second and is out at first. Taylor hits to infield and is out. Holt fans.

Score: Carolina 16; Oak Ridge 2.

Dr. W. I. Royster Lectures.

"Civilization and Nervous Exhaustion" was the subject of Dr. W. I. Royster's lecture last Thursday night in Gerrard Hall. Dr. Royster avoided all technical terms and made an exceedingly interesting and wholesome speech.

"Civilization and nervous exhaustion," he said, "stand in the relation of cause and effect. Civilization has advanced from the simple to the complex. Progress has cost something." He defined exhaustion as lack of vigor or nerve force in the body. "The influence of the nerve force is through several ways: food, water, air, sunlight, rest and sleep; and it is used in maintaining the internal organs, the mental operations and the movement of the muscles. Every strain draws upon this supply of nerve force, and if the strain is kept up nervous exhaustion comes.

"This exhaustion rarely comes suddenly, but is usually developed gradually. Some of the symptoms of it are, cold hands and feet, blushing, unconquerable procrastination and loss of interest in life." He spoke of the evil effects of wrong living on civilization. Carelessness is not the only evil, but often the habits and customs of the people demand unphysiological practices; he thought women were more susceptible to nervous exhaustion than men.

"There are signs of improvement. Civilization is giving better methods of bodily education, and it is the duty of every one to preserve his health."

Convention of S. I. A. A.

The meeting was the largest in the history of the Association. Only four out of the twenty-two institutions composing the total membership being unrepresented. There were several changes and amendments made to the constitution—the most important of these being the following:

a. No student shall in the future be eligible to play on a college team who has played on a regularly organized baseball team which is a member of a baseball league.

b. No person who, while a college student, has played on a so-called summer baseball team, and has received even his board, railroad fare or any portion of his expenses, except when such player be a member of the team in a town where he has resided for at least one year previous and is now residing, shall be eligible to play on any team in this Association. These laws apply only to those who play on summer teams in 1904 and thereafter.

The following institutions were "black-listed" for the year 1904: University of Kentucky, Kentucky State College and South Carolina College. The first two institutions were thus dealt with on account of gross irregularities indulged in by their football team during the previous football season, and also because they played professionals on their teams. The same penalty was meted out to South Carolina College because they played ineligible men after having had due notice that they were ineligible. Please see that all your managers are advised of this action on the part of the Association, as you are prohibited by the constitution of the Association from playing any of these teams as long as they are under the ban of the Association.

It was moved and carried that the Southern Association petition for representation upon the National Rules Committee for revising and for promulgating playing rules for the coming football season.

It was decided to hold the next annual track meet at Austin, Texas, under the auspices of the University of Texas on the 3rd Saturday of May next. The same officers were re-elected for another year as follows: President, Dr. Wm. M. Dudley, Vanderbilt University; Vice-President, Prof. W. M. Riggs, Clemson College, S. C.; Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. A. L. Bondurant, University of Mississippi. Additional members of the Executive Committee: Prof. B. B. Ross, Alabama Polytechnic Institution; Prof. A. H. Patterson, University of Georgia.

The meeting was an exceedingly successful one, and during its progress attention was called to the fact that the association has been in existence for ten years and had reached a point that enabled all to see that a great work has been done for the purification and extension of Southern athletics.—The Reveille.

SINGLE COPIES, 5 CENTS.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Monday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

As each week rolls by, we become more and more impressed with the necessity for making the TAR HEEL a semi-weekly. Even during the "dull season" we have been crowded with matter and now that the base-ball season is on, we scarcely see how we are going to mention all the happenings around college. Nearly every week we are forced to hold matter over until the next issue and then the news is stale. It is true that a few times we have been pressed for copy but this was the fault mainly of the editorial board.

A semi-weekly would have all the news fresh and there would be no necessity for leaving anything out. An account of all athletic events would appear within three days at the most and there would be much more room for small local happenings. There is plenty of news to be gathered around college which we fail to print every week because of the limited force of the editorial staff. In case the TAR HEEL is made semi-weekly the number of editors would be doubled, every man assigned a definite department and required to do his duty every week. The subscription price would be increased, say to $2.00 a year, and the advertising space enlarged. We submit this idea to the General Athletic Association with the suggestion that it think over the matter.

We note that a reception was recently given to the editors of University of North Carolina Magazine. Truly, the prophet is honored more at Carolina than at Virginia. We are afraid that the editorial board of our Magazine would die of heart disease if they were given any credit for their work.—College Topics.

A school of Journalism has been started at the University of Virginia.—Tarheel.

We also note that the current issue of the Tarheel fills its front page with a list of books received in the library. Far be it from us to be unduly proud, but there are places not 250 miles from here where a school of Journalism would also be of service.—College Topics.

This shows what amusing things will happen in the best regulated families. We clipped the first item from Topics as a matter of general interest; the second about the school of Journalism was intended to go under the heading, "College Items" but was placed under the first clipping by the omniscient printer who thus made it appear that some dark and hidden satire was intended.

We acknowledge the truth of what Topics says; we had absolutely nothing else to print that week. Would that we did have a school of Journalism at our own University.

However, as a parting remark we will say that we had rather fill our front page with a list of books received in the Library than be compelled to chronicle the fact that we were shut out by a prep school in the first game of the season, using three pitchers and getting no hits.

Subscriptions Very Encouraging.

The subscriptions in Chapel Hill for the Young Men's Christian Association building up-to-date have been very encouraging. The amounts are ranging from five to one hundred dollars, payable for the most part in four installments covering about a year. Many of the notes are payable within a few months from date, while some of the subscriptions are cash.

The student body, faculty, and people of Chapel Hill are standing behind this movement. We have not yet heard of a single refusal of anyone to take some part in the erection of this building. If possible the committee doing the canvass want to finish the work this week. Many men have not yet given definite answers. Some are writing to friends endeavoring to enlist their co-operation in this movement. The amount subscribed up to date is $.....

The following is the committee who have charge of this work: Professor J. W. Gore, J. B. Cramer, Dr. T. J. Wilson, Messrs. L. R. Wilson, B. K. Lassiter, H. W. Winstead, O. B. Ross, T. G. Miller, E. S. W. Dameron, R. M. Harper, C. C. Barnhardt, W. T. Shore, A. W. Haywood, Jr., K. B. Nixon, J. A. Parker, C. O. Abernethy, W. J. Gordon, A. H. Johnston, A. H. Bahnson, C. T. Woollen, G. S. M. McNider, G. L. Paddison, E. McDonald, R. S. Stewart and R. W. Herring.

Easter Girl.

The Easter girl will certainly have a great time at Virginia this year. Here is the schedule to College Topics:

Sunday—Church and calls.
Monday—Drives, game with Yale and club german.

Tuesday—Lehigh vs. Virginia, and in the evening Eli german.

Wednesday—Pennsylvania game, and T. I. L. K. A. german.

Thursday—Another game with Pennsylvania, and the well known Beta Theta Pi german.

Friday—Walks and drives with the Dramatic Club's play "Mr. Bob" at night.

Saturday—Cornell vs. Virginia, perhaps a class fraternity goating or so—and good-bye Easter girl.

At its last meeting the Ladies' Fortnightly Club was addressed by Dr. Hume, on "Tennyson's Women."

LOCAL NOTES.

Dr. Venable spent the day, Wednesday, in Raleigh, attending to business related with the Rhodes scholarship.

At a meeting of the Junior class Tuesday afternoon, Mr. T. B. Higdon was elected captain and K. B. Nixon manager for the Junior baseball team.

Mr. N. N. Royal went down to Raleigh Friday evening.

Messrs. Graves and Brown went to Durham Friday afternoon.

In consequence of Mr. F. M. Crawford's resignation as captain of the Sophomore baseball team, Mr. H. C. Jones, Jr., was elected in his place.

Dr. Hume delivered his address given to the Southern Educational Association on "The Child and the Sunday School," last Sunday at the Baptist church.

Holt Haywood, '07, returned Tuesday morning from a trip to Northern cities where he went for the purpose of having his eyes treated.

Mr. Lawrence Holt returned Tuesday from a several day's visit at his home at Burlington.

Mr. L. A. Tomlinson is at home in Durham on account of illness.

Mr. Harvey Hines returned Monday night after an absence of several weeks on account of sickness.

Alumni.

Lieut. O. H. Dockery, Jr., 90, of the United States Army, has been ordered with his regiment to garrison the isthmus of Panama.

E. G. McIver, ex-'00, stands at the head of his class in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has been elected editor-in-chief of the college annual for this year.

Francis M. Osborne, '00, will be ordained a deacon in St. Peter's Episcopal church at Charlotte on Friday, March 25th. The ordination will be conducted by Bishop Cheshire. During the winter Mr. Osborne has been in New York pursuing a special course in the General Theological Seminary.

The following alumni have accepted invitations from Chief Ball Manager Cox to be honorary ball managers at Commencement: Messrs. H. L. Staton, J. H. Andrews, Burton Craig and Robert L. Lassiter.

Dr. Kingsbury on "Co-education."

Dr. Theodore Bryant Kingsbury, an alumnus of U. N. C., writes most entertaining articles of a literary nature for the papers and has this to say of co-education:

The educating together of girls and young men or large boys does not "pan out" satisfactorily always in the North, where the experiment has long been made. From time to time I have seen reports that were unfavorable, and when editing a newspaper sometimes I commented upon them. I have never favored this co-education mania, and believed it to be fraught with evil. In Michigan this manner of procedure was adopted, and after more than a quarter of a century it is under grave suspicion, and watchful, considerate teachers are no longer "enthused" or enamoured. It was announced last summer that at the great University of Chicago a change was contemplated. A dispatch was sent from the Chicago institution to the effect that "President Harper, of the Chicago University, and the majority of the faculty have come to the conclusion that better university work can be accomplished by a separation of the sexes. Too much 'goo goo eyes,' too much 'billing and cooing,' too much squeezing and wooing intermingle in the co-educational plan."

BOTH GAMES LOST.

LaFayette Wins Both Contests from Carolina—Varsity Lacks Ginger, While Visitors Play Very-Fast Ball.

Carolina lost both games last week to LaFayette. The trouble seems to have been a lack of interest on the part of the Varsity and a lack of support by the rooters at critical points in the game. The Carolinians did not seem to get into the game properly and there was a woeful lack of ginger and teamwork; the visitors, on the other hand, were on the jump all the time and played the game for all there was in it. Hobgood held the visitors down to 7-hits, but gave 9 free passes. Noble pitched very well, though batted freely at times. Individual work was very good in both games.

Carolina goes to bat first. Hart pops a foul to catcher and is out. Cheshire pops a foul to third and is out. Oldham fans.

Stetzer walks. Stetzer is thrown out while attempting to steal second. Hubley hits to infield and is safe at first. Irwin hits between third and second and is safe at first. Hubley going to second. Hubley steals third. Reeder gets base on balls. On passed ball Hubley crosses home plate and Irwin goes to third. Ernst hits to Cheshire and goes to first, scoring Irwin; and on Cheshire's throw to first Reeder scores. Hawk fans. Score: LaFayette 3; N. C. 0.

Second inning: Donnelly hits to shortstop and is out at first. Worth hits to third and is safe at first. Engle hits to left for two bags, advancing Worth to third. Mowen hits to center and is safe at first, scoring Worth and Engle. Noble hits to first and is safe. Hobgood hits to second and is out at first.

Johnston bunts and is safe at first. Cullen hits to Hart and is safe at first, with Johnston safe at second. Keely flies out to Donnelly. Johnston steals third. Stetzer flies to right and is safe at second, scoring Johnston and Cullen. Hubley sacrifices and Stetzer goes to third. Irwin hits safe to second and scores Stetzer. Reeder hits fly to Oldham and is out. Score: LaFayette 6; Carolina 2.

Third inning: Hart hits a hot one to pitcher and is safe at first. Cheshire bunts safe and Hart goes to second. Oldham sacrifices. Donnelly hits to short stop and Hart scores. Cheshire goes to third. Worth hits to infield and is safe at first, but Cheshire is put out in trying to steal home. Donnelly is thrown out at home.

Ernst fans; Hawk hits to Mowen, who fumbles and runner is safe at first. Johnston walks. Cullen bunts and is safe at first. Johnston goes to second and Cullen to third. Keely fans. Stetzer walks and this forces Johnston in. Hubley hits to Cheshire and is out at first. Score: Carolina 3; LaFayette 7.

Fourth inning: Engle gets base on balls. Mowen bunts and is safe at first, Engle going to second. Noble bunts to pitcher who throws wild to first, and Noble is safe at second, Engle scoring. Hobgood hits to third and is safe at first, but Mowen is put out in attempting to make home. Hart hits through short stop for one bag, scoring Noble and Hobgood. Cheshire hits to first and is safe, with Worth on third and Hart on second. Oldham hits to infield and Hart is out on third. Donnelly hits to center and Cheshire is thrown out in home.

Irwin walks. Hobgood lacks control. Reeder bunts and is out at first. Ernst gets a free pass. Irwin steals third. Hawk walks. Johnston makes a base hit scoring two runs. Cullen hits to Donnelly, scoring another run. Cullen is out in attempting to steal second, and Johnston is out at home. Score: LaFayette 10; Carolina 6.

Fifth inning: Worth fans. Engle walks. Mowen is hit and walks to first, Engle going to second. Noble flies out to center. Hobgood flies out to left.

Keely pops a foul to Noble and is out. Stetzer hits to Hart and is out at first. Hubley follows suit. Score LaFayette 10; Carolina 6.

Sixth inning: Hart fans. Cheshire flies out to center. Oldham gets a base hit over second, but on trying to steal second is out.

Irwin fans. Reeder and Ernst both get free passes to first. Hawk gets a base hit in right, field, scoring Reeder. Johnston fans. Cullen flies out to Oldham. Score: LaFayette 11; Carolina 6.

Seventh inning: Donnelly gets an easy base hit to center. Worth hits to second and is out at first. Donnelly goes to second. Engle flies out to center, but Donnelly goes to third. Mowen pops fly to short stop and is out.

Keely knocks to Mowen and is out. Stetzer fans. Hubley hits to Worth and is out at first.

Noble fans. Hobgood flies out to center. Hart is safe at first. Irwin hits to Worth and is out at first. Reeder pops a fly to Mowen and is out. Ernst pops foul to Worth and is out.

Ninth inning: Oldham pops a foul to catcher and is out. Donnelly hits to pitcher, who fumbles and Donnelly is safe at first. Worth hits to second and is safe at first, but Donnelly is out at second. Engle is hit by pitcher so walks to first. Mowen gets a three base hit in center scoring Engle and Worth. Noble hits to third and is out at first. Score: Lafayette 11; Carolina 8.

Summary: Carolina—Bases stolen, 1; two base hits, Engle; three base hits, Mowen; bases on balls off Johnston, 3; hit by pitched ball, 2; struck out by Johnston, 3; wild pitches by Hobgood 2. Passed balls, Noble 1.

Next Friday night our two debaters meet the representatives from Georgia. This is the only debate we have this year and therefore there should be all the more interest in it. Georgia has always been a most worthy antagonist and this year she has sent up two of her very best men who will try to carry off the first victory in the new series. There has been very little interest shown so far; the preliminary contacts have been poorly attended and small attention paid to our representatives, but now the time has come for us to get behind our debaters just as enthusiastically as we support a winning athletic team. Our representatives are worthy men and they deserve the most whole-souled support from the student body. Let us show our interest by packing the hall and giving our undivided attention to what is said on both sides.

To our debaters we will say that we have the utmost confidence in them and expect them to acquit themselves like true sons of Carolina. The student body can show its interest; it remains with them to do the rest.

Dr. Alderman Talks.

"I believe that the South has something precious and distinctive in manhood and character to contribute to American life. Out of its travail and sorrow something fine must come of its own likeness and pattern—the old refined gold that disaster could not shake nor victory spoil, touched by freer, wider forces into subtler, finer form. There will be the old spirit which did not know how to compromise, and which did know how to die for a faith and a theory; and there will be a new spirit, which looks at life with wide clear, steady eyes, which thinks with its brain and not with its heart, which reasons from date and not from impulse or emotions. And so, in the sweet justice of God, when the nation shall need to be buttressed against tempest and storm, when strange new forces have wrought some tangle of injustice and inequality, the whole people may turn hither for succor as they once turned to a simple Virginia planter to free them from a stubborn king and a stupid parliament across the seas."—Dr. Alderman's last Founders' Day speech at Tulane.

DR. HENDERSON SPEAKS.

Lecture on Henrik Ibsen a Scholarly One and Much Enjoyed.

One of the most scholarly lectures in the faculty lecture series was that by Dr. Archibald Henderson last Thursday night on Henrik Ibsen. It showed careful study of that dramatist and a thorough knowledge of his work. The speaker took a subject that but few of his hearers knew anything of and made it interesting to every one. All of them will have a new interest in Ibsen.

The following is an outline of the lecture:

If the great impressionist critic, M. Anatole France, were here tonight to address you, he would probably say, "Ladies and Gentlemen, I am about to speak to you of myself a propos of Henrik Ibsen—by no means a bad opportunity." I am not an impressionist critic; my ideal is therefore not that of M. France. I wish to express myself only that there may the more clearly appear before you the character, art and tendency of the greatest dramatist of our age, the greatest Teutonic dramatist since Shakspeare—a poet who is at once a moralist, a seer and a reformer.

Henrik Ibsen's life of seventy-six years was reviewed from his birth, and the character of the poet was shown to be in large measure the product of three great deterministic forces—of heredity, of environment and of the spirit of the age.

So far as is known, Ibsen has not a drop of Norwegian blood in his veins, yet he is of most complicated ancestry. Scottish-Teutonic-Dane is a just and accurate characterization of him from the standpoint of heredity, and this complicated ancestry, together with his long foreign residence, serves in some measure to explain the cosmopolitanism of his genius.

Shy, taciturn and uncommunicative by nature, he was confirmed in these tendencies by the circumstances of his early childhood. His parents were very poor, and so he was compelled for years to work in an apothecary's shop. When he was appointed "theatrical director" at Bergen and afterwards at Christiania, he wrote plays to meet the popular demand for romance and his own demand for bread. These earlier efforts were mediocre with the exception of his fine historical drama, "The Pretender." He turns in bitterness now to modern life and writes a satiric and misanthropic play, "The Comedy of Love." Because of this play, the Norwegian people made home so unbearable for him that he turned his back upon his native land and sought a new home in the Eternal City.

The second epoch of Ibsen's literary career extends over the period during which he wrote "The Comedy of Love," "Brand," "Peer Gynt" and "Emperor and Galilean." The scenes of the first three are laid in Norway, while the last is a noteworthy treatment of Julian the Apostate. In this period, Ibsen constructs and perfects his intellectual analysis of idealism.

The age was now beginning to make its impress upon him, he was

Mr. J. W. Turrentine, S. M. '02, associate professor of Chemistry at Lafayette University, spent several days on the Hill this week. Several from Durham were here Friday afternoon to witness the game with Lafayette.

Past Week's Work.

The University students who are canvassing for the Young Men's Christian Association building have met with remarkable success. In one week they have secured two thousand dollars in subscriptions from the faculty, students and townspeople. Many of the subscribers have made sacrifices that they might have a part in the erection of this building which is destined to be a power for good in our University life. One thousand dollars more is needed to complete the edifice. When this amount is subscribed, an additional thousand dollars will be available to the committee through the generosity of an unknown friend. Mr. W. D. Weatherford, who addressed our student body last fall secured this gift for our college. This gift will enable the committee to furnish the building handsomely. The soliciting committee is confident that the necessary one thousand dollars will be secured this week, as every student in college has a desire to encourage this University movement.

Summer School.

The next session of the University summer school will begin June 13th and continue until July 8th. The prospects for a successful session are bright. The teaching force has been selected from the University faculty and from the faculties of about a dozen other prominent Educational institutions. There will be some thirty specialists on the regular teaching staff, and besides these a number of special lectures.

Do You Want to Make Money?

You can easily earn at your home during your vacation enough money to take you through college next session. No canvassing. Clean lighted business. If you expect to work at all, it will pay you to investigate this proposition. In writing give age and home address. For full particulars, address Box 28, Charlottesville, Va.

soon to make his impress upon the age. The main currents of modern thought swept over him and carried him along with them. Darwin, Spencer, Marx, George Eliot, John Stuart Mill and Dumas, fils were enthusing the modern world by their hypotheses, declarations and discoveries. Ibsen concretely mirrors the changed face of society in his social dramas of modern life.

In "A Doll's House," Ibsen betrays his deep interest in the Feministic movement. He becomes the champion of Woman. He pledges himself to work with all his strength to liberate Woman from the fetters of a tyrannic society. In "Ghosts," he shows the obverse picture to that presented in "A Doll's House," and poses the question, "Is it a woman's duty to live with a husband who is a debauchee of the worst type?" Both plays are interrogative in character. All his subsequent plays are consistent attacks upon the false and illuding ideals of modern society. Emerson was "an iconoclast without a hammer, who took down our idols so tenderly that it seemed like an act of worship." Not so with Ibsen; his hammer is always in evidence. He searches out the most hidden evils of our modern life and pours upon them the corrosive acid of his mordant sarcasm.

One by one, Ibsen's great social dramas were taken up, discussed and their meaning made clear. "The Pillars of Society," "The League of Youth," "An Enemy of the People," "The Wild Duck," "Rosmersholm," "The Lady from the Sea," "Hedda Gabler," "The Master Builder," "Little Eyolf," "John Gabriel Barkman" and "When We Dead Awaken" were all briefly appreciated.

All these things—heredity, environment, the spirit of the age and the dramas themselves, the concrete expressions of Ibsen's genius—point toward Ibsen and ask, "Is Ibsen a great artist, a great moralist, a great dramatist?" These three phases of Ibsen's genius were then discussed: his artistry, his moral system and the philosophy of his drama.

From the standpoint of art, Ibsen's drama was compared to the Greek drama of Sophocles, Aeschylus and Euripides, with the Gothic drama of Shakspeare and the Human Comedy of Balzac. Ibsen's social dramas were found to excel all these monuments of literature in certain particulars—in stern logic, ethical import and moral significance.

Ibsen's moral system was next taken up and it was shown that Ibsen's philosophy, as revealed in his drama, is a profound belief in the evolution of ideals. In Ibsen's view, "The ideal is dead, long live the ideal!" is the epitome of all human progress. Ibsen rests his hope in the evolution of ideals, and to the world he has shown the sanity of pessimism.

The inspiration behind all Ibsen's dramas is the modern spirit of humanitarianism. He recognized the moral quality of all human experience, and has taught us in the school of our own life.

Ibsen is a great realist and a great idealist, a great pessimist and a great optimist. Some day the world will pay homage to Henrik Ibsen, because since he has lived, literature has thrilled with a new joy—the passion for a more just, more beautiful, more perfect social order.

CAROLINA WINS DEBATE.

North Carolina, After an Interesting and Spirited Intellectual Struggle, Defeats the University of Georgia.

On Friday night Gerrard Hall was filled to its capacity with anxious Tar Heels, eager to know the outcome of a contest that was to decide the debating supremacy between two of the South's greatest universities. Both Georgia and Carolina had had wonderful success in defeating other Southern colleges, but so far had divided honors. This seventh annual debate was to break the tie. Both sides were ably represented, Carolina by Messrs. I. C. Wright and A. H. Johnston, and Georgia by Messrs. A. G. Golucke and W. W. Patterson. The query for debate was: Resolved, That labor unions are inimical to our industrial development. Carolina had the affirmative. The debate was presided over by Judge James C. MacRae, with Mr. J. W. Winborne acting as secretary. The judges were Rev. W. T. D. Moss, of Chapel Hill; Mr. Joseph G. Brown, of Raleigh; and Mr. J. Van Lindley, of Greensboro. After the debate a reception was given the speakers, officers and judges by Dr. Venable. The victory of Carolina may be attributed to the superior development of her speakers' argument. The two speeches fitted together perfectly and formed one systematic, organic whole. From the time Wright began his exposition of the law of relativity, which he laid down as the law of progress, to the time when Johnston finished showing the effects of unionism on our industries, the argument for the affirmative showed but one idea; that labor unions were not conforming to the universal law that develops industries. The speeches of the Georgians showed careful study and a wide knowledge of the subjects. They advanced many strong points, and in a graceful way. The speakers were such as any university might be proud of. Their only faults were a rather too frequent use of statistics and a want of an organic argument.

It is impossible for us to give the speeches in full, so we can print but an outline of the argument.

Mr. Wright, first speaker for Carolina on the affirmative spoke in substance as follows:

This age is the reign of law. Every action and reaction in the animate or inanimate world is the result of some absolute law. Modern knowledge has laid down laws for everything, and among others it has established relativity as the universal law of progress; that every individual is a part of a greater unit, and for progress must work not selfishly but for the good of that unit. This unselfishness, this respect for one's fellowmen's rights is the source of all morality, the basis of all civilization and government. For a government is but the outward manifestation of this inner unity which binds the citizens of a nation together. And for progress every part of government must work for the common good. And it is this law of progress that has brought us as a nation to what we are. It is the spirit of all our internal improvements. The individual must work for the common good; and where he refuses, the judiciary forces him to recognize the rights of others. At this point he gave illustrations to establish his argument, the law of eminent domain and others.

Continuing, Mr. Wright said that our government has carried this law into our business life as well. This is shown by our charter regulations, that force every corporation to recognize the rights of others, and to work in harmony with this law of progress. And when they disregard this law the government takes their charter away—says they can not even exist. But the labor unions will not recognize the rights of others, nor will they be made responsible by a charter. They even have before Congress an Anti-Injunction bill, trying to remove the last restraint we have upon them. And warmly concluding this part, Mr. Wright said: "They defy this law of industrial progress."

Turning to a slightly different phase of the question, he continued. Our industries are a matter of business, and all business is production. But production is dependent upon consumption, and so, for progress the agents of production must recognize the rights of each other, and also of their consuming public. Industrial development is the great unit, and if we are to have progress every part must put aside selfishness and work for the good of that unit. True it is the laborer's duty to develop themselves, but it is more so their duty to respect the rights of others. And if the unions do not do this, and here he referred to his colleague, saying that he would show that they didn't, then according to this universal law of progress they are inimical to our industrial development.

Mr. Golucke, for Georgia, spoke first for the negative. He began by giving a practical illustration of what Industrial Development was. He analyzed it into two factors: Capital and Labor, and subdivided capital into the employer, machinery used in production and the processes used in production.

He said to develop an industry either the factor capital, as he analyzed it, or the factor labor, should be increased in efficiency.

He next showed that labor unions had appeared in only three of the great branches of our industry—manufacturing, mining and transportation. He said that this explained the reason why about 18 per cent of the entire class of laborers are members of unions; as a matter of fact in those trades that are unionized between 80 per cent and 90 per cent of the laborers employed are members of unions.

He said that as a rule employers in those trades in which unions have appeared, are kindly disposed toward their work people; but competition with their brother employers progressively demanded that they lower their cost of production. This they might do by increasing the efficiency of the machinery used, or by securing a more efficient process of production, or by exacting more work from the laborers for less pay.

The supply of labor is greater than the demand. This forces the laborer into a dependent position and he is forced to accept whatever terms or conditions that the employer may offer. He then scated the negative's interpretation of the question as follows: "In these three great branches there can be no perfectly healthy condition for the development of our industries, because of the employer's necessity to lower the cost of production and the laborers' necessity to accept whatever terms the employer offers. Now if labor unions result permanently in less healthy conditions than would exist if there were no unions, then they are inimical and should be condemned. On the other hand, if labor unions result permanently in more healthy conditions for the increasing of our industrial efficiency than would exist if there were no unions, then unions are not inimical, but are a positive benefit and should be approved.

He quoted Prof. Ely, of the University of Wisconsin, the report of the Industrial Commission, Chairman Interstate Commerce Commission, and writers in magazines, all at great length, showing the unhealthy condition before labor organized.

He concluded his speech by showing the effect of these conditions on our industrial development.

Mr. Johnston, second speaker for Carolina for the affirmative, first surveyed the ground covered by Mr. Wright and then proceeded to show that the labor unions of today do not act in accordance with this universal law of all progress. On the contrary "they manifest a spirit of caste; they disregard the rights of all agents of production and make unionism paramount to industry." He then showed what the rights are upon which industry depends, and showed that the unions disregard all of them. "Society for the sake of industry has granted to the employers and laborers certain fundamental rights upon which industry depends. Society declares that every employer has a right to hire whom he pleases when they seek employment; that he has a right to buy his material where he pleases. And above all that he has a right to possess his property and to use it in any legitimate way."

To the laborer society grants the right of personal security, which includes the right to work undisturbed. It grants him the right to work, where employed, subject only to the rules which the welfare of society may require.

The speaker then showed by the acts of the union, by statistics and by the Industrial Commission that all these rights are disregarded by the unions. He reached the logical conclusion that unions from their very nature set themselves in opposition to the welfare of industry.

He then noticed union effects on certain industries. He showed that our ship building industry and the steel industry have both suffered severely by unions and drew a practical lesson from the coal strike. "It may have benefited the laborer, but to pay for his advance we lost the supply of coal to English coaling stations throughout the Atlantic, $125,000,000 was wrung from an innocent and suffering public, want and hunger threatened every home and destruction stared every industry in the face." And yet the unions are not satisfied.

He then made a hasty but graphic summary of the off-argument, and concluded by saying: "In the face of such effects the labor union cannot be listed among the friends of industrial development."

Mr. Patterson, for Georgia, second speaker on the negative, dealt with the permanent effect of labor unions upon our producing factors—Capital and Labor. Unions have increased the efficiency of those factors. Unions have increased the efficiency of capital by bringing about first, the natural selection of the most efficient employers; second, the use of new machinery and new processes of manufacture; third, a strong industrial organization; fourth, the natural selection of the most efficient laborers. Unions have increased the efficiency of labor by bettering the condition of laborers generally. This raising of the standard life of the laboring classes rests upon the industrial development in increasing their efficiency and wants. This results in increased efficiency and production on the part of capital. Unions have better laborers economically. Unions have raised wages. This is especially seen in the bituminous coal mining industry, and in the clothing trades increased wages have brought increased output, but have not brought higher priced articles. Unions have better laborers physically. They have shortened the work day and have thereby lengthened trade life. The eight hour law, brought about by unions, has increased efficiency and output. This is especially seen in the coal mines. Unions have done away with the sweat shop system, and have brought safe and sanitary conditions of employment.

Unions have better laborers so-

The debate last Friday night showed very plainly the efficiency of our system of training debaters. Nine debates won out of twelve held with three different colleges speaks more plainly of our methods than many words, and a long discussion on the subject is not necessary here. We acknowledge no superior in the South when it comes to debating.

Our representatives made an ideal team and they have the thanks of the entire college for the able way in which they sustained the honor and reputation of old U. N. C.

The visitors were true Georgians, able men and courteous gentlemen. We were glad to have them with us and we trust that the friendship now existing between the two Universities shall grow with time.

We trust that our baseball team will not listen to the voice of the croaker now when so much depends on our winning the rest of the games we have. There are some men around college to whom it seems a positive pleasure when we meet defeat, and satirical remarks are all they contribute towards the support of the team. We know that we have the material for a great team whether it develops this year or not, and the thinking part of the students is with it.

Dr. Smith delivered an address March 27 before the Presbyterian congregations of Richmond, Va., on the "Publication Department of the Southern Presbyterian Church." The Committee of Publication is publishing the address and will send a copy to every minister in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Two Games Lost.

Well, we have lost two more games, and feel that a detailed report is neither necessary nor desired. We have no complaint to make on the work of our team with Maryland. They put up an excellent game against a seasoned, two-thirds professional team. The score in the Davidson game is explained by inability to hit Vail, coupled with errors at the wrong time. However, let's put the memory of these games aside and go in now to win. Gloomy predictions are out of place right now. We need to back up the team.

cially. They have brought about Saturday half holidays and the eight hour work day. This has given laborers more leisure and so has brought about an opportunity for mingling with one another. This has brought more contentment and more efficiency.

The standard of morality has been raised by labor unions.

Total abstinence is the motto of practically all of the leading unions.

Intemperance is the greatest of evils in diminishing the efficiency of workingmen. Unions in making temperate laborers have made them more efficient. The spirit of mutual assistance and support has been brought about by unions. These unions in aiding workmen when in need have decreased their interruptions of work, and so have brought increased efficiency.

Unions have brought educational benefit, which has made skilled workmen of otherwise ignorant laborers. Unions have done away with child labor. Unions have been the chief cause that has brought about a public school system. Education has come from the union shop. The fact that labor unions have resulted in a more healthy condition for the development of our producing factors, is shown by the testimony of the leading employers of today. He quoted from the Industrial Commission; the president of the Builder's League, of New York City; the president of the Stafford Cotton Mills, of Fall River, Mass., the president of the Midway Steel Company, of Philadelphia, and others.

Wright, for Carolina, in his rejoinder, summed up the argument of his opponents by saying that they had discussed the question from the labor unions point of view, barely touching the argument of the affirmative. He read from the Industrial Commission that the fundamental and paramount principles upon which labor unions claim to be founded showed that their rights alone were the sole aim of their organization. He stated that in America there were ten million laborers, and two million were members of labor unions, while there were eight million non-union men.

Mr. Golucke, in rejoinder said: The affirmative must show that labor unions have decreased output in the branches of industry in which union men have been employed. Everybody is subject to mistakes, and surely labor unions are not free. He showed the improved and prosperous condition of the country, giving for the reason the organization of labor. He dwelt upon the fact that union men were turning out more finished products than non-union men, hence the value of labor unions.
